

Chief of Police Dinan Is the Reputed Owner of a Notorious Resort

Elisor Biggy's Busy Day

DON'T MENTION GRAFT IN THE NORTH CORRIDOR OF ST. FRANCIS HOTEL

If You Do, Biggy Will Get You for Talking in Proximity to Jury

GUARD AND CENSOR

Elisor Passes Upon Conversation and Edits Press With Shears

"Sh-h-h-h" Don't try to walk down the north corridor of the St. Francis hotel and talk about the graft situation or the Schmitz trial. Elisor Biggy and a half dozen guards are lounging around in unsuspected corners, and they'll get you, sure.

There's a military organization and a censorship in the north corridor that has been reduced to a science, and it's a dangerous place to let expressions of civic pride or anything else pertaining to municipal government find utterance, for in that corridor are lodged the twelve members of the Schmitz jury and no whisper of anything connected with the trial or the local graft situation must reach their ears.

Biggy doesn't do things by halves. When the morning papers are put in an appearance they are subjected to a merciless mutilation with a pair of sharp shears in the hands of the elisor and every word pertaining to the trial, graft developments or even municipal politics is carefully eliminated. Of course, the news on the back of the paper containing this sort of matter goes also and the result is that when the papers reach the hands of the jurors they consist principally of want ads, with here and there the continued end of some item of which the most interesting feature has gone into the waste basket.

Yesterday even the Sunday supplement of The Call suffered, for on one page was O. Henry's story of "The Gentle Grafter," and this excited Biggy's suspicion and led to its condemnation. So, also, some articles in the monthly magazines because their titles were suggestive of municipal rottenness.

But this isn't all. Biggy reads every letter addressed to a juror and opens every bundle. Sometimes it's slightly embarrassing, for a package delivered by a young wife or sister is likely to disclose nothing more than a roll of clean underclothing, and a missive may contain more or less tender sentiments, but Biggy is something of a hero in meeting the unexpected and has so far survived.

Just before meal time Biggy lines up the jurors and calls the roll in true military fashion. Then there is a bank attack on the washroom, a splattering of water and rubbing of faces and a silent march to the grillroom across the street.

But they all seem to thrive in spite of being incriminated, and in the past have been a little more in treatment. Biggy has censored them as well as he has the newspapers and periodicals.

CHANGE THEIR PLANS AND SUDDENLY MARRY

Judge Barron and Mrs. Susie Evelyn Hill Surprise Their Friends

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE CALL LOS ANGELES, June 9.—A marriage which will be a complete surprise to many friends of the bride and groom, both in this city and in San Francisco, is that of Judge Henry Clay Barron of Berkeley and Mrs. Susie Evelyn Hill of this city, which was solemnized this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. Henry T. Hazard.

The Hazard family is now in Europe and it had been the intention of the couple to defer their wedding until their return. They suddenly changed their plans, however, and without notifying their friends were married in the presence of a limited number of relatives.

Barron has been intimately associated with the Pacific coast for a score of years. He was a prominent member of the bar in San Francisco for many years, but is now retired. He is an old time friend of the bride. The marriage was the culmination of a romance of long standing.

Wolf and Vannatta Admit Deadfall Closed by Mooney Is Again Doing Business

to obtain an appointment as one of the guards under Elisor Biggy in caring for the jury, but had not been successful. Elisor Biggy said that no application had been made directly to him by Wolf.

Speaking for himself and Wolf, Vannatta said last night: "It is true that I have an interest in this jury, which is purely a personal one. It may be that I am here to see that everything is carried out fairly in guarding the jury, or I might be here to watch Biggy. I think this will develop in time."

"In speaking of a personal interest, do you mean that you are here to watch the jury as a representative of any interest?" was asked.

"Oh, yes; I am here in the interest of the common people," he retorted.

"Are you acting under instructions in remaining here?" "The lid is on," and Vannatta closed the interview without further attempt to efface the impression that he and Wolf were employed through some representative of Schmitz to remain in touch with the jury, and, possibly, to approach jurors with bribes if the chance offered.

BURNS WILL TAKE NO ACTION

Detective William J. Burns said last night that the prosecution had not taken up the matter of the activity of Wolf and Vannatta with any thoroughness, as it was a situation which Biggy or the jury alone must deal with. "We have not looked into this matter," he said. "I will say that the prosecution is taking every legitimate means in its power to safeguard its own interests, and that I have been watching well known jury fixers here in the city. But it would be the worst of crimes if the prosecution should attempt to tamper with the jury in this or any other case—even worse than for the defense to do so—and nobody connected with the prosecution has or will go anywhere near any member of that jury. I have not seen Elisor Biggy to talk with him since this jury was impaneled, nor have any one connected with it in my purpose to avoid the possibility of the slightest suspicion being directed toward the prosecution."

Under instructions given yesterday by Elisor Biggy one member of his guard remains constantly in the rooms occupied by the jurors, in addition to the men stationed in the hallways and outside the windows of the rooms at night. These guards have instructions not to converse with the jurors outside the rooms, a close watch is being kept in the lobby and corridors of the hotel, and the movements of any strangers in the building are closely watched.

FOLLOW JURY TO GRILL ROOM

Wolf and Vannatta remained at the hotel all day yesterday, but nothing occurred as a sequence to the events of Saturday evening, which might serve as a basis for bringing them before the court to explain their presence in the hotel and evident interest in the affairs of the jury. Both men were lounging in the lobby during a part of the day and followed at a little distance when the pilgrimages of the jurors to the grill room were made, but made no effort to speak to any of the members. Although suspicion points strongly to the two men on account of their actions, the circumstances are rounding their presence at the hotel and the knowledge of their past history in San Francisco, no definite proof that they have endeavored directly to approach any juror or interfere with the jury's affairs has been obtained and Elisor Biggy does not consider himself warranted under the circumstances in officially bringing the matter to the attention of the court.

I am thoroughly convinced that Wolf and Vannatta are here for no good purpose and the manner in which they have taken the charges that have been made against them heightens this conviction," said Biggy yesterday. "It looks very much as if they were connected with a wide spread plot to get at the members of this jury, and they are not the only men in and around the hotel who are bear watching. I believe that there are several men engaged in this work, and that these two probably are the leaders. Now that they have been shown up they probably will be more careful and I am not relaxing my vigilance one whit. At present I don't think I would be justified in reporting officially to Judge Dunne, for the jury is safe, and it is simply my business to keep it safe and hold myself responsible to the court. If any overt act is attempted, it will be time to bring the matter to the court's attention."

ALL PACKAGES INSPECTED

The mystery of the package addressed to one of the jurymen which disappeared from the hotel office Saturday night, was partially cleared yesterday, when it was found in the jury's rooms. Elisor Biggy, who has been inspecting all packages and mail, could not account for its presence in the room without his knowledge, but ascertained that it had contained nothing of a suspicious nature when found in the room by its owner. As a result of this incident a new method of examining packages addressed to the jurors was put into vogue yesterday, one of the guards being appointed to inspect them during the absence of the jury and have them in readiness to be delivered to the owners on their return.

The jury passed a quiet day yesterday, owing to the illness of one of the members, which made it necessary to defer the trip down the bay by steamer, which had been planned for the day. The jurymen became sick during the night, and was not well enough yesterday to go on the excursion which had been planned, although he felt much better last night and will be able to attend to his duties in the morning.

Adams and Torrance Arrive in This City

Los Angeles Capitalists Deny That Grand Jury Has Called Them

W. H. Adams of the Adams-Phillips company and J. S. Torrance, two of the Los Angeles capitalists who have been closely connected with the investigation of the Home telephone company's affairs by the graft prosecution and with the prosecution has or will go anywhere near any member of that jury. I have not seen Elisor Biggy to talk with him since this jury was impaneled, nor have any one connected with it in my purpose to avoid the possibility of the slightest suspicion being directed toward the prosecution."

SECRET ABOUT RUEF

The trial of Mayor Schmitz will be resumed today, with the interest centering on Ahe Ruef, who may be called to testify either for the prosecution or the defense. Assistant District Attorney Heney is silent on the plans he has in view, but as the list of witnesses examined before the grand jury has nearly been exhausted by the witness stand, this week will develop whether or not he intends to have Ruef tell of the French restaurant graft.

PROFESSOR LEOTSAKOS DELIVERS A LECTURE

Professor J. P. Leotsakos of the university of Athens lectured last evening to his countrymen in a hall at 230 Eighth street on Greek life, art and literature. Professor Leotsakos is making a tour of America studying western conditions and the educational institutions of the new world. He is strongly impressed with the educational systems of California and speaks in high praise of the university at Berkeley.

In an interview Professor Leotsakos spoke warmly of his friendship for Professor Abbot Putaker, former head of the German department of the university of California, who was discharged some years ago by President Benjamin Ide Wheeler. In the detestation of Professor Putaker, Leotsakos sees an autocratic hand working in a way he deprecates in an institution of learning in a democratic state and country.

Professors Leotsakos and Putaker are both deep and enthusiastic students of modern Greek, while President Wheeler is of the classical culture school. He held a chair in the American college of Athens, the faculty of which is recruited from the foremost classical students, scholars and teachers.

"Kid" Sullivan Poses as Proprietor to Shield His Bosom Friend

According to the gossips of the underworld, Chief of Police Dinan is the proprietor of a tenderloin resort. He owns, it is said, Bloom Brothers' notorious saloon in Franklin street and Ash avenue, a place that was closed by Police Captain Mooney, night after night, because of the female patronage which supported it.

Of course the name of the chief does not appear in front of the resort in incandescent lights, but his interest in the saloon is common talk along Golden Gate avenue. "Kid" Sullivan is the ostensible purchaser.

Sullivan is penniless. At one time he was one of the cleverest pickpockets in the country. He has a "record" in the east, west, north and south as a purloiner of the property of others. He served a term in prison in a middle western state, but otherwise his record as a light fingered thief is unbroken by capture or punishment. He lost his nerve some time ago and turned informer. It was then that he and Dinan commenced to work together, and for years Dinan had the reputation of being the most successful petty thief grabber in the detective department. Dinan's headquarters were at Pratt & Tierney's, and that was where the "Kid" was to be found, Dinan not the thieves and Sullivan gained immunity. Dinan was true blue. The habits of the red light district knew well the intimacy that existed between the ex-convict and the boss keeper of the peace of San Francisco.

The smooth water of their progress were disturbed by Captain Mooney's activities in the tenderloin. The way Mooney disregarded the sentiment of the police department and closed up the women infested resorts resulted in charges being preferred against him by the police chief. One of Captain Mooney's achievements was the closing of Bloom's saloon in Franklin street near Golden Gate, which was a disreputable place and the scene of nightly orgies. Captain Mooney kept after it with such persistence that the women whose presence at one time was the life of the place finally became the death of it. Bloom's saloon went to the wall. Women ceased to visit its red walled rooms and the trade in wine dropped until there were only a few bottles between Bloom Brothers and in solventy. They then went out of business. That was four weeks ago. Saturday night the resort was ablaze again. Women were there in number and the old time life was resumed with Sam Bloom as the manager. The place was not molested. Bloom admits he is no longer the owner of the resort. Like Mulvaney, he has been reduced. He is only the manager. Who owns the resort? "Why, Kid Sullivan, of course," he answers.

The answer to the question is the beginning of the riddle, for the night owls ask: "How could Kid Sullivan own a saloon, and why would he buy it if he could, that had been raided and raided and closed?"

To all of which interrogations the "wise" ones of the unsavory district reply: "That's easy. The 'Kid' and the chief are good friends. There will be no more raids. Sullivan has no better idea of the law than you have, but Dinan can raise enough to buy two saloons."

They do not express surprise at the supreme audacity of Chief Dinan who, while resting under indictment for perjury and an accusation of tampering with the Schmitz jury, still finds time and nerve, they say, to go into the tenderloin saloon business by proxy.

REJECTED SUITOR FIRES TO KILL YOUNG WOMAN

Cuts Her in the Wrist and Then Shoots Himself Through Heart

BLACKFOOT, Idaho, June 9.—Earl P. Stevenson, employed in the D. H. Biethan furniture store, committed suicide last night by shooting himself through the heart. Stevenson, who was about 25 years of age, had been keeping company with Minnie Rogers, the daughter of a wealthy stockman. He called upon the young lady last evening with an offer of marriage, which she declined. He then attempted to kill her with a pocket knife and inflicted an ugly wound in her wrist. The timely arrival of help probably saved her life.

After the attempt on the young woman's life Stevenson procured a revolver, returned to the house, and, failing to gain an entrance, shot himself through the heart.

FLYING FISH BOARD SIERRA IN MIDOCEAN

Lured by Mackenzie Gordon's Voice Finny Covey Come on Deck

There are fish stories and fish stories at this season of the year, but the story told by the passengers of the steamship Sierra is one that is backed by facts.

As the steamship was sailing along from Honolulu on her way to this port a school of flying fish suddenly invaded the upper deck. It was early in the evening and as the weather was warm all the passengers had gathered on the deck to listen to an impromptu concert. It was a bright starlight evening and the passengers could distinctly note the glittering wings of fish as they sped along over the glassy sea.

Just at this juncture all the electric lights in the ship were turned on. Mackenzie Gordon and W. H. Hopkins were singing the "Larboard Watch" when the fish made a sudden dart and dropped on the decks to the great amazement of the passengers. Many of the fish were caught and placed on ice to be brought to port to show to those who doubted the story.

BARBARY COAST THUGS MURDER YOUNG MEXICAN

Messboy of Steamer Sierra Killed by Blow From a Bludgeon

A Mexican named Enrique, messboy of the steamer Sierra, was killed last night by thugs, who struck him on the head with some blunt instrument. Enrique and Antonio Torrelli, a fireman on the Sierra, started out for a cruise along the Barbary coast and when in Jackson street between Montgomery and Sansome two men jumped out from the shelter of a building and felled them to the ground. Torrelli was out on the head and face and when he recovered consciousness found his companion stretched on the sidewalk motionless. Torrelli could find no bruise nor scratch on Enrique. A passing stranger, John Frazier, who was a passenger on the Sierra, notified the police and the victims of the thug attack were removed to the harbor emergency hospital. Dr. Hill examined Enrique and pronounced him dead. He had been struck but one blow, which had left not even a bruise. Dr. Hill thinks Enrique was struck at the base of the brain and that the concussion produced instant death. Enrique and Torrelli were relieved of their watches and chains and about $150 in coin.

Frazier, accompanied by Patrolmen Mulcahy and Gallagher, went out in search of the murderers. Torrelli was able to furnish a good description of them to the police and says he could identify the men if they were caught.
