

AMAZES ADMIRERS IN OPPOSITE ROLES: "REBECCA OF SUNNYBROOK FARM" COMING

Attractive List of Plays Announced for Local Theaters Next Week

By WALTER ANTHONY

The miraculous quality of Robert Mantell's acting had never a more vivid exhibition than yesterday, when he played Orlando in "As You Like It" in the afternoon and "King Lear" at night.

Many of Mantell's admirers went to the Cort yesterday afternoon hoping that the tragedy would appear in the melancholy role of Jacques. They were afraid of him in a lover's characterization. The fact that Mantell has dropped "Romeo and Juliet" from his repertoire this year reinforced the belief that as Orlando he would fall somewhat of youthful suggestiveness; that, in short, something of the "As You Like It" would creep into his behavior.

Behold, then, the surprise. Mantell was the most youthful of Orlando, and planted his sighs on the trees and loved and adored with great fervor and devoted lover than Mantell's Orlando. He realized every element of the impassioned Orlando and he played with the clearest of Rosalinds—Miss Keith Wakemann.

Just how Mantell crept out of the hose of Orlando into the rags of the mad king, in which he appeared that he did so and preserved the illusion of age as he had the illusion of youth must be set down to the technique of the greatest actor on the American stage.

Charlotte Thompson, who since she left San Francisco has made a big name for herself in the world of literature and the drama, assisted Kate Douglas Wiggin in the dramatization of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," which play will be seen at the Columbia at the conclusion of the engagement of "Madame Sherry."

Recently Miss Thompson gave out the following interview on "Youth on the Stage."

"Youth is having its fling on the stage today. About half of the plays that have been successful in the last five or six years had youthful characters in prominent roles. The demand for very young players created by the work of the dramatists of the day has had its effect in bringing a crop of youthful aspirants for stage honors to the front.

"Child labor laws and the work of the Gerry society in New York have not affected the output of plays or of child actors, although in many cases they have had a retarding effect on the plays in most annoying ways, for in Illinois, Massachusetts, Louisiana and other states that contain important child laws, the child actors are producers have to resort to all sorts of subterfuges to escape the technicalities of the laws which govern factory children, and were not intended to interfere with the well cared for little ones of the stage.

"A glance at the list of successful plays of recent days brings to mind 'The Awakening' of Helena Ritchie, in which David is one of the prominent characters; 'The Clansman,' where the incident of Flora, the southern girl, is the pivot of the play; 'Merrill's Blue Bird,' last year's prize play; 'Piper,' which employs troops of boys and girls; 'Edward Peepie,' 'The Little Rebel,' the title of which describes its central figure; 'Cameo Kirby,' which had its young boy as a second hero; 'The Squaw Man,' the chief incidents of which were woven around the young son of the titular character; 'Peter Pan,' Bartie's delightful phantasy, and Kate Douglas Wiggin's 'Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm,' where half grown boys and girls are the chief concomitants of the story.

"In 'The Deep Purple' which comes to the Cort theater Sunday night, Anne Sutherland plays the part of a reformed thief and confidence woman. In the drama she was formerly known as 'Frisco Kate,' and was forced, because of her previous misdoings to maintain apparently a respectable life, but when they pass the thirties and desire to reform, begin by taking lodgers. Any student of life in a great city will understand the psychology of this criminal reformer. 'Frisco Kate' is not certain of himself, or herself. Fear of the police operates to kill confidence. The cheap lodging house is a sort of a bridge between the past and their hoped for future. If one is successful, then the rewards of virtue loom up before; if the venture is unsuccessful then it is easy to slip back into the former existence.

"Such women as 'Frisco Kate' are to be found in Paris, London, New York, San Francisco, Cairo and Constantinople, and my partner in the play, 'Peter Pan,' who has been there says that she may be found also in Nome and Dawson.

THEATER MANAGER IS MIXED IN STATEMENTS

Oakland Court Investigates and Finds No Perjury OAKLAND, Feb. 14.—Under oath on the witness stand in Judge Wells' court today Leland S. Price, manager of the Central theater in Eleventh street, flatly contradicted an affidavit which he made under oath in giving a mortgage on his place. Judge Wells called his attention to the discrepancy and then gave him his choice of standing by one or the other statement. Price deliberated several minutes before saying his oral testimony was correct. Judge Wells had him escorted to Deputy District Attorney Satterwhite's office with the idea that he might be formally charged with perjury.

It was then that Price's attorneys, Benjamin E. Elkins of San Francisco, took the blame, saying that the defense which had been formulated for Price had led him into a trap. Price explained that in dissolving partnership with William H. Hurl, the mortgage had been given to Hurl for $1,500, but he contended that it was only a surface agreement and that he had acted on another oral agreement which they reached. In swearing to the affidavit attached to the mortgage he made the statements as to their terms, which he contradicted on the stand.

Judge Wells foreclosed the mortgage held by Hurl against Price, but gave Price 10 days stay of execution. Satterwhite decided that as Price had acted on the advice of his attorney he could not be charged with perjury.
