

IN WOMAN'S WORLD

The Smart Set

THE trouble with Mrs. Vanderbilt is, she doesn't wear diamonds all over her and gold embroidery on the street. Consequently every one is remarking, "How simply she gowns herself!" in tones of sudden surprise or degrees of disappointment and give us our money back at the box office, as the case may be. A few take her quiet taste as a matter of course. But, generally speaking, Mrs. Vanderbilt's costumes are a sad disillusionment.

At the dog show the other day she was inconspicuous in a tailor gown of dark cloth, without even a gold shoe buckle to prove she doesn't care how much she spends on her clothes. Any afternoon in Powell street there are more elaborate costumes.

Helen Gould has educated the public. No one expects anything of her. When she passes through the laurel court or the palm garden, white and gold room, or wherever it may be, in a utilitarian effect of tailored simplicity and millinery of no importance, she will only be wearing the things she is supposed to wear. Miss Gould's singularities of social and sartorial indifference are understood. Mrs. Harriman, too, could afford to dress like the queen of Sheba, and is forgiven her unconcern. With railroads to be personally directed, it can't be expected of her. But it does seem that a Vanderbilt on tour could do more.

In one of the 5 o'clock tea places there is every afternoon a woman who could give Mrs. Vanderbilt "pointers on dress," to her way of thinking and the way of others. Tea time is her hour. Arrayed in purple and fine linen, she is a picture of affluent American leisure. On a recent afternoon it was violet chiffon cut decollete, a deep V before and behind, almost as deep as the V's of Mrs. Blank at Greenways. A necklace of amethysts and diamonds harmonized with the violet chiffon, and a gold chain set with pearls secured gold longnettes, with rings on four fingers. This has more than a suggestion of exaggeration, without doubt, but it is a simple inventory of the costume as it was. The sort of thing that makes Mrs. Vanderbilt so keenly disapproving.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Fenimore were the honored guests at a dinner party given last night at the home of Miss Lillian Van Vorst in Vallejo street. The table decorations were spring flowers with yellow predominating in the color scheme. Mrs. Fenimore was the feted guest at a luncheon given yesterday by Miss Erna Herrmann at which there were a dozen guests. The guests at the dinner last evening given by Miss Van Vorst were:

Miss Marion Martin	Otis Johnson
Miss Marion Stone	Daniel Yokman
Miss Doris Wilshire	Herbert Schmidt
Miss Loraine Malton	Roy Ryson

Women Police Officers Needed In City, Says Mrs. Alice S. Wells

Mrs. Alice Stebbins Wells, woman police officer of Los Angeles, who delivered an address yesterday afternoon under auspices of the W. C. T. U.

Fair Keepers of Peace to Fill Own Niche They Supplement Work of Men With Strong Mother Instinct

"Prevention is now the large word in our dictionary, and the woman police officer is the emphasis on that word," said Mrs. Alice Stebbins Wells, the woman police officer of Los Angeles, who is touring the state and who spoke here yesterday afternoon. She expressed the hope that this city would at no far distant day have women enrolled as members of the force.

Under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, Mrs. Wells is visiting the various parts of California, urging upon the people the necessity of women in police work.

"TWO ARE INTERDEPENDENT" She began by saying that no state could stand alone in its work, nor could any person live unto himself. In this day we must be our brother's keeper, and the city and country are interdependent.

From the country come the young folk to the city and both must be parts of the great social fabric. On the training of the youth of the present day depends their futures. If they have training for moral fiber, efficiency and strength, they will make good, but it is those who come up without this training that produce the human wreckage. It is necessary to build up a great municipal machine to care for these young folk. Heretofore the wreckage has been cared for. Now it is realized that prevention must play a great part and must be utilized to keep men and women normal and keep them good.

THEIR DUTIES MANIFOLD The duties of the woman police officer, Mrs. Wells said, are manifold.

"The woman police officer is," she said, "a perfectly natural, logical step in the hearing of the woes of unappreciated women or deserted wives."

She then told something of what the duties are, the advice to mothers as to keeping their daughters under control, the hearing of the woes of unappreciated women or deserted wives, and the advice to mothers as to keeping their daughters under control.

Double Morality Standard Woman's Fault--By Ruth Cameron

ISN'T it a queer quirk in us that while we women complain because there is a double standard of morality for men and women, it is we ourselves who have done the most to raise and sustain it?

It is we who shut our eyes with noble forbearance upon an unfortunate "little peccadillo" on the part of the other sex, if the sinner be sufficiently interesting and well off. It is we who are willing--nay, sometimes eager--to have the man with a past for a husband for our innocent young daughter--we who are glad to get that fascinating man with the most unflattering reputation as a guest for our functions.

And, on the other hand, it is we who willingly believe every cruel bit of gossip among the members of our own sex, we who are ever ready to deny our sisters the benefit of the doubt, and to condemn them utterly for one sin, no matter how great the temptation to which they yielded. It is we who have made the old law that a woman who has once fallen may never "come back." Praises be to this age of forbearance that this law is no longer so binding as it once was, but it is women who made it, and women who are still trying to enforce it.

A woman was speaking to me the other day about a home which had been broken up by the husband's devotion to an unmarried woman. "I think a girl who goes after a man like that is inexcusable," she said. "Do you think such affairs are always the woman's fault?" I questioned. "Yes, I think they usually are," she answered. "Mind you, I don't condone the woman's sin, but I want the man to receive equal if not greater condemnation. For the girl is sinning against a woman whom she does not know and has no particular reason to love, while the man is sinning against a woman whom he promised to cherish and love until "death us do part," and who is probably the mother of his children.

Loyalty to any abstract thing is almost always stronger in men. Patriotism, loyalty to a business, and even devotion to a place is a more powerful motive in a man than a woman. Perhaps this is why we are so painfully lacking in sex loyalty. I wish women could cultivate that quality. I often hear women deliberately slandering their own sex in favor of the other, saying, for instance, that they think men are more moral and clever, etc., and I am ashamed of them. When women respect their own sex more, it will be more respected. When women are willing to judge the sin of man and woman alike, and, mind you, I don't mean too leniently--just alike--this double standard of morality against which we so often complain, will begin to totter.

Nothing has been found so efficient to keep the scalp clean and healthy, and the hair lustrous, fluffy and growing, as a shampoo prepared by dissolving a teaspoonful of caustrox in a cup of hot water. The hair will rinse easily and dry quickly without streaking. This shampoo prevents brittleness, split hairs and dissolves dandruff instantly.

An extremely good lotion, far better than face powder for whitening the skin and beautifying the complexion, can be made by dissolving 4 ounces of spumax in 1/2 pint witch hazel (or hot water), then adding 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. For taking away that shiny, oily, sallow look and improving a ruddy complexion it is unequalled. It is very beneficial to the skin, does not show nor rub off easily like powder, and gives to the skin such a smooth, refined appearance.

There is economy in purchasing the smaller sizes of California Oranges. For eating purposes they are as desirable as larger sizes, and, as they cost much less by the dozen, housekeepers will find them real economy.

General Jacob B. Rawles, U. S. A., retired, and Mrs. Rawles celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding at an elaborate reception yesterday at their home in Green street. There were several hundred guests for the occasion. General Rawles was formerly in command at the Presidio, where he was stationed at San Francisco during the American war and where he was retired in 1903. The couple were married in Auburn, N. Y., March 29, 1862, and have as many friends in the east as here. Since his retirement General Rawles has made his home in this city. Among those who were in the receiving party with General and Mrs. Rawles were their two sons, W. G. Rawles of Fallon, Nev., and Charles Rawles of this city. Their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Rawles, and their granddaughters, Miss Ethel Rawles, who makes her home with them, were also at the golden wedding reception. The reception was held in green and gold, with great golden bells making a bower in the drawing room where Mrs. Rawles presided. Efforts were made to receive the congratulations of their friends.

Miss Lily O'Connor, who has been enjoying a visit in Coronado, stopped in Los Angeles for a few days on her way home. She is a member of the series of informal affairs. One of the teas given for Miss O'Connor was that at which Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner presided at her home in the southern city.
