FAVOR TROLLEY PERMIT FOR PACIFIC REVENUE
Committee of Supervisors Recommends Granting of the Petition

PROTEST UNHEEDED
Manager Black Says Cable
Can Not Be Run in Thoroughfare

The street judiciary and utilities committees of the supervisors, sitting in joint session yesterday afternoon, decided to recommend that the United Railroads be granted a permit to operate a trolley line for one year in Pacific avenue from Polk to Divisadero streets. This decision was reached after hearing the arguments of property owners for and against the proposed granting of the permit.

L. C. Cavallader and A. J. Rich, representatives of the San Francisco trolley board; Lester G. Burnett, secretary of the Western Addition Improvement club, and several of the property owners in the district affected spoke in favor of granting the permit. They said they were tired of walking, having been without streetcar accommodations since the fire, and believed that they should be given relief.

Elliott McAllister and Oscar Sutro opposed the granting of the permit. They said the United Railroads should be compelled to give a cable service, the same as it did before the disaster. Sutro declared that the majority of the property owners along Pacific avenue were opposed to a trolley system in that street.

Manager Black of the United Railroads said it would be impossible to install a cable system in the power house at Market and Washington streets was too small to accommodate the additional machinery.

Thornwell Mullally, assistant to President Calhoun of the United Railroads, however, said that the company had no desire other than to serve the public, as the operation of a trolley line in Pacific avenue would entail loss on the corporation, because the system would not receive sufficient patronage to make it self-sustaining.

"If we are granted permission to run a trolley line," said Mullally, "we will have it operating within 30 days, and within 18 months we will have a direct line to the ferry. The property owners don't want the trolley, we will abandon the line and let the city use the avenue as a boulevard, if it wishes."

Supervisor d'Ancona moved that the committee recommend to the entire board that a temporary permit to run one year be granted to the United Railroads. Murdoch seconded the motion, which was carried by the votes of d'Ancona, Booth, Murphy, Sullivan and Central supervisors. The committee's recommendation and Molera was excused.

QUARTERS FOR COURTS
The supervisors decided yesterday to rent the second floor of the Towle building at the north west corner of McAllister and Hyde streets for two years for the use of the criminal departments of the superior court. The rental will be $2,400 a year.

CONTRACTS ARE AWARDED
The printing committee of the supervisors awarded the contract yesterday for printing the municipal ordinances to the Hayden company, and the contract for publishing 7,000 copies of the ordinance as amended to the Neal publishing company.

DIFFICULT FOR GIRL TO COMMIT SUICIDE
Eva Connelly's Fourth Attempt to Die Is Frustrated by Policeman Phillips

Eva Connelly made her fourth attempt to kill herself last night by jumping into the ocean from the Olympic club pier. Policeman William Phillips saw her wandering around the beach, and when she walked out on the pier he followed her; and she had no sooner plunged into the seething surf than he grabbed her by the hair and dragged her out. She was taken to the central emergency hospital, where she was pumped out and will soon be as good as new.

About two years ago she tried to end her existence by taking carbolic acid. At that time she was adjudged insane, and for a time was kept in the Napa insane asylum. She was released about a year ago, and since that time has jumped into the ocean three times.

U. S. NAVAL VETERANS

Members of Phelps Squadron No. 12
Will Examine Navy Yards
December 29

The members of Phelps squadron No. 12, United States veteran navy, are looking forward to a trip they are to take to Mare Island December 29. They are to go as guests of Captain Thomas Phelps Jr., U. S. N., and will be taken on a naval tug. On their arrival at Mare Island they will disembark and make a tour of the navy yards. The tug on which they are to make the journey will leave Clay street wharf at 10:30 a. m., and it is intended to make the trip occupy the entire day.

Members are noted that they are entitled to bring their male friends along and that refreshments will be served.

ACCUSED OF STARVING DOG
Martin L. Smith, owner of the Alaskan dogs that form a feature of "The Alaskan" at the Alaskan, was arrested yesterday on a warrant from Police Judge Shortall's court charging him with cruelty to animals. The complaining witness was M. Hennessey of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Hennessey alleged that Smith had tortured one of his dogs and starved it to death. Smith denied this and said that the dog was suffering from the mange and was unable to take care of food. The dog had been with him since July, he said, and this was the second one he had lost out of the 12.

SECURES HEAVY DAMAGES
The Best manufacturing company of San Leandro has secured a verdict of $35,000 against the Holt manufacturing company of Stockton by a jury in the United States district court. The Best company sued the Holt company for $100,000 on the ground that the Holt company had secured patents held by the Best company. Both concerns manufacture steam traction harvesters. The case has been before Judge Van Ness a month. The verdict was given to the jury Thursday afternoon and the verdict was reached Thursday evening.

Gossip of the Railroads
"Are you that Jay Adams who lives in that there house?" asked a stout and wheezy individual of the railroadman one morning.

"I am Jay W. Adams," he answered with a certain dignity, not liking the accent on his first name.

"I am a special watchman," continued the man, stopping to take breath and puffing like a locomotive going up grade.

"A special officer. My duty will be to keep watch and ward over your valuable person while you sleeps, and also your personal belongings. With me as special officer you need not worry, and sleep as if you were a real dead one."

"Indeed," said Adams, satirically. "And what is the cost?"

"One dollar a month. No, no; not a cent less. I hate to cut prices, but seeing as it's you I'll take 50 cents."

"What's your protection?" pursued Adams. "Pardon me, you are so stout that you could not catch your own shadow. How about a burglar?"

"I can catch an thief," he responded indignantly. "I don't catch nothing. All I do is to blow a whistle every time I pass a house, and then you can feel comfortable and know that I'm around."

And Adams says he did know that he was around, for he never saw the lights out of the house than the special began to blow his whistle, and instead of allaying fears he made every member of his home imagine that a locomotive was charging into the house.

The trafficmen of the transcontinental lines will convene in Chicago on January 13, and at this meeting will be represented the trunk line association and also the central freight association. There will be the most important convention that has been held by the transcontinental association for many years. Final arrangements will be made to meet new conditions brought about by the amended interstate commerce act and rulings of the interstate commerce commissioners. A final check will be made of the east and west bound transcontinental tariffs, and, if necessary, a committee will be appointed to make a large amount of money, and it is presumed they will be more complete than any similar publications that have been compiled during the life of the transcontinental association. The western lines will be represented by the following companies and individuals: Donnelly of the Santa Fe; G. W. Lucas of the Southern Pacific; T. A. Sloan of the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake line; J. G. Woodworth of the Northern Pacific; E. B. Calkins of the Oregon Railroad and Navigation company; Sidney W. Garratt of the Union Pacific and W. P. Kenney of the Great Northern.

W. C. Donnelly when in Chicago takes no chances regarding the weather. He always carries an overcoat, as the climate, he declares, may be torrid one moment and arctic the next. He was in the Auditorium on one occasion wearing his top coat, to carry it more easily, when he was noticed by a group of people.

"That chap over there. The nice man with the overcoat on! Gee whilkins! He must have come from a cold climate! Probably he is from Dawson."

"Not at all, gentlemen," replied Donnelly. "I have been in Chicago before and I run no risks from your blizzards, even in July. The only warm and comforting things in your town are your jokes. They are so old and so common."

And Donnelly says he was never referred to as "that nice man" after that.

W. H. Remington, formerly of Sale Lake City and now of Seattle, is in the city. Remington is one of the greatest sportsmen in the world. He has his latest scheme is to build a road from the town of Celilo, where the Des Chutes river empties into the Columbia, to the cascades, where the stream takes its rise. Unfortunately for Remington the time has been so short and propitious for his building a railroad through the middle of Oregon, and he will postpone his enterprise to a day when money is easier.
