

Ned had a brand new quarter on this crisp October day. He thought he'd buy a sausage and eat it on the way. The sausage man with greedy eyes espied Ned's quarter bright, As deftly he with skilful hand a sausage brought to light.

His hand closed on the shining coin, a wicked man was he. "I think I'll keep the whole of it," he said with fiendish glee. When Whisk saw little Ned in tears it made him very sad. His magic wand he brought in play to make the boy's heart glad.

He trained its powers upon the box, the sausage man cried out; The beasts which climbed out then and there put sausage man to rout. He never once in all his life had seen so strange array Of beasts who surely loved him not. They drove him off that day.

They chased the wicked sausage man as though upon a bet. From last reports, I'm very sure, the thief is running yet. To Ned the sunbeams brought much luck; don't show too much surprise. Ned runs the sausage stand himself, which I hope you'll patronize.

THE BAD DREAM THAT MADE BILL A BETTER BOY

WILLIE! YOU STOP BLOWING IN THAT HOSE! I WILL TELL YOUR FATHER WHEN HE COMES HOME!

HE AIN'T COMING HOME TILL LATE. SEE! AND HE DON'T CARE IF I DO BLOW IN THE PIPE!

WHAT BILL DREAMED THAT NIGHT

CHUBBY! I AM GOING TO BLOW BACK ALL THE WATER IN THE PIPE!

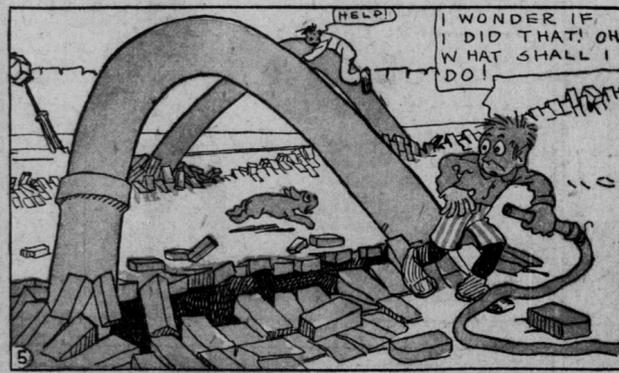

THESE MEN WILL WANT TO DRINK FROM THIS HOSE BUT I WILL BLOW ALL THE WATER BACK!

GEE! BUT THIS IS HARD WORK!

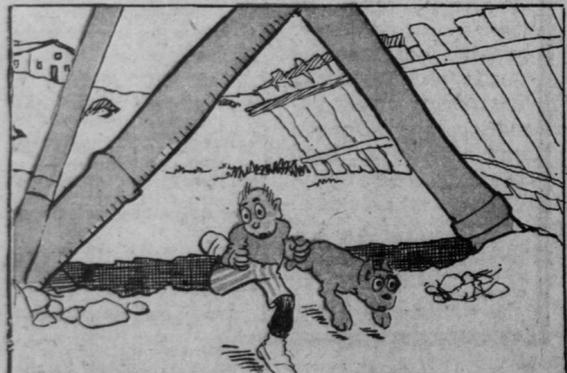

WHAT WAS THAT AN EARTHQUAKE?

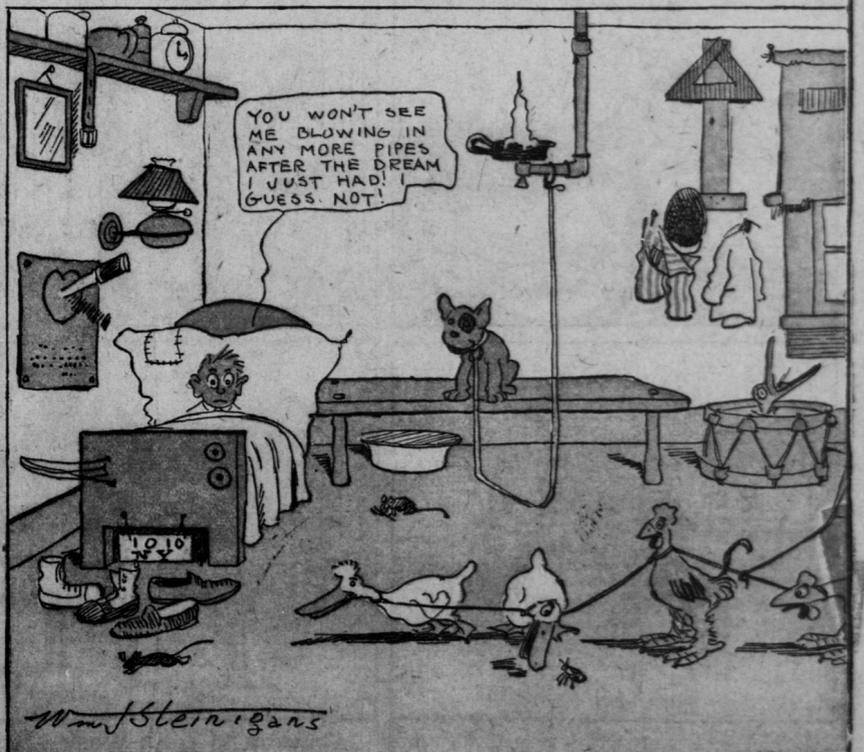

HELP!

I WONDER IF I DID THAT! OH WHAT SHALL I DO!

MAMA! MAMA!

YOU WON'T SEE ME BLOWING IN ANY MORE PIPES AFTER THE DREAM I JUST HAD! GUESS NOT!

Wm. Steinigans

