McARTER FAILS TO LOWER WIRE RECORD

Three Runs Come Over When Angel Shortstop's Wing Goes Bad

By J. R. Jeffery

SEATTLE, July 19.—In spite of the mediocrity of the horses engaged the racing at The Meadows today was fairly profitable, although Rudabek, the odds on choice of the day, lived up to the traditions of hot favorites and finished outside the money. Rudabek's defeat was due to "Cricket" Kelly's injudicious forcing of a fast early pace, his mount quitting all over in the stretch.

Dr. Rowell's failure also cost the public a pretty penny. He had all his foot, but found six and a half furlongs too far to carry his speed. As three favorites were successful the public had the better of the setto with the layers.

Peter Donaleche and his connections brought off a coup with the horse McGrathiana Prince, which won in a gallop. He was backed from 6 down to 2, which hit the ring hard. Metakata, neglected in the betting because of the presence of the novice Lentz in the saddle, was the only surprise. She won on her own courage.

Charles Green was bid up by Early Wright, but was retained by the Baker City stable.

RESULTS OF GAMES

Oakland 5, Los Angeles 2.
Portland 7, San Francisco 6 (10 innings).

STANDING OF THE CLUBS

Club	W.	L.	Pct.

Portland	52	50	.564

It takes more than figures to win baseball games, as can be seen by reference to the score of the game at Recreation park yesterday, when the Oaks took the proud league leaders into camp. While Los Angeles scored only two runs off nine hits, the men from across the bay sent five men over the plate on seven hits. Opposite the name of Delmas, the Angel shortstop, a big 3 looms up in the score under the heading of "errors." These were really responsible for the bulk of the runs made by the opposing team.

Oakland started well in the first inning by scoring the first man up. Smith singled and stole second. He was sent to third on Van Halren's bunt and brought home on Eagan's out. The team did the remainder of its scoring in the sixth inning.

Helmutter hit the right field fence; Eagan walked, and Bliss forced him at second. Helmutter going to third. Bliss walked, filling the bases. Haley singled through shortstop Delmas' hands, scoring Helmutter and again filling the bases. Devereaux thought it was pretty soft down in the shortstop's territory, so he also hit there. Delmas then did the star act of the afternoon. He fumbled the ball in order to get a hold on it and then made a bad throw to the initial sack to cut off Bliss. The ball rolled to the bleachers. To the excited spectators it seemed the entire Oakland team had gone mad and was tearing around the sacks, but as the flying streaks gradually took shape it was seen that only Bliss, Bigbee and Haley were making their way around to the home plate where they could catch the eyes of the official scorer. Four runs satisfied them and they then knocked off the run getting for the day.

The Angels made a bit of a rally in the eighth, but it proved of no avail. Pitcher Nagle was there with a two bagger to center. Bernard, the next man, struck out, but Bliss dropped the ball. This meant that the sphere had to be sent down to first and Nagle took advantage of the play to start for home. He slid into the bag and reached out to touch it, but he slid past, owing to the momentum of his body. Devereaux put the ball on him and he was out, much to his disgust.

Ellis then singled to center and Brashear followed with a hit down the same groove. The ball was relayed in from the field to head off Ellis, but he hit it out and scored the first run for his team. A moment later Brashear made his daring steal of the home bag. This was all Dillon's men could do, as the "cap" was out on a little hit to the pitcher retiring the side. The score:

BOB AND JACK'S COIN HELD OUT BY THE CLUB

If They Expect to Collect, Heavy Weights Must Go to Court

The daring yachtsmen will be in their glory today. Commodore Phillips of the San Francisco yacht club has given a cup for the yacht that makes the best time from the heads around the middle Farallon and back to the starting line in the annual race of the San Francisco club. Of all the yachts in the bay only nine have taken up the gauntlet and will try for the high honors of the Pacific.

Few yachtsmen and the land lubbers appreciate what it means to race around the farthest point west of the United States. Under ordinary circumstances the amateur sailors are satisfied to do their sailing on the bay. It gets rough enough for them there, and when the summer winds have spent themselves and there is but a mild breeze remaining they stick the nose of their yachts outside of the heads and think they are deep sea sailors, without even getting across the bar. The ground swell at the heads is generally enough and they are willing to slack sheets and run for smooth water.

Today, however, the mettle of the yachtsmen will be tried out, and those who are counted among the crews will be able hereafter to walk around the clubhouses on opening and closing days with the air of a pastmaster in the art of sailing.

The sea is a fickle thing, especially off the Golden Gate. From May to October there is always a sailing breeze on the bay, but the wind does not hold as true outside of the heads. It has been known in midsummer to be calm for three days, and yacht owners who have ventured to the deep have had to go on short rations until assistance came to their aid and they were brought back to the waters of the bay. With these facts in mind it is somewhat of a gamble as to who will carry off the honors. Under ordinary circumstances it would be possible to name the winner. But the work sailing across the bar is something new in the game. A yacht may be extremely fast, but when she is sent over the outside course the skipper and crew may be taken seasick. This would slightly handicap any yacht.

The sloop Annie is the scratch boat, but she is of the model of the old school and is handicapped out of the race. The Yankee, the Nixie and the Speedwell should be the leading boats, with the Harpoon close up. If it is rough and there is anything like a sea running it will be up to the Iola, Mischief and the Martha. The other yachts are not in it in smooth or rough water.

One peculiar feature of the ocean race is the fact that Fulton G. Berry, who will sail the Nixie, will be the only one in the race who took part in the first yacht race outside of the heads in 1868, when the yachts of the San Francisco yacht club raced to Santa Cruz.

The start will take place at 9 a. m. today off Point Bonita and from that point the yachts will beat out to the middle Farallon and then slack away sheets and run for home.
