PRESIDENT WHEELER SUSPENDS HALE.

Editor of Students' Daily Suffers for Wielding a Sarcastic Pen.

Committee May Report on Others

WILLIAM THOMAS HALE

Berkeley Office San Francisco Call, 2148 Center street, Nov. 23. The ax which has hung over the heads of various members of the senior class at the university, who are credited with responsibility for the riot on the campus a few weeks ago, fell today and found a victim in William T. Hale, one of the most prominent men in the university.

Hale is editor of the Daily Californian, a student publication which printed the news of university affairs and is controlled and edited by collegians. The editorial policy of Hale, with regard to the dispute between Captain Nance, military instructor at the university, and the senior class which objected strenuously to Nance's marching orders, is responsible for the young editor's suspension. The students' affairs committee considered his case a week ago, summoned him to explain his conduct, heard his explanations and defense and then recommended his suspension for a time that equaled a college year.

The fate of fourteen other seniors still hangs in the balance, forty-eight of the sixty-three who were originally in disgrace having been placed on probation by order of President Wheeler yesterday on Captain Nance's recommendation. Each of the fourteen anxiously awaits news of the action to be taken in his particular case. President Wheeler called Hale into his office shortly before noon and informed him of his fate. Later the president said: "Mr. Hale is suspended upon the recommendation of the students' affairs committee, which considered that his two editorials preceding the disturbance on the campus were partly responsible for the trouble."

Professor W. A. Satchell of the students' affairs committee which convicted Hale, was on the campus during the riot and tried to preserve order. Professor Satchell, at Hale's hearing, cited Hale's editorial in which he referred to the military class as a military kindergarten and to Captain Nance as a "schoolmaster," informing Hale that the entire tone of his editorials had encouraged the seniors to rebel as they did. Hale talked a few days ago of carrying the cases of classmates who might be dismissed from college as a sequel to the riot to the academic senate and appealing to that court of last resort. He said to-day, however, that he has no complaint to make and will not contest the action of the university authorities. He resides at San Diego and will leave at once for his home. His place as editor of the Daily Californian will be taken temporarily by Joseph Loeb, now managing editor of the publication.

PLAN TO CONSTRUCT IMMENSE RESERVOIR Berkeley Citizens Propose Scheme to Supply College Town With Protection From Fire. BERKELEY, Nov. 23.—At a meeting of the Ashby Improvement Club last night the plan of having an immense reservoir in the hills back of the university, into which salt water from the bay would be pumped, was given indorsement and steps will be taken to secure concerted action by all the improvement clubs of Berkeley to have the project carried out. The water in the reservoir would be pumped through a system of pipes owned by the city and used for fire protection, according to the plans of those who have suggested the idea.

TERRACES ARE TO SAY THANKS

Scientist of University Delves Into Mysteries of the Orleans Basin

OPINION OF HERSHEY

Millions of Years Taken to Bring About Natural Phenomena in California

Berkeley Office San Francisco Call, 2148 Center Street, Nov. 23.

After delving deep into the secrets of the river terraces of the Orleans Basin in California, Oscar Hershey of the geological department of the university has put the results of his investigation in a lengthy and exhaustive bulletin issued to-day from the press of the university. Mr. Hershey says of the river terraces problem:

During the first few years of my residence in California the river terraces did not appear to present any interesting problems, but the deeper I delve into their history the more fascinating grows the study. They are important because they indicate orogenic disturbances and changes of climate, and because of them we will be furnished the best chronometer of glacial events. It is possible that they may yield facts bearing strongly on the cause of the great Quaternary glaciations. They furnish the basis for the classification of Quaternary land faunas. Further, the relics of early man in California may be referred to the different terraces and thus some idea gained of their relative ages. So far, in the Orleans Basin, we have failed to secure authentic evidence of the presence of man until after the completion of the 45-foot terrace.

Mr. Hershey's bulletin outlines the bedrock geology and the geomorphology of the region, and includes a detailed description of the various terrace remnants with a summary of their characteristic features and differences. Concerning the age of the terraces, Mr. Hershey says:

I arbitrarily reduce the assigned age of the highest terrace to 250,000 years. The portion of the Sierran Canyon above the 550-foot terrace is more than three times as deep as that below, several times as wide, and has characteristics indicating a much greater age. It is undoubtedly conservative to assign it a period of erosion not more than three times as great as the age of the highest terrace, or 750,000 years. This yields a total age for the Sierran Canyon of 1,000,000 years, and that figure also represents my idea of the probable length of the Sierran Canyon.

The Sherwood Valley has the appearance of being at least five times as old as the Sierran Canyon, or 5,000,000 years. The geologists who are working the Pacific Coast country are inclined to assign much longer periods to the Sierran and the Sherwood valleys than those whose field lies in the Eastern States. Recently Dr. A. C. Lawson has given as the possible duration for the Sierran 1,500,000 years. However, he includes in the Quaternary the period of erosion of a series of "big valleys" of the Upper Kern Basin, which valleys appear to me to be the correlatives of the Sherwood valleys of the Klamath region. His figures corresponding to his given above are 6,000,000 years.

SOCIETY THANKS.

By Zoe Green Radcliffe.

OAKLAND, Nov. 23.—To-morrow, whether we have anything to be particularly thankful for or not, we will observe the old and pleasant if somewhat pagan custom of sacrificing the proud gobbler in annual thanksgiving to the gods that have smiled benignly upon us since our appetites for turkey were appeased. To-day, however, it is the women of the home and many a well-known society woman's superintending, with unusual and unusual success, the number of societies who are really artists in the way of concocting a noteworthy meal is surprising, and the day seems not far off when belles will boast of their housewifely ability.

Few homes will be without the browned Thanksgiving turkey, and among those who entertain family parties every year being the Chabois, the R. G. Browns, the J. R. Stephens, the Wheatons, the Thomases, and nearly all of the old and large families, where sons, daughters and grandchildren are gathered about the festal board.

The art section held forth at the Oakland "to-day" with the "Lacey" in the chair. "Florentine Art" was the topic of the hour. Miss Little Swales read an article on "The Art of Florence," and Miss M. Jones read a paper on the "Medici Family." Fra Angelico was the subject of Miss M. Manning's discourse. Dr. F. A. Lacey spoke at length on "Our Public Schools." Some lady, whose name has escaped my memory, contributed two very "light" whistling solos.

One of the many things Oaklanders have to be thankful for is the delightful glimpse into the world of art that C. P. Nielson, that clever California watercolorist, is giving us this week. He is exhibiting forty or more pictures at Saxe's studio on Telegraph avenue and among them are many delicious bits reminiscent of his recent trip to Old Mexico, as well as views of Monterey and San Francisco's famous Chinatown.

Miss Neale Morgan, another local artist, is exhibiting her work during this week and next at her home, 611 Nineteenth street. Miss Morgan spent the summer at picturesque Carmel-by-the-sea and brought back several interesting studies, both in oil and water color. Chapel Judson, who is also well known here, has a fine collection of paintings on exhibition at the Schuster gallery in San Francisco.

The toasts at the Federation luncheon in Alameda yesterday were unusually bright and witty. Although the toasts were burlesque and extremely clever, Mrs. Woodbury, who has a rare wit, was especially good, such as the meriment at the luncheon was due to the toastmistress, Mrs. J. B. Hume, who is a splendid toasting officer.

One hears wonderful things of the dinner given last evening by the clubman, Charles Hanlon, the other day at his beautiful San Francisco home on Jackson street. The range of appetizers, the deliciously made-up menu and the decorations of the silver and cut glass laden table were both unique and beautiful. Gorgeous American Beauty roses filled the center of the table and the heart of every rose was a tiny incandescent light. Among the guests who were there were the Sam Shortridges and the Gilbert Curtises.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT BY FELLOW DUCK HUNTER William C. Russell, Mining Engineer, Wounded While on a Trip to San Lorenzo.

OAKLAND, Nov. 23.—While duck hunting this morning at San Lorenzo William C. Russell, a prominent young mining engineer of this city, was accidentally shot in the face by William Foote of the bicycle firm of Leavitt & Foote. The men, with E. J. Stewart, a real estate broker, were shooting across a pond. Foote's gun was discharged just as Russell stepped in front of the weapon. The charge of shot struck Russell, glancing across his face, many of the pellets lodging in his chin. After the accident the hunters hastened to Oakland, where Russell's injury was treated by Dr. W. D. Huntington. The wound was painful, but is not serious. Russell is confined to his home, 689 Thirty-third street.

FIRE BREAKS OUT AT SOLDIERS' BALL BUT THE DANCE GOES ON

Electric Currents Cause the Trouble Beautifully Decorated Armory of Militia Rudely Marred by Flames.

Oakland Office San Francisco Call, 1016 Broadway, Nov. 23.

Fire threatened the destruction to-night of the armory of Companies A and F, Fifth Regiment, N. G. C., on Twelfth street, near Broadway. It was the night of the annual ball and reunion of Company A, an event of much note in society circles. The large drill hall had been superbly decorated. Just before 9 o'clock, while the myriads of electric lights were being tested, a flash of flame startled the soldiers. A flare from a gas jet communicated with the decorations and the snapping of an electric wire short circuited the line.

In an instant the east side of the hall, covered with light draperies, was in flames. Quickly an alarm was sounded that brought out the Fire Department. The lights were shut off to prevent what appeared to be a short circuit on the electric wiring.

MUST GIVE HIS PRESENTS BACK

Supreme Court Says That Former Mayor Snow Has No Right to $1,868 32 CLAIMS IT AS HIS FEE

While Receiving a Salary of $3000 a Year He Retained $7,868 32 Besides

Oakland Office San Francisco Call, 1016 Broadway, Nov. 19.

According to a decision of the Supreme Court just handed down former Mayor R. W. Snow must return $1868 32 to the city treasury. During his incumbency as City Auditor he retained $7868 32 as fees on collections made by him on personal property taxes. Suit was begun against him, but it was found that the statute of limitations had operated against $6000 of the amount and shutting out all except the amount for which judgment has been rendered.

The case was first tried before Judge S. P. Hall, who found in favor of the city, stating that all Snow was entitled to was his salary of $3000 a year and that he was not entitled to any money for fees. The case was appealed from this decision and the Supreme Court has now affirmed the decision. It is presumed that the amount of the judgment must come from Snow's bondsmen, the Fidelity and Guaranty Company of Maryland.
