LAWYER ATTACKS IMMIGRATION ACT

Carroll Cook Contends Aliens Are Deported Without Due Process of Law

A point was raised in a habeas corpus proceeding yesterday in the United States circuit court by Attorney Carroll Cook, which, if upheld when taken to the federal supreme court, will nullify many of the powers given to immigration officers by the general immigration act. The immigration act provided that when an alien was thought to be unlawfully in the country, he could be taken before the immigration commissioner and deported without the right of summoning witnesses to testify in his behalf. Under this provision thousands of aliens, principally Chinese, each year are sent back to their native lands. Cook contends that this is in violation of the clause of the constitution that states "No person shall be deprived of his liberty without due process of law." Cook alleges that the entire proceedings for the deportation of a foreigner—the failure to provide a full hearing on the part of government inspectors, the denial of the right to subpoena witnesses and the case lying entirely in the power of the immigration officers—do not constitute due process of law. If Cook's contention is upheld it will be necessary for the government to institute individual proceedings in the federal courts against every alien it is thought desirable to deport, instead of the arbitrary decision of the commissioner.

MARINE OFFICER'S WIFE GETS DECREE

Mrs. C. M. Perkins Declares Futile Fight for Vindication Broke Up Home

now a cadet in the United States naval academy at Annapolis. She said that her husband had moods of temper which caused her and her sons great sorrow, and in his anger said things that he would never have said in his normal condition. These fits of temper were at the bottom of the charges made against him following his removal from the command of the marines when the United States began active preparation for the policing of the canal zone at Panama four years ago. He was relieved of his position and summoned before a board of inquiry, which rendered a verdict of "temperamental unfitness for duty." It was alleged in the findings that his outbursts of passion and his violent language used to the officers and men under him disqualified him for further duty. The findings of the court were revoked, according to Mrs. Perkins, and Colonel Perkins voluntarily tendered his resignation. He was retired under a pension allowed after 30 years of service, and the incident, as far as the naval authorities were concerned, was thought closed. Colonel Perkins, however, thought otherwise, and since then has spent practically all his time in attempting to refute the first findings of the court, and time after time has filed charges with the Washington officials. The naval board was accused of "railroading" him out of the service. He took the matter to the president, and it was suggested that he should place the situation in the hands of his congressman. This was done and a bill restoring him to full position in the marine corps and back pay for the time of his absence was introduced and passed through the lower house. The senate, however, did not take up the bill, and it died in committee. Two years after the failure of congress to restore him Colonel Perkins left Berkeley for the east to renew his efforts to regain his active commission. He has spent the last 24 months, according to Mrs. Perkins, on the Atlantic seaboard again trying to put a bill through congress. He made his departure after a long and difficult session with Mrs. Perkins, in which she flatly refused to accompany him on what seemed to her to be a useless errand, and said in pointed words that he should drop the whole matter, as he was wasting his time and money in seeking restitution which would never come. Perkins is said to have declared that he placed his honor as a man and his rank in the marine corps above every other consideration, and that home and family meant nothing to him without them. He then departed with the declaration that he would never again come to this state. After corresponding with him and sending his personal effects, Mrs. Perkins a few days ago applied to her attorney, Andrew Thorne of San Francisco, to begin suit for divorce. The papers were filed sealed and at the hearing today Mrs. Perkins was granted the interlocutory decree with alimony of $140 a month for the maintenance of her children. Mrs. Perkins, who is the daughter of G. W. Perkins, a capitalist of San Francisco, declared that although the idea of divorce was very repugnant to her, she took the only step which seemed advisable. Colonel Perkins placed his position in the marine corps above every other consideration and his family and home suffered accordingly. He left here two years ago with the declaration that he would not again return to California. Therefore, after a reasonable time, a year for divorce. Although he is a man of honor and a gentleman, Colonel Perkins has a violent temper, and his outbursts made life a burden during his spells. Mrs. Perkins is a graduate of Mills college and a woman of culture and refinement. She is prominent in society, army and navy club life in the bay cities and is considered wealthy in her own right. She was married to Colonel Perkins at Sausalito in 1890, which he was a lieutenant in the marine corps, stationed at Mare Island. Colonel Perkins was one of the best known marine officers in the service. He is a graduate of the Annapolis naval academy. He served in the Philippines and with the possession of the canal zone by the United States he was placed in command of the entire marine corps of that district. He had only been there a year when charges of unfitness were filed against him and the board of inquiry summoned.

company send down literature and arguments to the board?" "There was a can full of the stuff," said Boxton with a gesture of disgust, denoting that arguments of a more pleasant kind were necessary. "Did you talk with Ruet about the Home telephone company?" "Ruet never talked," said Boxton bluntly. The witness denied that he had ever uttered a speech saying that "the supervisors were not in business for their health." SUBSERVIENT TO BOSS Schlesinger tried him on the famous affidavit, asking him why he signed it. "Merely to brace up the weaker members of the board," said Boxton. "And you were not a weak member?" Boxton smiled his acknowledgments at what he considered a well turned compliment. "I signed that thing," he said, "because the man who elected me to the position of supervisor, Abe Ruet, asked me to sign it. I would have signed anything for him." "When you signed the affidavit, which says that you knew of no bribery, did you know that there was such a crime as bribery?" "Oh, yes," said Boxton airily. "Did you know that it was a felony?" "Oh—I didn't think much about it. I knew it was a crime, but I did not bother about what kind of a crime it was." TWO ATTORNEYS ON STAND The other witnesses were Attorneys William Thomas and R. M. Erick, who represented the Home telephone company in its negotiations for a franchise. They testified to making the application for the franchise and such other routine matters. On cross examination both of them declared that they did not know of their own knowledge, or any bribing of supervisors, or any other irregularities in the proceedings. There is believed that all the testimony will be in today. Judge Seawell refused to delay the hearing an instant and declared yesterday that he hoped to see the conclusion by Wednesday at the latest.

Malley took a whisk broom and was leaving with it when one of the waiters asked him to return it. Malley, it was alleged, struck him. Policeman Cox was called in and Malley and Gray were arrested. "Why, there's nothing to it," said Malley when questioned by Police Judge Shortall yesterday. "We have been eating there right along and we were just laughing and having fun with the waiter, who got mad and sent for the policeman." The cases were dismissed, the judge making them promise not to go to the cafe again.
