GOUCHER TRIAL NEARING CLOSE

John J. Foley Gives Important Testimony Corroborating That of Henderson

HYPNOTISM MENTIONED

Latter Witness Says He Thought an Attorney Had Him Under Mesmeric Ties

The trial of Allen Goucher, charged with the murder of Policeman Eugenio C. Robinson at Sixteenth and Valencia streets on January 21, 1902, was on in Judge Cook's court yesterday. The cross-examination of William Henderson was resumed and kept up for nearly two hours in an effort to impeach his testimony. He stuck to his story.

During the cross-examination Henderson was asked: "Did you not, while testifying at the trial of William B. Kennedy, say that you were under hypnotic influence?" Henderson replied, "I believe I did."

"Were you at that time under hypnotic influence?" was then asked, and Henderson replied, "I believe I was, but my mind is clear now."

At Kennedy's trial Henderson caused a sensation, declaring in court that he had been hypnotized by Attorney W. H. Schooler, one of the counsel who defended the accused.

Four other witnesses were examined. The most important was John J. Foley, a constable. He testified that on the morning of January 21, 1902, he was on his way home and when he reached the corner of Fifteenth and Valencia streets he saw the flashes from revolvers and heard the reports of shot in the direction of Sixteenth street. He saw three men run down Sixteenth street in the direction of Julian avenue. Then he heard shots, followed by running footsteps along Julian avenue and up Fifteenth street, toward Valencia. Foley became frightened, and, seeing a light in a saloon at Fourteenth street, ran toward it. Two men came running after him. He knocked on the door of the saloon and it was opened by Edward Thornton, the proprietor. They saw a youth standing on the corner, another limping toward him. The youth said to the limping man, "Come on, using an offensive expression. The youth was of slender build, with a smooth face and resembled the defendant.

Thornton, the saloon-keeper, testified to seeing the youth on the corner and the other man limping toward him.

Foley's testimony corroborated Henderson, who said that after the shooting he and Goucher and Frank Woods ran down Sixteenth street to Julian avenue, where Henderson was shot and captured by Detective Taylor, Goucher and Woods running along the avenue toward Fifteenth street. The limping man was Woods, who had been shot by Robinson.

Owen J. McQuade, saloon-keeper, Sixteenth street and Rondell place, testified to hearing shots and that when he ran out of the saloon he saw three men running toward Julian avenue. He heard one man shout, "Halt!" and he ran back into the saloon.

Henry J. Mahoney testified to hearing the shots and picking from the ground the revolver used by the murdered policeman.

Town Talk.

Julian Hawthorne tells the story of his literary career in this week's Town Talk. How Mayor Schmitz is taking advantage of the political situation is the subject of editorial discussion. Harry Correll, the eminent stylist, discusses books, new and old. Theodore Bonnet writes of Roosevelt the idealist. The salient features of the Stanton mystery are given a lot of interesting news. He tells of a sensational dinner at the Poodle Dog at which an actress did some lively dancing. He tells of the dizzy pace set in society by an Englishman with a title, of the social progress of an Italian county, of the emperors of the East and the latest capture of Amy Crocker-Ashe-Gilg-Gouraud. He tells of a visiting artist who gets submarine inspirations. He has a story of the fleeing of the Jimmy Woods in Mexico. The Saunterer is the most wonderful newswriter in town.

Attorney Gets Into Trouble.

Justice of the Peace Lawson yesterday gave judgment in favor of H. F. Hobson, who sued Michael Livingstone for a bill of $16. The costs of the suit being a little larger than usual, Judge Lawson refused to render a judgment until the itemized accounts were filed. Attorney Patrick J. Mogan became impatient at the delay and used abusive language to Lawson, who was compelled to administer physical punishment to the obstreperous Mogan.

GHOST OPERATED BY BOYS

BY JAMES C. CRAWFORD.

Skeptical of the possibility of ghosts, spooks, wraths, specters or warlocks having temporal existence, Patrolman Burke chuckled to scorn the various tales told him about the haunted house on Sanchez street. "Go to," he invariably said to the trembling narrator, "and wake up. If you have seen the thing you describe it had no material being, and you must have been asleep when it entered your vision." To satisfy the most importunate of such in-drink was the cause of the domestic breakup. Judge Mogan will hear more of the case next Monday.

When 12-year-old Bertrand Bertrand was called to testify at a burglary trial before Judge Cahabanis his fright was so great that he held up two trembling little hands while being sworn.

"One hand is sufficient, my boy," said the Judge, in kindly tone; "and don't be scared."

"No, don't be frightened, my little man," said Prosecuting Attorney Hanley, "for his Honor is not a hold-up."

His Honor ignored the testimonial to his character.

"You must show me," said M. F. Hagel, peddler, when Patrolman Herlihy informed him that it was illegal to obstruct pedestrians at Market and McAllister streets. "And you must show me the authority under which this cop arrested me," he said when arraigned before Judge Mogan.

"From Missouri, I presume," remarked his Honor.

"Yes, sir; came from St. Louis three weeks ago," was Mr. Hagel's reply.

"You must show me—"

"When you come up for sentence to-morrow," said the bench, "I'll show you—though not because I must do so—that it is imprudent to block traffic and scold policemen."

Frank Frick, charged with having purloined a valise from the railway station at Third and Townsend streets, demanded dismissal on the ground that his alleged offense was not committed within the city boundaries. Judge Conlan suggested that he consult a modern map of San Francisco ere he rails at being pronounced guilty of larceny.

Arthur Frye, one of three small boys who were arrested for throwing sand at persons passing by a vacant lot on Market street, near Third, confessed that it was not his first appearance as a defendant. "It was copied once before," he told Judge Mogan, "for mysterious mischief, but de Judge let me go."

"There doesn't seem to have been any mystery about the mischief now charged against you," said the Judge. Sentence to-day.

Ed Phillips, rated A. His resistance of the officers, he added, might also be pronounced

Judge Fritz dismissed the charge of disturbing the peace, his decision probably being influenced to some extent by the reflection that life with a madly temperate for Masters Drover and Edmunds by the superstitious ones whom they so ruthlessly deceived.

George Lynch disturbed an outdoor religious meeting on Jackson street, between Davis and Drumm, last Thursday evening by assaulting the Rev. Adolph Rose of Oakland and the Rev. R. K. Baptista, a Portuguese exporter. The Rev. Mr. Rose was on his knees, leading prayer, when Lynch roughly shoved him forward, a performance which was repeated with the Rev. Mr. Baptista as the victim. The defense before Judge Mogan was that the defendant was praying, when Lynch was being abused in Portuguese by the Rev. Mr. Baptista. Sentence deferred till to-day.

George Foulk, a teamster, accused of threatening to kill his wife, Edith, said that her relatives, and not any of his, were responsible for the conjugal infelicity. She has many relatives, he explained, and they made his home life so miserable by visiting his wife that he was compelled to leave her and their three children. The wife, however, declared that George's love of Dr. Clara M. Freeman of 524 Ellis street stepped from a car at Fourth and Market streets Thursday evening and was knocked down by an automobile driven by Alfred Schuler. She was roughly beaten, her head struck the pavement. Patrolmen Bolan and Ayried arrested the chauffeur and booked him for battery.

I heard no warning whistle or bell before I was knocked down," Dr. Freeman testified in Judge Mogan's court. "Automobiles not only run too fast on Market street, but they run too closely to the cars."

The case will be decided to-day.

Police Sergeant Ellis arrested George E. Ratchem and Charles Thomas because he found them acting in a suspicious manner at Jackson and Drumm streets, and in possession of each of the odds against him reduced by his possession of the firearm. His assailants had departed, however, and while he was expressing his opinion of them the three policemen undertook to discipline him. If they had understood the real situation, he thought, they would have handed him less roughly when he objected to being deprived of his shooting iron.

He was given twenty-four hours' imprisonment.

SEARCH CITY FOR STEPHEN

Chief Surgeon of the Emergency Hospitals Cannot Be Found When Wanted

ONE PATIENT IS DEAD

Drs. Ward and Worth of Health Board Will Hold a Rigid Investigation

Three men lay in bed at the Central Emergency Hospital last night, in urgent need of surgical attention. Possibly because of the lack of such attention one of them is dead.

The surgeon on duty, Dr. Glover, was unable to give them more than temporary relief without violating a rule of the Board of Health, which says that the chief surgeon shall be notified of all major cases and that he alone can perform such operations. Dr. Stephen, who holds the chief surgeon's position, could not be found.

David Thomas, a laborer, was run over by a Third-street car at Third and Silver streets. His right arm was badly torn. The bones were sticking out in two places. The man was weak from the shock and from loss of blood. Dr. Glover said an amputation of the arm at the shoulder should be performed. The steward was instructed to ring up the chief surgeon. His wife answered and said she did not know where her husband was. For four hours the hospital attendants tried to find the chief, without avail.

Meantime two fractured skull cases came in. John Deehan, a miner, living at 310 Mission street, fell down a flight of stairs in a lodging-house at 739 Polson street and suffered a fracture of the frontal bone of the skull, an operation needing immediate attention.

The Board of Health enforces the following rule:

The assistant surgeons shall notify the chief surgeon of all serious cases, including those of lacerations, gunshot wounds, penetrating the abdominal cavity, and other cases requiring major operations as soon as they are admitted to the hospitals. The chief surgeon is required to perform all capital operations.

Dr. James Ward, president of the Board of Health, offered his services when informed that the chief could not be found and gave Dr. Glover the power to use his own discretion at a late hour, when all hope of finding Dr. Stephen was abandoned. He said: "Dr. Stephen should certainly have left his whereabouts known."

Dr. Sidney Worth, a member of the Board of Health, was very much concerned over the inactivity of the hospital attendants to find Dr. Stephen. He said: "Dr. Stephen should always be where he can be found. Isn't he a married man? Where can he be at this hour of the night? I shall make an immediate investigation and have this matter remedied."

Dr. Ward says he will also conduct an investigation. At 1 o'clock this morning no one had been able to find Chief Stephen, after five hours' trying.
