with small pale faces at the silence, the size and the separated houses.

Then some began to weep aloud, shamelessly — always without shame.

THE END.

Synopsis of Part I.

In 2150 A. D., the entire earth is governed by the Aerial Board of Control. The Board, sitting in London, is informed by De Forest (U. S.) that the District of Northern Illinois has cut itself out of all systems, and will remain disconnected till the Board shall take it over and administer it direct. The District complains of crowd-making and the invasion of privacy. De Forest, Dragomiroff (Russia), Takahira (Japan), and Piolo (Italy), are empowered to visit Illinois, with the Aerial Fleet, and "to take such steps as might be necessary for the resumption of traffic and all that that implies." The expedition makes its first landing at Bureau Creek, near Chicago. A girl is encountered who, when she recognizes the members of the Board, expresses the rebellious spirit of Illinois by attacking them with various electrical contrivances. They escape and proceed to a point above Chicago. They find the inhabitants in a defiant mood, and the Aerial Fleet bombards the city. The missiles used are beams of light and the high-pitched notes of sirens that paralyze the organs of sight and hearing. When the rebels are subdued, the members of the Board descend, and are met at the landing tower by the mayor of Chicago.

GOATS AND INSURANCE

Everybody knows something about insurance. Almost everybody carries some — life, accident, fire, fidelity, plate-glass, partnership, burglary, marine, or what not; and many occasionally find the payment of the regularly recurring premiums a heavy tax, however greatly they may appreciate the advantages of holding the policies. Everybody knows something about goats; but few would think of associating goats with insurance, or of acquiring goats with a view to reducing the amount of their premiums. Yet a large contracting firm in Kansas City keeps a herd of Angora goats for that very purpose.

The company's yards cover many acres of ground; and the buildings and other equipment thereon represent an investment of several hundred thousand dollars. When the yards were first established, the weeds and other vegetation on the property were considered by the underwriters to be dangerous fire hazards, so much so, that the rates charged were almost prohibitive. It was agreed, however, that if the weeds were kept down, the premiums would be greatly reduced. But the cost of mowing the weeds and cutting down the undergrowth would have been in itself no inconsiderable item in the yearly budget. The company, accordingly, bought a flock of Angora goats and turned them loose in the extra-hazardous yards. The goats now keep the yards cropped as close as a mowed lawn, and not only save the firm a large amount annually in fire insurance premiums, but thrive so well on the objectionable vegetation, and multiply so abundantly, that they have actually returned a considerable profit on the amount of the company's capital that their purchase represents.

A BIBLE IN MARBLE

Near Mandalay, in Burma, is the most amazing "bible" ever executed by devout believers. This monument to religious belief consists of about seven hundred temples each containing a single slab of white marble. On these slabs has been engraved the whole text of the Buddhist Bible, containing more than 8,000,000 syllables. The Burmese alphabet is used, but the language is Pali. The Kuthodaw, as it is called, was erected in 1857 by the last but one of the Burmese kings. This collection of temples is arranged in the form of a square, with a large dominating temple in the center. Each of the engraved slabs is surmounted by an ornamental canopy in pagoda form.
