

AT SACRED HEART COLLEGE

Diplomas Awarded at Cogswell, Sacred Heart and Presentation Convent.

The 1905 class of the Wilmerding School of Industrial Arts received diplomas amid the hearty applause of schoolmates and friends yesterday morning. The assembly hall was profusely decorated with flowers and school colors. The class, the largest in the history of the institution, consisted of eleven boys from the architectural-drawing, cabinet-making, bricklaying, carpentering and plumbing departments.

The architectural branch graduated Abe Appletton of San Francisco, William D. Eggenhoff of Ventura, Edward J. O'Connor of San Francisco, Oliver B. Raser Jr. and Ernest F. Reese of Humboldt, Charles William Heidenreich was awarded the diploma of diploma of Jewett M. Johnson, that for the cabinet-making course; Herbert L. Belton and William A. Lavers were graduated as masters of carpentry, and Henry J. Dolcini and Otto W. Sorenson as plumbers.

Tirey L. Ford, former Attorney General of the State and at present the head of the law department of the United Railroads, addressed the students as follows in part:

"It is a privilege to graduate from the Wilmerding School. Mr. Wilmerding performed a great public service when he endowed this institution. Thus is an invaluable opportunity placed in the way of young men. It is in strong contrast to other conditions where young men were compelled to start from the bottom and work up.

"Young men in California are in a place where the development of industry will be far in advance of that of any other part of the United States or of the world, because of its natural resources and the proximity of Asia. Graduates from the Wilmerding School, upon entering the world, are equipped with mental ability and power to use their hands intelligently.

"It is up to you. This is the young man's age. The captains of industry all started at the bottom, but Wilmerding students are ahead of them inasmuch as they are equipped in mind and hand. The captains of industry suffered deprivations. While using one hand to work they used the other to hold a book. Whatever your walk of life, be always at its head. You must be honest. Be honest in your work. The dishonest man seldom succeeds. Be brave. Look the world in the face. You are as good as any man. Be loyal. Above all be a good citizen. Upon this rests all."

The diplomas were conferred by Rudolph J. Taussig, chairman of the Wilmerding School committee of the board of regents of the University of California. Mr. Taussig addressed the students briefly, saying that the school had done its part and that it now depended upon the boys whether they would be successful.

Following the presentation of the diplomas, Mr. Taussig— an order upon a local firm for a handsome set of drawing instruments with which to start the bright young architect upon his career.

The musical part of the programme was furnished by the Lick School Orchestra and several selections by Nathan M. Firestone.

COGSWELL STUDENTS GRADUATE.

Twenty-eight diplomas are awarded to the class members.

Twenty-eight students of the Cogswell Polytechnic College received their diplomas last evening. The hall was taxed to its utmost capacity by the schoolmates and relatives of the graduates. Dr. F. W. d'Evelyn, the speaker of the evening, gave the young people a good talk upon the value of the training which the Cogswell School has given them and how they should conduct themselves in life.

Robert Ewing, the chairman of the board of trustees, presented the diplomas. James W. Kerr presided at the exercises and gave his advice to the departing class. The class to graduate is but half of the regular body, as by the schedule instituted in the school two years ago the total course now covers the term of four instead of three years. MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE WILL SELECT HOUR FOR MEETING

Purpose is to Have General Gathering of Members at an Established Time Every Day.

At a meeting of the Merchants' Exchange yesterday the subject of having a stated time to get the members of the exchange together daily was discussed. Formerly by tacit agreement the members congregated at a fixed time every afternoon. The advantage in this was manifest. Business affairs were talked over and business was largely promoted at a small outlay of time.

In some way the members have fallen into the way of getting into the exchange at all hours. The old-time gathering have to a large extent become out of vogue. Therefore the exchange bent itself yesterday to the task of finding a way to rally the members. The first step was to have a change our established. The decision reached was to have the secretary write to every member of the exchange and request him to send in his preference of hour on a postal card. When the answers are all in the matter will be nearly settled.

While the exchange was in session the customary committee was appointed to bring in nominations for officers to serve during the ensuing term.

JURY WILL DECIDE QUESTION OF M. J. LIDDY'S SANITY

Judge Graham Refuses to Pass Judgment in Case of the Former Custom Inspector.

Judge Graham refused to decide yesterday whether Michael J. Liddy, former custom-house inspector, is insane or not. He was up for examination before Judge Graham and Commissioners of Lunacy yesterday morning at the City Emergency Hospital, where he is confined. During the examination there were two sides of the family arrayed against each other offering charges and counter charges. His case will be decided by a jury to-day.

Liddy is confined to a cell at the detention ward at the instigation of his wife, who made the charge of insanity. She alleges that her husband has been violent and that her life is in jeopardy if he is allowed his freedom. Her son and brother-in-law also maintain the same view. Other members of the family were on hand and asserted it was a conspiracy to send the former custom inspector to the asylum. Liddy alleges that possession of $3000 life insurance money that is coming to them when he dies, and he further maintains that by confining him to the asylum they believe he would not live long.

The forging and machine shops presented an attractive collection of completed and uncompleted machines and bench work. The pattern shop made a smaller showing than usual, owing to the amount of the work sent to the exhibition at Portland. The features of the academic exhibit were the drawing and colored posters by the free-hand drawing department, the blue prints and sketches of the mechanical drawing department and the work of the English and German courses.

The Board of Public Works and the Board of Education have in this particular case waived their objections and consented to the action herebefore indicated, especially as the plan referred to in said ordinance were prepared under their sanction.
