POISON IN MILK KILLS FOUNDLING HOME BABES

Filth in Miss McPheeters' Farm Responsible for Three Deaths

JURY GIVES VERDICT

Little Waifs Kept in Awful Conditions, Declare Authorities

ALAMEDA, July 12.—Toxic poisoning resulting from impure milk and liquid food was the cause of the deaths of the three nameless infants that have succumbed since last Saturday at the baby farm conducted by Miss Ella McPheeters at 890 Pacific avenue.

The evidence adduced at the inquests today showed that the so-called "home" for waifs was not kept in a sanitary condition and also that the woman keeper of the place was careless of the lives of the babies that she had in charge. Testimony was also given that she knew but little of how to feed and care for infants.

Miss McPheeters will be no longer permitted to conduct a baby farm in Alameda, and has been ordered to close her establishment and turn the two remaining infants in her possession over to some association that will arrange to have the little ones properly cared for.

In giving her testimony Miss McPheeters related how the three babies that died were taken ill last Friday with symptoms that puzzled her. She did not call a physician until Saturday, after one of the babies had died. Dr. L. W. Stidham was then summoned and upon learning the circumstances of the child's death and inspecting the place immediately notified the coroner.

City Chemist A. A. Cunningham testified that he had found traces of toxic poison in the food that had been given the infants and also traces of the same poison in the stomachs, brains, hearts and livers of the babies, which he had analyzed.

An examination of the milk from the dairy and the liquid food from the store showed both to be pure and proved the chemist said that it was only after the food and milk had been exposed in the McPheeters establishment that both had become infected.

SUN BURN

is over-stimulation of the tiny skin blood vessels—capillaries—by the sun's rays. The first inflammation is painful as well as ugly—an unwelcome forerunner of the coveted tan.

Pond's Extract Soap

has two special properties—penetration and healing—which tend to prevent the burning, and which soothe and relieve when it has occurred. Wash gently, but rather very freely; wash off and soap, drying by gentle patting. Do not rub burned surfaces. The Pond's Extract, carried to the over-stimulated capillaries, cools and soothes; relieves the "stinging" smart and, by causing more normal circulation, diminishes the vivid color which too often precedes the dusky tan, so much desired by summer ladies and lazes. Its creamy whiteness indicates its purity. From Your Druggist.
