who like to sew, the material is cut bias and gored about the hips with a seam down the middle front, joined by hand with inexpensive beading. "One does not have to be clever to make several skirts a season, and they make darling gifts," says one girl who is sewing at Santa Barbara this year, with her many other summer diversions. Jabots of fine linen, daintily embroidered and edged with real lace, vie in favor of fascinating ruffles that are embroidered in eyelets at the edge and are devoid of lace. Other fair maids are hemstitching handkerchiefs and putting the initial or monogram in the corner. Others, who surely must be fond of the recipients of the gifts, are beading and jeweling bandeaux for the coiffure. Some of these are wondrous.

One of the younger set is doing one of these exquisite hair adornments in seashell and pink metallic ribbon, studded in rhinestones and pink pearls. A pink cameo is used in the middle, while clusters of pink pearls are surrounded with rhinestones in circles are used at either side. The effect is charming.

At a recent London wedding the gown worn by the bride called forth much admiration. The foundation was of gold and white brocade with draperies of old Venetian point lace, embroidered with pearls. Her plain tulle veil was worn beneath a wreath of flowering myrtle. Four children and six bridesmaids were in attendance. Their dresses were of cream charmeuse and chiffon, with wide belts of gold lace, and instead of hats they wore tulle veils with wreaths of small green leaves.

At another smart London wedding the bride's gown was of pure white duchess satin, the skirt being trimmed with a deep flounce of old Limerick lace, edged with silver braid and orange blossoms, the corsage being a drapery of the lace cascading in front with a cluster of the same flowers. From the shoulders fell a court train of satin veiled with Limerick lace and bordered in silver. The veil was arranged beneath a chaplet of myrtle and orange blossoms.

There was a distinguished gathering at St. Margaret's Wednesday evening, the marriage of the Honorable Guy Charteris and Miss Frances Lucy Tennant recently. The bride wore a dress of soft white satin and carried a prayer book. Her twelve bridesmaids wore white and gold dresses with chaplets of roses overflowing tulle veils. King George and Queen Mary attended the last state ball of the season at Buckingham palace. It opened at 6 o'clock immediately after their majesties had entered. The queen wore a dress of old gold satin trimmed with gold lace and a diamond crown with a pearl and diamond crown with the Kohinoor and wore the Order of the Garter and her family orders.

The king was in the uniform of the colonel in chief of the two Cameron Highlanders. More than 2,000 invitations were issued for the ball. The gowns were magnificent and there was a wonderful display of jewels. It was very noticeable that to a large extent British brocades were worn. The queen's influence in this respect is rapidly reviving an ancient British industry.

When the moving pictures were taken at the Crocker-Whitman wedding it was an occasion for comment by the social world, but the fact is extending to a remarkable degree, and family pictures are the latest craze. Coming generations will not turn the leaves of the family album, but will display lifeless looking prints of individuals sitting stiffly erect in their best clothes with a stereotyped expression of the face. The pictures of great grandmothers and grandmothers will be the happy possession of every family. A string of pictures are taken of the subject, who may laugh, sing, talk and gesture to heart's content and the clever camera man secures every move and change of expression. All one has to do is to turn the crank.

One of the engagements announced recently was that of Miss Harriet Palmer of San Jose and Lieutenant James Ernest Baylis of the medical corps, son of a wealthy Mississippi planter. Miss Palmer has been visiting at Cheyenne this summer, and the announcement of her betrothal to the young officer from the army medical school of Washington was made at that time. During her stay in Cheyenne Miss Palmer was the guest of Major and Mrs. W. W. Foster, who is in the medical corps at the fort. After a visit of several weeks at the fort Miss Palmer returned to her home in San Jose. The wedding will take place in the early fall.

Several hundred guests, many of whom were from this side of the bay, attended the wedding last Wednesday evening of Miss Helen Young and Milton Thomas Farmer, which took place in St. Mark's Episcopal church, Berkeley. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Edward Lamb Parsons. The color scheme of the decorations in the church was green and white, and the green was repeated in the color scheme of the gowns worn by the bride and bridesmaids. The bride wore a gown of green satin draped with white lace and carried asparagus fern. There was a reception afterward at the home of the bride.

The reception rooms and halls were decorated for the occasion with a profusion of green and white lily, which were intermingled with pink sweet peas and ferns. Before an improvised altar of blossoms and greens, which was arranged at the end of the drawing room, the impressive marriage service was read. Rev. W. A. Lindsey of Mariposa, a brother in law of the bride, was the officiating clergyman. At 7 o'clock the wedding march was played by Mrs. W. A. Lindsey. An innovation in the formation of the bridal party was the introduction of Mrs. John Elden, mother of the bride, as the matron of honor. Bruce Martin was the best man. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attired in the conventional bridal satin, embellished in lace, and she wore a long tulle veil held in place by a crown of orange blossoms. Her shower bouquet was of lilies of the valley and bride roses. During the supper, which followed a brief and informal reception by the bride and groom, Mrs. Lindsey sang "Love Is Where the Heart Is," and "The Four Leaf Clover." Mrs. Clark is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Elden. Her father is the owner of the Elden mine in Alaska and a well known capitalist of the northwest. The bridegroom is a graduate of Pomona college, where he received his degree. He is now an instructor in the department of geology in the University of California.

Society Notes

Among the many delightful affairs of the week just past was the marriage of Miss Edith Donovan and Joseph Niderost, which was celebrated in the home of the bride's parents in Broderick street Wednesday evening. Rev. Father Ryan of St. Vincent de Paul's church read the impressive service according to the rites of the Roman Catholic religion. The pretty home was transformed into a bridal bower with masses of hydrangea shading from the most delicate lavender to deep rose. Wood-wardias, redwood, asparagus fern and maiden hair were combined with the blossoms in the formation of the arch and improvised altar and in the decoration of the rooms and halls. The bride was given into her husband's keeping by her father, James T. Donovan. In place of the conventional bridal satin she wore a handsome creation of white charmeuse satin veiled in pearl gray chiffon, and she carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. She wore no veil and her head was unadorned except for a spray of lilies of the valley intertwined with maidenhair. Attending her as maid of honor was her sister, Miss Isabel Donovan, who wore a gown of blue chiffon over white satin and carried a shower of bridesmaid roses. Edmond Niderost was the best man. Only the members of the immediate family and a few of the couple's closest friends witnessed the marriage ceremony, which was held at the home of the bride, which was in shades of brown and tan. Neither bride nor bridegroom were attended. Mrs. Reed is the daughter of Mrs. Emma Stith of 630 Castro street. After an extended honeymoon, which they are passing in Los Angeles and the south, Mr. and Mrs. Reed will return to San Francisco to reside permanently.

At a pretty ceremony held last Saturday evening in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Lake, in Gates street Miss Susie Lake and William Challinor were united in marriage. Rev. Dr. McEnery read the service according to the rites of the Presbyterian religion. The bride, who was given into her husband's keeping by her father, wore a simple traveling suit and a bouquet of roses. There were no attendants for either party. After an informal supper and reception the young couple left for Fresno, where they will make their future home. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Challinor of Pittsburg. He is a contractor in Fresno. Challinor is not only a prominent business man, but he is also a popular clubman. He is a prominent member of the association of Odd Fellows.

The MacDonald home in Fair Oaks street was the scene of a pretty wedding last Sunday when Miss Florence MacDonald became the bride of Earl H. Cheever of this city. Rev. She wore a traveling suit of dark broadcloth and a picture hat to match, and carried a shower of bride's roses. Attending as maid of honor was Miss Annette Hurley, and Malcolm T. Vance was the best man. The marriage was followed by an informal reception and supper, at which the young couple left for Los Angeles, where they are passing their honeymoon.
