

ADVERTISEMENTS.

A prominent club woman, Mrs. Danforth, of St. Joseph, Mich., tells how she was cured of falling of the womb and its accompanying pains and misery by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Life looks dark indeed when a woman feels that her strength is fading away and she has no hopes of ever being restored. Such was my feeling a few months ago when I was advised that my poor health was caused by prolapsus or falling of the womb. The words sounded like a knell to me, I felt that my sun had set; but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound came to me as an elixir of life; it restored the lost forces and built me up until my good health returned to me. For four months I took the medicine daily and each dose added health and strength. I am so thankful for the help I obtained through its use."—MRS. FLORENCE DANFORTH, 1007 Miles Ave., St. Joseph, Mich.

A medicine that has restored so many women to health and can produce proof of the fact must be regarded with respect. This is the record of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which cannot be equalled by any other medicine the world has ever produced. Here is another case:—

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For years I was troubled with falling of the womb, irregular and painful menstruation, leucorrhoea, bearing-down pains, backache, headache, dizzy and fainting spells, and stomach trouble. I doctored for about five years but did not seem to improve. I began the use of your medicine, and have taken seven bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, three of Blood Purifier, and also used the Sanative Wash and Liver Pills, and am now enjoying good health, and have gained in flesh. I thank you very much for what you have done for me, and heartily recommend your medicine to all suffering women."—MISS EMMA SNYDER, 218 East Center St., Marion, Ohio.

"FREE MEDICAL ADVICE TO WOMEN." Women would save time and much sickness if they would write to Mrs. Pinkham for advice as soon as any distressing symptoms appear. It is free, and has put thousands of women on the right road to recovery. Mrs. Pinkham never violates the confidence thus entrusted to her, and although she publishes thousands of testimonials from women who have been benefited by her advice and medicine, never in all her experience has she published such a letter without the full consent, and often by special request of the writer.

"$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonials, which will prove their absolute genuineness." Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

RADCLIFFE JURY SECURED.—The jury to retry the case of Harry Radcliffe, charged with the murder of Andrew Riley at Ninth and Sheridan streets, was impaneled yesterday. Owing to the absence of an important witness the case was continued till Monday morning. The jurors are: Joe Pohlman, A. A. Denny, Thomas Brady, John Bennett, Gus Browning, J. W. Tamm, Jacob Gensburger, Michael J. Vaughn, Ed. H. Lake, Moses Dannenberg, David H. Allen and Alonzo Hallitt.

BRIDE REFUSES OAKLAND FLAT. A bride's refusal to live in an Oakland flat is said to be at the bottom of the domestic differences of Katharina Frank and Andrew Frank, a retired merchant. She sued him for divorce a few days ago, charging him with desertion and alleging that he had $20,000 in the bank. Yesterday he denied the desertion and the bank account. He alleges that his income is only $80 a month. They were married on August 20 last, and finding the plumbing of their home on Clementina street unsanitary, he hied across the bay to find a new home. On October 13, he says, she found a flat and sent for his wife, but she refused to live in Oakland. In a cross complaint to Maud E. Till's suit for divorce Arthur Till charges her with cruelty; says she tried to stab him with a hot pin, broke a vase over his head and had a habit of coming home intoxicated.

A. Frank Denies Deserting Wife, but She Would Not Move Across the Bay.

Judge Hebbard granted a divorce to Eugene O'Hare from Kathleen O'Hare on the ground of her interperence. She did not appear to defend the case, although she had filed an answer saying that he had accused her of being responsible, by neglect, for the death of five of their children, all of whom died between November 17 and 27 of last year.

Divorces were granted by Judge Hebbard to Lizette Cook from A. C. Cook, desertion; Emma Jacobson from Isaac Jacobson, desertion; by Judge Kerrigan to Lena H. Orand from Charles F. Orand, desertion; by Judge Graham to Emma Gilligan from John Gilligan, desertion; Louise Rendell from Charles L. Rendell, cruelty; by Judge Sloss to William Shackleton from Emma Shackleton, interperence; by Judge Trout to James Brown from Vivian Brown, desertion; by Judge Seawell to Lulu E. Merriam from Caryl C. Merriam, a former Stockton attorney, desertion.

Suits for divorce were filed by Myrtle B. Gowett against George E. Gowett, neglect; by Lillian P. Week against John R. Week, cruelty.

FILES HUSBAND'S WILL.—Oakland, Dec. 8.—Mrs. Lizzie M. Gifford of Hayward, died the will of her late husband for probate today. He leaves an estate valued at about $3000, consisting of mining claims. A bequest of $100 is left his son, John E. Gifford, a sailor in the British Navy.

RACIAL CONFLICT DEVELOPS STORES THAT ARE VERY CONTRADICTORY.

Combat in Chinese Restaurant Results in Arrest of Manager's Afro-American Assaultants.

BY JAMES C. CRAWFORD.

"A Chink noodle dump on Jackson street" was George Washington Brown's designation of the scene of conflict, and his fellow defendant, Jacob Netherland, allied to it as a "chop suey joint." The prosecuting policeman, enlightened Judge Mogan with the information that the arrests were made in a Chinese restaurant. Mr. Brown and Mr. Netherland, up-to-date young negroes, disclaimed primal responsibility for the blackening of Hong Ping's eyes and the semi-annihilation of his highly treasured queue. If he had treated them with ordinary courtesy, they averred, there would not have been any punching or hair pulling, because they were most amicably inclined toward him and all his race when they entered his place of business. They kept mental memoranda of what they ate and his scheduled prices therefor and when the overcharge was attempted they had not accused him of deliberate endeavor to extort, but kindly requested him to furnish them with an itemized bill so that they might prove the defectiveness of his arithmetic. Instead of acceding to that very reasonable request he flew into violent passion and threatened to slay them if they did not pay the sum he demanded.

"En all mah bo'n days, Judge," said Mr. Brown, "ah nebbah saw such an angrified pussion as dat Chink. He wuz blin' mad, an' w'en Mistah Netherland tried ter p'int out dat we wuzn't out to no trouble he grew wuss an' wussah, callin' boaf ob us dead beats an' oddah depressinatin' names dat no gen'l'm'n we're ou' w'ay out. Dat am de solemm facks ob de case, yo' Honnah."

Mr. Netherland corroborated every word of Mr. Brown's statement, but every word of it was emphatically contradicted by Hong Ping, who swore that the defendants audaciously tried to evade payment of any sum at all. When they sought to sneak out he undertook to restrain the pugilist, one of them systematically put his eyes in mourning the other tried to uproot his queue.

More testimony will be heard next Saturday.

Five full-blooded Greeks, accused of peddling without license, were registered on Judge Cabanis' calendar as Mike Curran, Joe Corbin, Pat Smithers, Timothy Griffin and A. R. Cullen and his Honor gaped and blinked, as he alternately glanced from the roster to the defendants. Clerk Barney Hanley surveyed the smart quintet with baleful eye and prosecuting Attorney Hanley's stare at them was menacing.

"Of course," said Mr. Hanley to the bench, "the nationality that these names would indicate, for not one of them can speak the English language."

"The names are rank counterfeits, yo' Honor," said Joe Corbin, "and I'd like to know by what right these dagoes should have adopted these names."

"A. P. Cullen," mused the Judge scanning the calendar, "now I'd like to know what A. P. stands for."

"Alphonsus Patrick," promptly exclaimed the defendant alluded to.

Mr. Corbin collapsed in his chair. Mr. Hanley clutched wildly at the clerk's desk as he staggered backward. Bailiff Neil Carmichael chuckled and the Judge's fingers were in his hair as he moaned:

"Take them away. This nomenclature mystery is too profound for me to solve in a day. Bring them back on the 22d."

Four intoxicated and disorderly Japanese men were gallantly breasting the Pine street hill, between Dupont and Stockton, when a member of the Chinatown squad undertook to scale the acclivity and discipline them. When they saw him climbing they formed a square that would have been hollow had it not envired a fire plug, but three of them retreated before his fierce onslaught, the fourth bravely holding his ground while he endeavored to uproot the plug, his evident intention being to utilize it as a defensive weapon. The quartet were overpowered and marched down the hill again, and Judge Conlan will sentence them to-day.

Mrs. Alice Hogue told Judge Mogan

that Joseph, her husband, was in steady receipt of $18 a week for his services as a laundryman. Instead of supporting her and their three young children with the money he spent nearly all of it for ready-made clothing for himself. Their home at 830 Alabama street was chock full of hand-me-down garments, but no food would be purchased or rental paid if she did not devote her scanty earnings as a laundress to those lines of expenditure. While she was ashamed of the raiment worn by the little ones and herself, Joseph was ever a glass of fashion. He read all the clothiers' advertisements in the daily newspapers while he was at home, and when not at home or at work he would surely be found in some apparel shop inspecting and trying on the latest things in ready-made suits. Since last June his contributions to the household fund had not exceeded a total of $25, and during that period he must have spent ten times that amount of money in sartorial dissipation, could not the court persuade or compel him to remember his domestic responsibilities?

The court thought Joseph ought to be ashamed of himself. While a passion for stylish attire was less reprehensible than a craving for strong waters, it was difficult to see how Joseph's family was benefited by the distinction. Joseph understood that the first duty of a paterfamilias was to his wife and children, even to the deterioration of his personal aspect, and if he does not immediately begin buying more food and firing and other household necessities he will soon find himself deprived of opportunity to buy anything for in the County Jail there are neither pay days nor clothing stores.

Joseph Curran complained to a policeman that he had been robbed of a revolver by J. Lodiare, liquor dealer, 121 Sixth street, and when the officer accompanied Mr. Curran to Mr. Lodiare's store he found that the pistol was not there. Lodiare had been brandished threateningly by Mr. Curran in the face of Mr. L. during a dispute over some small change. So instead of arresting Mr. Curran and booked him for the charge he was pronounced guilty by Judge Conlan.

With due respect to the court, Mrs. Alice O'Brien would prefer to plead her own case. It was in no spirit of contumacy that she declined a professional advocate in her behalf. Confident of the righteousness of her cause and of the uprightness of the bench, she did not fear the outcome of her trial, nor did she believe that a lawyer could improve the defense which she was prepared to submit.

"I don't want to have any of them shysters talkin' for me," said Mrs. O'Brien, "and if it's all the same to your Honor I'll do my own arguin'."

It was all the same to his Honor, and the examination proceeded. Patrolman W. E. Monaghan testified that Mrs. O'Brien's small saloon, at 8 Kate street, off Bryant and between Seventh and Eighth, was a hotbed of disorder, and to the great annoyance of her neighbors, many of whom had audibly marveled that the law did not protect them.

"To show your Honor that no such complaints have been made," said Mrs. O'Brien, "I'll now call my chief witness, Mrs. Julia Ballinger, who lives right opposite my little place, to say if she ever heard a voice above a whisper comin' from me or my customers, and I'm sure she'll tell the truth, for there's no woman I know who has a better reputation for mindin' her own business and tellin' the truth than Mrs. Ballinger, and after your Honor has heard what she has to say I'm sure you will take her word and let the policeman know that—"

"Call Mrs. Ballinger!" shouted the Judge. Mrs. Ballinger, a rosy-faced young matron, fulfilled Mrs. O'Brien's expectation to the letter. How any one would not want to hurt a poor lone widow trying to make an honest living could say that Mrs. O'Brien kept a disorderly home was more than Mrs. Ballinger could understand. Although in proximity to the premises in question morning, noon and night, she (Mrs. B.) had never once heard or seen anything about Mrs. O'Brien's management of her business, and she was in the respect for the law of the land and the comfort of her neighbors. There were some people on earth, however, that an angel from above could not please. Mrs. O'Brien then took herself in

Violet Monnier Tells of Alleged Effort to Kill Her and Her Two Children

OBJECTS TO TESTIMONY

Counsel for Defense Tries to Exclude Evidence Relating to Dire Threats

Violet Monnier, wife of George Monnier Jr., the contestant for a share in the estate of his father, the late wine dealer, testified yesterday in Judge Graham's court as to the alleged attempt by Mrs. Monnier Sr. to poison her and her two children at the Monniers' home in May, 1902. At the time both children and the mother were visiting the house, and after eating were taken sick. The baby boy went into convulsions and was sick for a long time afterward. Violet Monnier and the little girl, Flossie, were sick two weeks. The physicians who were summoned treated them for poisoning. Several sharp arguments passed between Attorney Roche and Collins during the testimony as to the poisoning. Collins objected to the introduction of the testimony, but was overruled by the court. The witness later testified that Mrs. Monnier made further threats to poison the three in the presence of Policeman Curtis, who had been called in to quell a disturbance in the Monnier home.

The Monnier told of her relations with the elder Monnier after her marriage with their son. According to her statements, while Monnier Sr. was passive in his opposition, his wife was a great trouble maker. The witness testified that after the birth of her second child the elder Mrs. Monnier took care of him during the young wife's stay in the hospital, and that when she left the hospital she had to resort to stratagems to get her child back.

The witness said that efforts were continually being made to separate her from her husband, and that when she was very sick she was served first with papers to annul her marriage and later with papers in divorce proceedings. The divorce was in the name of her husband, but during the trial it was proved that George Monnier was living with his wife and that the proceedings were instigated by Mrs. Monnier Sr.

The witness declared that when she went to visit her husband at the French Hospital he seemed afraid of her and that she had to calm him down and would speak to her. She further said that when she was in the hospital George Monnier Sr. supplied the money for her expenses and that he often gave the grandchildren money.

Attorney Collins questioned Violet Monnier as to her meeting with the Monniers and her marriage with George. She told of her meetings with Mrs. Monnier before the marriage, all of which were pleasant; but after the marriage Mrs. Monnier said that she was not George's wife and that the marriage was illegal.

Dr. F. Canac Marquis of the French Hospital testified as to young Monnier's stay at the hospital, where he was treated for tuberculosis. Collins tried to make the witness say that dissipation caused aggravations of the disease, but failed.

Several other witnesses testified as to the elder Monnier's kind treatment of his son during the boy's childhood. The case will go on Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

Teachers on Absence Leave. The Board of Education announced that teachers with leaves of absence until the beginning of the spring term will not be required to return to their classes until January 16 next. By the adoption of a recent resolution, the spring term's commencement was advanced from January 3 to January 16 and the board fears that teachers may wish to return to duty at the earlier date. Leaves of absence were granted to Rose de Yoe, May Arnold and Alice McNeely, and teachers' certificates to E. I. Rowell, Charlotte Martin, Mrs. Kate Delaney, Margaret Nesfield and E. J. Dupuy.
