New Officers Elected Without Opposition and State Convention Adjourns

is said, from a few of the members of the Los Angeles district, who feel that they have been at considerable expense this year in entertaining the members of this convention, and were inclined to think the demands upon them were too great.

The donations requested are scheduled on the membership of the different districts and the distance from San Francisco, as follows: Northern district, $500; San Francisco district, $2,000; Alameda district, $1,800; San Joaquin, $550; Los Angeles district, $2,500; and southern, $1,800.

The other two resolutions introduced the international peace movement and the proposal to introduce moving pictures in the public schools as educational factors.

NEXT MEETING PLACE The matter of the next meeting place occasioned considerable discussion and resulted in the unprecedented action of voting to leave the decision to the state board.

The president read a brief report of her aims and achievements during the year and recommended that the standing committee of the state federation be changed to departments and that the question of combining certain departments be considered for presentation next year.

At the close of this Mrs. E. D. Buss of Bakerfield, made a rising tribute of thanks and appreciation given Mrs. R. H. Robbins, the retiring vice president, upon whom has fallen the entirely unexpected burden of presiding during most of the convention which was given with continued applause.

It was announced that Mrs. J. B. Hume and Miss Blanche Morse, who have edited the Courier, the semi-official organ of the state federation, during the last year, had made a satisfactory arrangement with the organization of clubs and will continue the publication of the magazine.

Practically all of the clubwomen have departed, and the convention of 1911, the largest in the history of the state federation, has become a thing of the past.

Mrs. Haffner Tells How To Make Meat Dressing

This is the way Mrs. Haffner makes cream sauce, as shown in The Call's free cooking lectures: Into three tablespoonfuls of butter which has been melted, mix three tablespoonfuls of flour, and when it is cooked add two cups of milk, or a cup of milk and a cup of meat stock, which have been heated almost to the boiling point.

COOKIE AND SAUCE RECIPES ARE GIVEN

Pupils at The Call's Lectures Sample Foods and Find Them Delicious

Cream sauce and oatmeal cookies were the subject yesterday of Mrs. Bertha Palmer Haffner's discourse in The Call's free cooking lecture at Hale Brothers.

White sauce is always much better if it is made half on stock and half on milk, so yesterday this was possible, so all milk was used. Mrs. Haffner put two cups of 3-C whole dry milk to heat slowly, then in another pan put three tablespoonfuls of butter and when it had melted stirred in three tablespoonfuls of Sperry's flour.

This sauce is good for all kinds of creamed vegetables, meats or foods, such as rice or macaroni that are served as gratins. Mrs. Haffner used her sauce to make rice au gratin by putting into her casserole first a layer of rice, then enough cream sauce to cover it and a sprinkling of cheese, which she had grated ready for use. This was repeated until the dish was filled to the top, when it was set in the oven to brown.

There was some more bread made into loaves yesterday, and Mrs. Haffner gave the recipe for making the starter for yeast to be used in those used with her liquid yeast recipe, or, in fact, any yeast at all.

The starter is made by scalding some flour with boiling hot water, covering it and setting it away until it is thoroughly leavened and puffed up. It takes a long time for it to reach this stage, but it must not be made into liquid yeast until it is fully ready.

The cookies were made of Sperry's rolled oatmeal which had been thoroughly cooked. To six cupfuls of the oatmeal three cupfuls of sugar were added and thoroughly mixed. The eggs were then separated and whipped into the batter. Three cups of chopped pecans, followed by a cup and a half of melted butter, were added next. There are two ways of making the cookies: one is to drop them by the spoonful on a pan lined with buttered paper and to cook them, letting them bake in the rough state just as they fall from the spoon. For these cookies a rounded tablespoonful of flour to each cup of oatmeal is added to the batter, but for the other way, which was made yesterday, Mrs. Haffner added four and a half cups of flour and made quite a stiff batter. It was then turned out on a board on which four cups of flour had been placed and with the spatula the flour was kneaded in until it formed a dough that could be handled. It was then rolled out until thin, sprinkled with brown sugar and cut out. A half pecan was placed in the center of each as a garnish. These cookies must be baked in a moderate oven.

Rice cookies are made the same way as the oatmeal and pecan, the only difference being that white instead of brown sugar is used in their composition. While the bread contest paper was being passed Mrs. Haffner showed how to decorate a fruit salad with whipped cream. The salad had been made in the morning out of Del Monte canned pineapples and peaches and fresh bananas and oranges. The fruit from the cans, which had been heated and to which Kaffir lime juice had been added, was poured over the sliced fruit and set to mold. When ready to serve Mrs. Haffner put into her pastry bag a pastry funnel with a star shaper at the bottom and squeezed the whipped cream through it on the jelly. When the entire top was garnished with the mounds of whipped cream she set a maraschino cherry in the middle of each.

The luncheon served by the ladies' aid of the Grace Methodist church consisted of salad, cookies and coffee. A man never forgives you for letting him do you an ill turn. It is usually the tallest man in a crowd who forges to the front.
