President Cator of Election Commission Takes Issue With Webb

Taking issue with Attorney General Webb and other members of the bar, President Thomas V. Cator of the San Francisco election commission clings to his original contention that no code tinkering is necessary to make women eligible for jury duty.

How many times have you been asked in the last ten days "What does this two for one mean?"

Well, boiled down to its essence, it means that if you are ready now to buy a piano or an Autopiano, one dollar is just the same as two, that is, of course, provided you do business with the big piano store on Market Street.
