Jealous Porto Rican Plies Razor

Beer and Pigsfeet Lead to Wounding of Colored Gentleman Who Bought the Dainty Treat.

James Garrett Jr., a gigantic negro, described how his left arm was almost amputated by a razor in the hand of Filisano Torres, a consumptive-appearing Porto Rican. It was in the Pacific street dance hall owned and managed by Dan Lopez that the trouble began and the woman at the bottom of it was the renowned Anastasia Johnson.

"Me an' de lady wuz eatin' pigsfeet an' drinkin' beer at de bah," said Mr. Garrett to Police Judge Mogan, "wen dis yah defendand butted in between us and poked his fist inter my schooner, 'wich was more'n half full. I expostulated, ob cohsen, an' den he sez, sez he, 'I'll slice yer a bit,' an' wif dat he exhibits a razzah. 'Dat yah weapon am foolish,' I sez, 'I doan skeer me a mite,' I sez. 'Ise ain't trubbilin' about yo' cuttler, man,' I sez, sez I, 'but please keep yo' han's out ob my beer or sunfn ez goin' ter be stashed an' bof ob us'll be in it.' Wif dat de flo' walker comes an' advises me ter git out, as de Porto Ricans outnubamed me. 'You git out,' Dan sez, sez he, 'an' I'll hove de do' till yer gits away.' Den I bids de lady good night an' promulcates keersless-like ter de side-walk. Well, sah, Ise no sooner out dar den de do' am busted open an' out rushes de Porto Ricans. Dey all comes at me at once, wif dis yah defendand in de lead. He hez de razzah in his han' an' starts ter carve right away. De fist slugs cuts de front ob my coat. De secon' cut gits me in de left arm. I pulls a pocketknife an' tries ter proteckt myself an' am havin' a lively time wen de policemen rescues me."

Case continued till to-morrow, when the defense will try to show that prior to Mr. Garrett's voluntary retirement from the dance hall he was twice ejected by Mr. Lopez for disorderly conduct.

Henry Young and his wife positively identified Charles Coulter as the man who robbed the former of a diamond pin last Sunday afternoon on a Valencia street car and Frank Gomes and Nathan Yineberg as positively swore that at the time of the alleged robbery Coulter was in San Jose.

Judge Cabanis continued the case till next Tuesday in order to give himself time to ponder over the direct conflict of testimony. The Youngs testified that Coulter stole the pin about 3 o'clock p. m. and Gomes and Yineberg averred that Coulter was seen by them in the Garden City shortly after 2 o'clock p. m. on the same day. Gomes keeps a lodging-house and Yineberg is an old resident of San Jose.

wharf when the posse found them, and they stated that they fell asleep while awaiting the arrival from Halfmoon Bay of the schooner Maggie, laden with vegetables, which they hoped to have the pleasure and profit of conveying ashore. Case dismissed.

From underneath a pile of lumber on the Spear street wharf the human ferrets dragged Charles Hartman, a comparatively decent appearing man, and they did not believe his story that he was a stranger in the city and had sought shelter there because he had no means of hiring a lodging.

"My only crime is poverty," he said to Judge Mogan. "It was to get shelter from the rain that I crept under the lumber and tried to sleep. I had nowhere else to go, for I am a stranger in San Francisco and have no money. If it is an offense to be dead broke and homeless I am guilty. But that I am neither a loafer nor a thief I can prove."

He did prove it by showing certificates that he worked as a laborer until sickness incapacitated him for toil, and he was forced to spend his savings for medical service. Then the prosecuting policeman sarcastically remarked that for a stranger in the city the defendant showed surprising aptitude in finding a sleeping place much frequented by vagrants.

"Your sarcasm is uncalled for," said the Judge to the officer. "If this man were versed in the ways of the city's vagrants he would probably have selected a more desirable shelter from the storm than was afforded him by a lot of loose planks. He has proved that he is not a professional vagabond, and as this court does not regard either his unavoidable illness or resultant poverty as a crime he is discharged. Every one cannot escape adversity, you know, or be a policeman."

They found Neil Gilman nestled amid a heap of scrap iron upon the Folsom street wharf, and he was so drunk that he did not know the rain was drenching him. He will be sentenced to-morrow.

May Boyce said that the whisky she drank was imbued for medicinal purposes, and it must have been the sudden fall of the barometer that affected her, so she did not drink enough of the liquor to make her as helpless as she was when Patrolman Skelly found her clinging to a Fourth street lamp post at 2 o'clock a. m. yesterday. As for proving good character, she would Merchants' Association Holds There Is Serious Doubt as to Legality of Proceeding.

The Merchants' Association yesterday filed a communication with the Board of Supervisors to the effect that it would be ill advised to present proposed charter amendments at the general election of November 8, 1904, as there is a serious question as to the legality of any amendment proposed to be voted upon at the date mentioned. The association states that it has been advised that no amendment to the charter can be safely proposed prior to the 13th inst. nor submitted to a vote of the people until after December 4 next, in accordance with the section of the constitution bearing on the subject.

ISMAR.

A CLOSE CALL

But Was Saved by Timely Aid of Ismar.

The case of Miss Annie L. Garrine is one of the most remarkable in Ismar's experience and fully demonstrates her marvelous power as a healer. The following letter from Miss Garrine clearly explains the case:

Los Angeles, Sept. 27, 1904. Dear Madame Ismar: I am so thankful to you for that you have done for me, and I write this to express my gratitude. A year ago I came to California from Minnesota under the impression that I was in the clutches of consumption. Three reputable physicians had pronounced my case hopeless as to treatment and advised me to travel. After coming to Los Angeles I heard of some of your great cures. I therefore made a trip to San Francisco and subjected myself to your skill, with the result that I am now entirely well. I desire that you publish this testimonial as an aid to other sufferers. With heartfelt thanks, I am yours, ANNIE L. GARRINE.

It seems almost incredible, but there are many other cases, even here in San Francisco, that corroborate the above and prove Ismar's ability as a healer of diseases. Many of the cases cured by her were pronounced incurable. Don't despair, if you are a sufferer, but see Ismar, and if you are as curable she has cured others.

As a seeress she is equally great. Her remarkable insight into the future—in the depicting and describing of events, easily demonstrates her most remarkable and accurate seeress of modern times. She is known in all civilized countries.

If you would know your future, Ismar will correctly delineate it to you. Write her if you can't call. Three questions answered for $1. Full life reading $5. Coulter has served two terms in San Quentin and several months ago was arrested for grand larceny. He was convicted and sentenced to four years by Superior Judge Lawlor, but appealed to the Supreme court and was released on bail. The highest tribunal sustained the lower court, but Coulter did not give himself up. He was arrested at San Jose last Tuesday for the Young robbery. Even if his alibi should stick he will be held by the Sheriff until Judge Lawlor again sentences him.

James Ryan, shoemaker at Sixth and Natoma streets, is such a "cut-up" when intoxicated that his neighbors never think of going to witness a funny stage performance when he is on a spree. He furnishes them with original amusement, and doesn't tax them a cent for it. One of his side-splitting capers is to alarm the crews and passengers of passing street cars by pretending to cast himself under the vehicles, eluding the wheels by the narrowest possible margin compatible with bodily safety. This specialty never fails to win tremendous applause. Its attractiveness is enhanced by the fact that the performer has only one foot. His crippled condition tends to make his seemingly miraculous escape from death all the more thrilling, because it makes his ability to escape appear impossible.

Having performed his street car act last Friday evening until the initiated spectators were weakened by laughter and unable to applaud him any more, Mr. Ryan varied his performance by arming himself with a shoe-stretcher and pursuing a Japanese boy who happened to fall athwart his line of vision. The little brown lad was running for his life and his pursuer was uttering demoniac yells and brandishing his weapon when a policeman stopped the chase by arresting the charger and coldly declining to enter into the spirit of the joke. Judge Mogan also refused to regard the incident as humorous when it was explained to him by Mr. Ryan and several appreciative witnesses, and the consequence is that Mr. Ryan awaits sentence for disturbing the peace.

Louis Perino and Gustave Swant, 17-year-old lads, were sentenced to six months' imprisonment by Judge Mogan after they had pleaded guilty to the charge of stealing liquors from a Pacific street saloon. They were booked for grand larceny, and it was in accordance with the Judge's suggestion that they pleaded guilty of petty larceny. On account of their youth his Honor did not want to send them to the penitentiary via the Superior Court.

Henry C. Coleh, 18 years of age, who had confessed that he robbed telephone cash boxes, but begged for mercy. His mother also tearfully appealed for leniency and offered to pay any fine the court might impose. The youth was fined $100 and the woman promptly handed the sum to the clerk of Judge Mogan's tribunal.

While the rainstorm was raging night before last a posse of policemen toured the wharves and scooped in all vagrants whom they found under shelter. Five chronic vagabonds were picked up on the hay wharf, at the foot of Third street, and each of them explained that he was a longshore laborer awaiting cessation of the storm and turning of the tide so that he could resume work on some ship—name of vessel not remembered—which he had been helping to unload the previous day. They were given twenty-four hours' reprieve by Judge Mogan.

SAYS CHARTER IS VIOLATED

Fire Commission Claims Supervisors Are to Blame for Deficit in Pension Coin

The fact that there is a deficit in the Firemen's Pension Fund which has prevented the payment of the pensions for June is causing considerable unfavorable comment among those interested. It is claimed on alleged legal grounds that the Board of Supervisors in neglecting to provide a sufficient appropriation yearly to pay the pensions has repeatedly violated the charter, which makes it mandatory upon the board to make the necessary provision for the purpose. Section 2 chapter 7 of the charter, under the caption of "Firemen's Relief Fund," reads as follows:

"There shall be annually levied, collected and apportioned to the Firemen's Relief Fund a tax sufficient to meet and pay all demands upon said fund for the purposes set out in this chapter."

The members of the Board of Fire Pension Fund Commissioners charge the Supervisors with having regularly, every year since the charter went into effect, failed to allow enough money to pay the pensions, despite the plain provisions of the charter on the subject. It is said that in accordance with the charter provisions the Pension Commissioners in June, 1903, asked the Supervisors to appropriate $28,000 for pensions, but $19,000 only was allowed for 1903-1904. This resulted in a deficit of more than $4000, and for a time it was thought that the pensions for May and June would not be paid. The Fire Commission, however, came to the assistance of the pensioners and contributed a sum saved in the salary account to pay the May pensions. Section 7 of the charter mentioned provides as follows:

"The Pension Commissioners shall make up an estimate of the amount required to pay all demands on the Firemen's Relief Fund for the succeeding fiscal year and certify the same to the Supervisors in connection with and as part of the annual appropriation of the Fire Department."

Such an estimate has been regularly filed with the Supervisors, but has been invariably cut down, resulting in a deficit. The only expense attached to the matter is the payment of $50 monthly for a secretary and for printing. Should there be a surplus in the fund it would be carried over to the appropriation for the following year. The Commissioners have about $500 available to pay the June pensions, but are awaiting the pleasure of the Supervisors' Finance Committee to make up the balance of about $1400.

Sentenced for Burglary.

John Utwood was sentenced by Judge Lawlor yesterday to serve eighteen months in San Quentin on a charge of burglary. He was employed as an elevator man at the Roycroft Hotel, Turk and Leavenworth streets, and stole several articles of jewelry from the room of Mrs. Fannie Mounsey on July 21. He fled to Los Angeles, where he was arrested. The Judge made the sentence light in view of the defendant's previous good character, but in passing sentence he commented upon the increasing number of cases of that character, men and boys obtaining employment on elevators in hotels with the sole object of thieving.
