WORKING WOMEN

Their Hard Struggle Made Easier—Interesting Statements by a Young Lady in Boston and One in Nashville, Tenn.

All women work; some in their homes, some in church, and some in the whirl of society. And in stores, mills and shops tens of thousands are on the never-ceasing treadmill, earning their daily bread.

All are subject to the same physical laws; all suffer alike from the same physical disturbance, and the nature of their duties, in many cases, quickly drifts them into the horrors of all kinds of female complaints, ovarian troubles, ulceration, falling and displacements of the womb, leucorrhoea, or perhaps irregularity or suppression of the monthly periods, causing backache, nervousness, irritability and lassitude.

Women who stand on their feet all day are more susceptible to these troubles than others. They especially require an invigorating, sustaining medicine which will strengthen the female organism and enable them to bear easily the fatigues of the day, to sleep well at night, and to rise refreshed and cheerful.

How distressing to see a woman struggling to earn a livelihood or perform her household duties when her back and head are aching, she is so tired she can hardly drag about or stand up, and every movement causes pain, the origin of which is due to some derangement of the female organism.

HUSBAND IS PENITENT, WIFE RESOLUTE.

HE BEGS FOR MERCY

With Reluctance She Finally Agrees to Give Him Another Chance to Show Manhood.

BY JAMES C. CRAWFORD.

Mrs. Hannah Adamson of 6 Harrison avenue was not easy to convince that six months' imprisonment had chastened the tyrannical spirit of her spouse, and it was with some difficulty that Police Judge Morgan persuaded her to consent to his dismissal on probation instead of his recommitment to prison for another half-year term.

"It's a bad 'un," declared Mrs. Adamson, "and I don't believe that he's sorry for what he did 'n' means to do different if I talk 'im 'ome with me."

"Naow, 'Annah, ye knowa better than that," pleaded the apparently penitent Mr. Adamson. "Give me another chance, can't ye?" he almost whined.

"No, Handrew, I don't knowa better'n that," she responded, mimicking his tone. "I does knowa 'n' ye've been a brute all yer life, 'n' that ye can't be made hangel in six months, 'n' now, nor in six years nyether—that's w'at I knowa."

The Judge directed the woman's attention to the physical evidence of the man's soul-dejection and reminded her that it spoke more eloquently than did his professions of repentance and reform. From a sturdy fellow Mr. Adamson had been transformed by prison fare and confinement into an animated clothes rack, and his once-upon-a-time ruddy face was both pinched and sallow.

"Another six months in jail would qualify him to pose as a living skeleton," remarked the Judge. "Does look run down, 'n' that's a fact," said the wife, "but while 'e's been a-losin' flesh 't' children 'n' me 'ave been a-gainin' it. We gets along better without 'avin' 'im at 'ome, 'n' ye may put 'im away 'in all as I cares."

"'Ave pity, 'Annah; 'ave pity,' implored the unhappy defendant. "'W'at pity did ye 'ave on me 'n' th' kiddies w'en ye spent yer wages for drink 'n' beer 'n' w'en ye came 'ome?" was the unyielding reply.

The Judge finally prevailed upon the woman to relax her determination, the condition being that during suspension of sentence the husband is to report once a week to the court and contribute a fair proportion of his earnings, as soon as he obtains employment at his trade of carpenter, to the support of his family.

"'E can come 'ome 'n' try it again," said the lady, "but if 'e fails to keep 'is word, I shan't be h'ntoshed."

Mr. Adamson was arrested one day last April on his wife's complaint, and Judge Morgan pronounced him guilty of battery and peace disturbance and gave him six months' imprisonment on the latter until the six months expired. The man was then both strong of body and defiant of demeanor, but his jail experience reduced his virility and weakened his spirit, while the woman's immunity from his brutal treatment evidently fortified her both physically and mentally in corresponding degree.

Seventeen-year-old Robert McNeil had been employed but a few hours in the dry-goods store of Julius Gloch, 738 Mission street, when he pilfered an ermine neckwrap worth $25, pleaded toothache and went and disposed of his plunder. When he returned to the store he told tale hats on his collar betrayed his offense, and now Judge Morgan is going to sentence him for petty larceny.

Bernard Gaffney advertised in the newspapers about six months ago that he would not be responsible for the debts contracted by his wife, Amilda, because, as he naively explained, she was so reckless in the matter of incurring pecuniary obligations that his earnings as a stenographer at the store were inadequate to meet them. Soon afterward, however, a reconciliation was apparently effected, and the couple dwelt in seeming amity until last Wednesday evening when Bernard was arrested for battering Amilda and biting an arm of her seventeen-year-old son. Then it was disclosed that peace had never been fully restored to the Gaffney household at 65 Broome street.

Mr. Gaffney alleges that Amilda, her brother and her son attempted to oust him from the domicile, the purchase price of which he is paying in monthly installments, and that in the struggle he may have accidentally struck the woman, but is positive he did not bite the boy. Amilda, on the other hand, avers that both the battery and the mayhem were deliberate commissions.

Judge Conlan will hear more details of the case next Friday.

"Spider" Kelly, of roped quadrangle fame, was in Judge Morgan's court to combat J. W. Judd's charge of battery, but Mr. Judd himself failed to appear and a subpoena was issued to assure his attendance when the case is again called, to-morrow.

Mr. Judd, who wears a baby-blue neck-scarf and recently from Los Angeles, complained that he was doing nothing more reprehensible than dallying in the "Spider's" barroom and occasionally purchasing liquors when he was teased upon and grievously treated by the great second.

"After trowin' me outa de joint," said Mr. Judd to the warrant clerk, "he handed me dis," calling attention to the "blackened cuticle" enviroining his left eye.

Among the witnesses of Mr. Judd's ejection, however, there is unanimity of opinion that it was amply justified by the provocation. Not only did he attempt to belittle the pugilistic prowess of J. Edward Britt, but these witnesses, but he cast unjust aspersions on the probity of San Francisco's prize-fight promoters.

"W'y," he alleged to have sneeringly explained, "did you Britt couldn't win a fight anywhere else dan in de city. W'y couldn't he? W'y, because he hasn't got de wallop ter make a hole in a damp newspaper. Dat's w'y. An' a w'y of Britt's head's a pullin' him throo in his prevus fight's 'ed a-bin

RESTORED HIS HAIR

Scalp Humor Cured by Cuticura Soap and Ointment

AFTER ALL ELSE FAILED

"I was troubled with a severe scalp humor and loss of hair that gave me a great deal of annoyance and inconvenience. After unsuccessful efforts with many remedies and so-called hair tonics, a friend induced me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. The humor was cured in a short time, my hair was restored as healthy as ever, and I feel free from any further annoyance. I shall always use Cuticura Soap, and I keep the Ointment on hand to use as a dressing for the hair and scalp. (Signed) Fred K. Busche, 213 East 57th St., New York City.

HUSBAND TAKES WIFE'S JEWELS

Joseph Whalen Disappears With Valuable Diamonds and Warrant Is Issued

TRUSTING WIDOW DUPED

Woman Who Marries Race-track Man Loses Gems and Her Faith in Men

Joseph Whalen, a race-track man, disappeared Wednesday, taking $3000 worth of diamonds belonging to his wife. Judge Fritz issued a warrant yesterday for his arrest on a charge of grand larceny. Mrs. Whalen is broken-hearted over the loss of her gems and the perfidy of the man she loved and trusted.

Mrs. Whalen met the man who became her husband in Arkansas about a year ago. She was then a widow, moderately well off. Whalen showed her marked attention and she became fascinated by him. After an acquaintance of three months the couple were married.

After a visit to Mrs. Whalen's people in St. Louis the couple came to California to live. Mrs. Whalen began to notice that her husband showed a marked disinclination to work, though he kept asking her for more money to go into business. She advanced him considerable sums, but the business did not materialize and she tightened the purse-strings.

On Wednesday afternoon the husband and wife started out on a pleasure trip. Fearing burglars, Mrs. Whalen declared that she intended to take her diamonds with her.

"Oh I wouldn't do that," said Whalen. "I think they are a great deal safer in the trunk." Fearing Mrs. Whalen decided to take his advice.

When the couple had left the house and had gone a few blocks, Whalen suddenly remembered that he had no cigarettes. He went back into the house to get some. Mrs. Whalen thought that he stayed a little longer than necessary. She said nothing about it, however.

When the couple were returning to the house, several hours later, Whalen made some excuse and left his wife at the door. Mrs. Whalen waited for him till late at night. She became alarmed at his absence.

While pacing up and down her room in her anxiety she discovered that her trunk had been broken open and the jewels had been taken. She has not seen her husband since.

In issuing the warrant for her husband's arrest, Clerk T. Fitzpatrick expressed some doubt as to whether the husband could be held even if he has taken the jewels. Judge Fritz signed the warrant, however.

BURGLARS LOOT SALOON.—Burglars entered the saloon of Harry Miller of 484 McAllister street at an early hour yesterday morning and got $10 and several boxes of cigars. An entrance was gained by forcing open the front door. The cash register was pried open and the contents removed. Miller made the discovery when he came to open up at about 6 o'clock.

SMALL EXPLOSIONS STARTLE THE JURY

Realism Adds Excitement to Trial Before Judge Graham.

Just to show how it happened that "a highly explosive mixture of gas and air" upon coming in contact with an electric spark or other detonating cause, unloosed its confined powers and tore some flats at the corner of Leavenworth and Washington streets half to pieces, Professor Edmund O'Neill of the University of California produced numerous miniature explosions in Judge Graham's court yesterday. The miniature explosions were for the detection of the jury that is to determine whether or not Walter H. Linforth, owner of the misused flats, is entitled to $10,000 damages, for which he is suing.

During the several days of the trial photographs of the damage wrought and torn and blasted gas flares have been within the vision of the jury. These, together with the terrible pictures Attorney Samuel M. Shortridge, for the plaintiff has been painting, have served to upset the nerves of all connected with the case. So it was with some trepidation that the jurors watched Professor O'Neill manufacture gas through the medium of a bewildering chemical apparatus, detonate it and hurl the shrapnel coppers of the gas chambers high in the air.

Each succeeding experiment was watched with increasing alarm, but the danger of a stampede was not imminent until a newspaper photographer exploded a pound or so of flashlight powder when nobody else was looking. Then, with one accord, the members of the jury began to climb beneath their chairs and peer wildly around for places of safety toward which to flee. Judge Graham retained his nerve and his smile, however, and the jury was soon calm enough to proceed with the hearing. After concluding his experiments Professor O'Neill continued giving testimony, saying:

"A very small amount of gas, if properly confined and brought into contact with a flame or spark under certain circumstances, would do even greater damage than that wrought at the Washington and Leavenworth street flats."

"But," said Attorney Shortridge, "have you ever made experiments in blowing up flats?"

Disclaiming any such anarchistic practices, the professor was released from the stand and the case continued until this morning.

Verdict in Huber Case. A. Coroner's jury decided yesterday that John Huber, who was found dying of a fractured skull at Eighteenth and Minna streets last Saturday and who died at the County Hospital on Sunday morning, was knocked down by Joseph H. McGee. The jury, however, exonerated McGee of any murderous intent. It was shown that he was under the influence of liquor and had no serious quarrel with Huber.
