

UNFINISHED SANCTUARY IS TO BECOME A FACTORY

"Jezreel's Tower" on Chatham Hill Falls Into the Hands of Unbelieving Gentiles.

under her management its numbers increased and branches were established in different parts of the world. But after three years she repeated the mistake her husband had made by going the way of all flesh. Then her father tried to take over the Jezreel job. But that was making too much of a family affair of it. The strain imposed upon the faith of the elect was more than most of them could stand. The sect disbanded. A small remnant only accepted the old man as the genuine "Jezreel." Their contributions did not place him above the necessity of working for a living and for years he has run a grocery business near the temple gates. But he has always presided over the meetings of the few who still retain confidence in the "Flying Roll." They have been held in a small hall in the big roofless and windowless structure. Sacrilegious hands will soon drive them from that retreat, and that will be the end of the Jezreelites.

LONDON, July 29.—After standing for twenty years as a monumental memorial of human folly and credulity, "Jezreel's Tower," the unfinished sanctuary of the "New and Latter House of Israel," is to suffer the crowning desecration of transformation into a factory at the hands of the unbelieving Gentile. During all the period the huge, square, roofless framework of brick, dominating the surrounding framework from the top of Chatham Hill, has served as a rallying point for the faithful few who still continued to believe in the dream of their prophet and founder. The announcement of the impending change has reduced them to silent despair.

James White was a private soldier in the Sixteenth Regiment thirty years ago, and some of his companions imagined he would ever amount to anything. He was once confined to barracks for some breach of military discipline and his sergeant taunted him with being an irreligious, reckless fellow. "I shall leave the army," retorted White, "and then I will found a new religion that will astonish the world." He purchased his discharge a week later, assumed the title of "James Jereshom Jezreel" and proclaimed himself the founder of the "New and Latter House of Israel." That it is easy to start a new faith in this age of enlightenment, provided one makes claims in its behalf that are sufficiently opposed to common sense, there are numerous instances. White did not err on the side of modesty. He announced that from heaven, via "Jerusalem," he had received certain divine writings which he called "The Flying Roll." Even the most favored of his disciples never got a peep of the originals with the exception of one man, Joseph Head. He was possessed of more literary ability than the founder and White employed him to prepare "extracts" and "sermons for the Gentiles" from the mystic revelations.

Contrary to the usually accepted maxim which declares that a prophet finds no honor among his own kith and kin, White obtained his first converts from among his numerous relations and established himself in Chatham, where he was well known. There he quickly gathered around him a large band of credulous followers, who allowed their hair to grow long and their faces visible sign of their inward faith. Whether knave or fanatic—or a mixture of both—White was evidently a shrewd man of business. He exercised automatic authority over his followers and established a community of them at the top of Chatham Hill. With farms, bakeries, clothing stores, printing offices and various workshops under his control, he speedily amassed a fortune out of the profits and for a considerable period it was estimated that his income was $250,000 a year. He was in many respects an earlier edition of Dowle. In return for cash gifts "Jezreel" promised immortality to such as accepted his gospel and announced that he himself would never die, just as Mrs. Eddy did many years ago. He married one of his converts, Esther Rogers, a pretty young woman of Chatham, and everything went prosperously with him.

At the height of his power he conceived the idea of building in the midst of his park a huge building for the gathering of the 144,000 elect of the scattered twelve tribes of Israel—an event which he announced was about due. He also declared that it would save all their lives when the second flood came. It was designed to hold 5000 people. How the remaining 139,000 were to be stowed away in it neither "Jezreel" nor the "Flying Roll" condescended to explain. But the greater demands the prophet made on the credulity of his followers the firmer grew their faith in him. They subscribed liberally for the building of the temple. In the center was to be a huge circular hall and it was to be roofed with a gilded dome. On the interior fixings and decorations $200,000 was to be expended.

The shell of the building only had been completed when the ex-soldier made the one mistake of his career since he started in business as the prophet of a new religion. He falsified his claims to immortality by dying. The sect would have gone to pieces then had not Mrs. "Jezreel" stepped into the breach. As "Queen Esther" she assumed the leadership of the elect. Her husband, she said, had been a bit blinded by the devil in his interpretations of the "Flying Roll." She was the divinely inspired one who would never die and who would show when the time came how 144,000 folk could be saved from destruction in a building hard to hold 5000. It had been her husband's mission to prepare the way for her.

The "Jezreelites" had been educated up to a point where they found no difficulty in swallowing that yarn. Not only did she hold the sect together, but

AWAIT OPENING OF RESERVATION OF DRINKING EVIL IS SPREADING

Homeseekers Are Hurrying to Grand Junction to Register for Uintah Lands

LOOKS LIKE BOOM TOWN TENTS ARE ERECTED ON EVERY AVAILABLE LOT TO FURNISH SHELTER FOR THE VISITORS

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo., July 29.—This city is ready to care comfortably for the thousands of homeseekers who are expected to come to Grand Junction to register for the Uintah reservation lands. In nearly every block temporary rooming and boarding houses have been opened and big tents on nearly every available lot in the central portion of the city makes the place look like a boom town.

Hundreds of orders for accommodations, lodging-houses and on every train people are coming in to be on the ground early.

Parties coming overland in prairie schooners and wagons are arriving every few hours. Grand Junction promises to prove a popular outfitting point for people who go to the reservation. By tomorrow night several thousand strangers will be in town.

The reports that the Grand Junction business men have raised prices on accommodations are absolutely false. The usual scale of prices will prevail in every line of business, it is asserted.

The work of placing drinking fountains and erecting special temporary sanitary system is about completed. A score of special policemen were commissioned this afternoon. Registration will begin next Tuesday.

CAPITALIST JULIUS REIS PASSES AWAY

California suffered the loss of another pioneer and capitalist yesterday in the death of Julius C. Reis. For three months he lingered and then quietly he passed away. At his bedside were two daughters and a wife to bid him a last farewell.

Julius C. Reis was born in Germany in 1838, coming to the United States in 1846, when he was twelve years of age. In 1853 he came to California to seek his fortune. San Francisco has always been the home of the capitalist and here he engaged in banking and in several mining enterprises. Fortune favored him, his wealth redoubling with the growth of the city.

In 1892 Mr. Reis married Miss Ellen W. Dait. There are four children, Mrs. Julian Sonntag, Mrs. W. H. T. Hule, Miss Mary Reis and William B. Reis. A palatially furnished home was built at 2201 Sacramento street, where the family has lived for several years. Besides various mortgages and lots in this city, Julius Reis owned the old Reis tract in the Richmond District.

A petition for special letters of administration upon the estate of Julius C. Reis, who died early yesterday morning, was filed at noon yesterday by his son, William B. Reis. In the petition it is stated that the decedent's estate is of great value and needs immediate attention. Decedent's heirs at law are his widow, Ellen M., and his children—Isabella Sonntag, Lillie McM. Hule, Mary Reis and the petitioner.

As successor to Julius C. Reis, as executor of the will of the late millionaire, Samuel Davis, the Union Trust Company filed a petition for letters testamentary upon Davis' estate. The trust company will take up the work of administering Davis' estate where it was laid aside by Reis when he answered death's summons.

The visitors also will have the privilege during their stay of free railway and hotel accommodations, in order that they may visit any interesting places they desire to see.

King Edward will review the French and British fleets on August 9, and will take luncheon on board the French flagship Massena. The French officers will be given banquets, luncheons and garden parties at Windsor Castle, the Guild Hall, London and elsewhere and will also be entertained at various fetes. The fleet will leave for Portsmouth on August 14.

Attempt to Kill Former Deputy.
PARIS, July 29.—A sensation was caused on Thursday in the Place Vendôme by the attempt of a woman to kill Baron de Ladoucette, a former member of the Chamber of Deputies. The woman was arrested and taken to the police station. Baron de Ladoucette was to have been married in a few days.

SON OF JAMES J. HILL WILL SUCCEED LAMONT

Stated to Become First Vice President of the Northern Pacific Railway.

ST. PAUL, July 29.—The Pioneer Press to-morrow will say: It is rumored in railway circles that James N. Hill, eldest son of James J. Hill, will become first vice president of the Northern Pacific Railway to succeed Daniel S. Lamont. Mr. Hill was vice president of his father's road from 1893 until three years ago, when he resigned on account of falling health. It is said that his health is much improved.

The recent victory of James J. Hill in the litigation over distributing the stock of the Northern Securities Company has given rise to the belief that the new vice president will be a Hill man.

George Gould Arrested.

LUCERNE, July 29.—George J. Gould, who, with his wife and family, are occupying their old quarters at the Hotel National, has had some slight annoyance from the country policemen. He was automobiling through the village of Meggin, a few miles from Lucerne, when he was stopped and asked if he had not read the signboard. Gould replied:

"No, I read German fairly well, but those idiomantic words on the signboard puzzled me, and as we were running for a cup of tea at Vetsman I opened the throttle and let her go."

The policeman said, "You must pay $5."

Doctor Victim of Duty.
PARIS, July 29.—Dr. Clado, a Greek physician, long a resident of Paris and a chevalier of the Legion of Honor, died on Monday as a victim of duty. He returned late at night from Chantilly, about ten days ago, where he had accompanied the Crown Prince of Greece on an automobile trip, and went to a hospital to perform an operation. He was unable to perform the operation because he could not refuse to perform it until the next day. He slightly pricked a finger and blood poisoning developed a few days ago. In spite of the best medical attendance the accident proved fatal.
