The Smart Set

THE brilliant period of cosmetics in San Francisco's history has caused social confusions. Inevitably so. Mistakes can't be avoided with every one rouged alike and low necked gowns for luncheons. It was one of these that caused a contretemps at the St. Francis. It was so very V. There was a charming face above it; a Carmen type—scarlet lips, penciled lashes and shining eyes that were perfectly shadowed and wonderfully expressive when they looked into the eyes of a man across the table.

This introduced the hero and precipitates the situation of French comedy caused by cosmetics. The man was a married man—one of the best known of the younger married men in San Francisco. He seemed awfully interested in Carmen. Two young Menlo matrons who are friends of his wife could see this. They are far from being provincial and narrow minded, and they've lived abroad, and all that, but this, they believed, was going too far. Overdoing it, they agreed, to bring Carmen to the St. Francis for every one to see and admire, and flaunt the French comedy situation in his life. They were frankly indignant, and when the man looked their way with an evident and brazen intention of bowing to them they pointedly didn't see him.

Fancy their shocked concern when the young wife of the hero entered and glanced over the field of tables, and fancy their amazement when she smiled brightly at her husband with Carmen and quickly found her way to his table and cordially, not to say familiarly, greeted Carmen and proceeded to be one of a dejeuner a trois, where she didn't seem at all de trop, to continue in French. It just proved, they told one another, that you can't tell. Distinctions are lost in cosmetics.

There was an interesting visitor from Boston last month who went to a micareme musicale. Her wit is famous in Beacon street, where rouge is not so burning red in the faces of women. "Didn't they all have their lips painted?" some one asked her of guests at the musicale.

"Yes, they did," she said. "Nearly every one; and the ones who didn't looked frightfully anaemic." Which is the sad truth of unpainted faces in a brilliant period of cosmetics.

The bridegroom is well known in this city, where before his entrance into the army he made his home. He is the son of the late General John Babcock and the late Mrs. Babcock, who at present is traveling in Europe. He is a brother of Captain Conrad Babcock, who married Miss Marian Eells, and the late John Babcock, who married Miss Gertrude Eells, was another brother.

PREACHER ILLUSTRATES EVIL OF INTEMPERANCE

PITTSBURG, April 15.—Rev. John N. Underwood of Pittsburg addressed a temperance rally held in connection with the Columbia union conference of the Seventh Day Adventists. He said: That 2,600 wives are killed every year with revolvers, hatchets, knives, clubs and other weapons. That 2,500 babies are killed by drunken fathers, who fall into bed and crush their lives out. That 90 out of every 100 divorces are caused by liquor. That 150,000 men and women go insane every year. That it costs the country $21,329,225 annually to care for the insane from drink, and $7,542,736 to prosecute those who have become criminals from the same cause.

Underwood stated that a procession 72 miles long marched into their graves every year. The money spent for liquor last year, he said, would make a pile of silver dollars 2,387 miles high.
