

WOMAN'S BODY FOUND WITH HEAD SEVERED

and may not be of sufficient peculiarity to establish the name of their dead owner.

The head has been severed from the body and the fleshless skull lay to the left of the shoulders and the lower jaw bone to the right.

Bolton, a blacksmith, 21 years of age, of 845 Surrey street, near Glen street, who was operating a Sunday hunt for rabbits on the reservation of the Spring Valley water company, found the remains.

Captain Gronbeck scattered his men over the dunes and hummocks of sand on a quest of the clothing of the dead woman.

Rolph Welling, a surferman from the station found the clothing and later in the afternoon, with a party of newspapermen, traced the progress of the woman from the point, apparently, where she was first attacked to the place where she was killed.

At the eastern end of this place was found a man's black derby hat, much battered and worn, of cheap quality and with the size mark obliterated by the exposure.

There the trail turns sharply to the south for a few feet, and under a low swinging pine tree were found the coat and the skirts of the woman.

Later in the afternoon Welling went over the ground again with reporters from the Call. From the place where the outer garments had been found the sturdy surferman forced a way through the dense growth directly for the spot where the body had been found.

A path was made straight to the ground where the body had been laid. This trail led past the little tree under which, earlier in the afternoon, the surferman had found the white waist worn by the woman.

There can be little doubt that once the woman was in the recess the first attack might have been made. In the struggle her shoes evidently were wrenched off. With bare feet the woman must have plunged into the sharp edged grass and through the thicket.

In the clearing the battle must have continued up the slope. One hundred and fifty feet up the knoll was found the torn and disheveled waist and 75 feet beyond the body.

On the path which a person would naturally take to the sea from the body was found a white handkerchief with the laundry mark "251" on the border.

As this point was argued at considerable length and the attention of the court last week there will be no necessity of another delay in the trial while it is being threshed out.

Deputy Coroners Wheelan and Garland, assisted by Surferman P. Carlson, J. Knudson, R. Walding and T. Polson, knived the body from the grassy slope to the beach, where the morgue wagon awaited it.

ZIMMER MUST TAKE STAND AGAIN TODAY

He Will Be First Witness Called in Case of Louis Glass

MAY NOT ANSWER Second Sentence Will Be Passed Upon His Refusal

Emile J. Zimmer, vice president of the Pacific telephone and telegraph company, will be the first witness placed on the stand by the state when the taking of testimony in the trial of Louis Glass is resumed this morning in Judge Lawlor's court.

It is not expected by the prosecution that Zimmer will consent to testify when called upon this morning and the purpose of placing him on the stand as the first witness of the day is to open the way for resentencing him to the county jail at once for another five days for contempt of court.

The first witness after Zimmer will be Supervisor Thomas Loneragan, who was on the stand last Wednesday when the great legal battle between Delmas and Henry was precipitated by the objection of the defense to the admission of his testimony.

Under Judge Lawlor's ruling the testimony of supervisors aside from Boxton, who is the one mentioned in the indictment on which the case is based, is not admissible as evidence of similar crimes, such as would simply tend to show the state of mind of the defendant or establish other crimes not related to the one set forth in the case at bar.

The defense is prepared to enter another formal objection when the effort is made to secure this testimony today, but Henry contends that all the bribes were but parts of a single design on the part of the defendant to secure the defeat of the application of the Home Telephone company for a franchise, and for this purpose, under Judge Lawlor's decision, the testimony can be introduced, even though it at the same time establishes other crimes than the one charged.

Not until the opening of the second act of "Swell Elegant Jones" last evening at the Van Ness theater did our laughter become irrepressible. That was because Ezra Kendall did not wear his tall and sable hat. Instead of it he had donned a soft white "fedora" that did not savor of comedy at all.

But no sooner did the familiar chapeau appear than we felt there was fun coming, and it did not disappoint us. It entered without being cried aloud, there was no orchestral inquiry as to where Mr. Kendall got it, nor did he converse through it. Yet it seemed to be hardly less responsible for his laughter provoking ability than the life of the play is dependent upon him.

The remarkable thing about the hat is its appearance of respectability. There is nothing suggestive of rakishness either in its shape or Mr. Kendall's way of wearing it. Almost clerical in its severity of style and color, a Connecticut parson might don it without inviting reproach from his flock.

I have said so much about the hat because there is so little of interest to say about the play. Like its predecessor in the Kendall repertoire, "Swell Elegant Jones" is a rickety framework of plot, upon which is hung as many jokes of the Kendallque brand as it can bear without entire sacrifice of coherence.

The scene is a small Indiana village, and all the characters are Hoosier types, much exaggerated. There is nothing very ingenious in any of the situations, but the dialogue and the manner of its delivery being mainly responsible for the laughs. Every line is either a pun or a bit of homely philosophy.

While working on the dredge at the canal yesterday Pedro Lupurio and a companion were startled when they dragged from the water a heavily laden sack. Their alarm was increased when they discovered that the sack held the body of a baby about three years old, which had apparently been dead for some days.

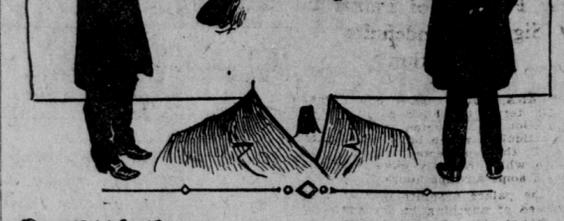

As soon as he could bring his car to a stop he returned to investigate and just before he reached the spot there was a heavy explosion. Upon examination a fus was found. Reinforcements were summoned and the policeman and car crew left in pursuit of the wreckers.

Is now reached by the Yosemite Valley railroad. No wearisome and dusty staging. Spend your vacation among the cliffs, crags and lovely waterfalls, now at their best only a few hours from San Francisco.

San Francisco's loyalty to its stage favorites was hoisted demonstrated yesterday afternoon when James and Eddy the Chapman Neill made their first entrance at the Orpheum.

But, as is usual in such cases, predilection ceased to sway the assemblage after the welcoming handclaps were exhausted. Then it depended upon the two players to determine the strength of the final applause.

The "Lady Across the Hall" is its title, and its story is a comedy incident reflective of small ingenuity in construction and little brightness in narration. It is the "business," the bits of stage art, introduced by Mr. and Mrs. Neill that makes the "play-let."

After Constable Milo Crosby, father of the owner of the saloon against whom Lauer holds a grudge, had obtained admission of guilt, the constable had to work hard to prevent some of the excited residents from removing the prisoner from the jail and inflicting summary punishment on him.

Mrs. Rebeck Martin, who was taking care of the Griswold residence while that family is visiting in Oakland, ran from her bedroom just in time to escape the flames. The roof was ablaze and she had to jump through a window.

MAYOR TAYLOR SEEKING NEW POLICE CHIEF

City Executive Will Get Rid of Dinan as Soon as Possible

TO MAINTAIN ORDER Names of the Supervisors May Be Given Out Today

Mayor Taylor has practically completed his list of supervisors and may make an announcement of his appointments today.

In addition to Henry Payot, H. U. Brandenstein, A. Comte Jr. and A. A. d'Ancona there is but little doubt that F. W. Dohrmann and George L. Center have agreed to accept places on the new board.

As soon as the board has been completed Mayor Taylor will find a means of getting rid of Police Chief Dinan. It is known that Dr. Taylor has no confidence in Dinan and has asked some of his advisers to suggest a man fitted for the position.

Former Chief Wittman has been pulling every string within reach to regain his old place at the head of the force, and several of his friends have appealed to Dr. Taylor in his behalf.

Mayor Taylor had hoped to go leisurely in the work of reforming the departments, but the recent occurrences in the Mission have put a new complexion on the matter.

THE HAGUE, July 21.—The Korean delegation left today for London. Many rumors are in circulation and according to one of them the Koreans have been the Japanese instruments for causing such a situation as would justify the abdication of the emperor and the practical annexation of Korea by Japan.

SEOUL, July 21.—There was some outward improvement in the situation today and General Hasegawa, commander of the Japanese troops in Korea, withdrew one of the machine guns from Palace square.

The two government arsenals are guarded by Japanese soldiers, although the number is not large, and they are under orders to explode the magazines if they find themselves unable to defend them.
