Red Sox and Giants Battle Until Darkness Prevents Any Further Play

NEW YORKERS MAKE A GAME UPHILL FIGHT

TIE ELECTRIFIES FANS BOSTON STILL IN LEAD

Score . . 6 to 6

When two baseball teams of the international fame, supremacy and fighting efficiency of the Boston Red Sox and New York Giants struggle for 11 innings to defeat each other and are stopped, deadlocked, 6 to 6, only by darkness, the world stands still and watches them.

Christy Mathewson, the hope of the Giants, single handed held the team that had won the day before at New York—held it against two younger pitchers, Collins and Hall.

The errors of Fletcher of the Giants—whose mitt seemed greased, he dropped so many balls—probably cost the Gothamites a victory. Had "Matty" been given the support his team gave Tesreau Tuesday, the score in games this morning would be one all.

New York fans take gladly the short end of all bets offered on the Red Sox for the series. Will Mrs. New York Fan have to forego her winter furs? Boston still "has the edge."

By PATRICK GALLAGHER

From their coign of vantage under the shelter of the fence around this capacious ball park, where patiently they had waited all night, more than 1,500 shivering, but still enthusiastic fans, saw the sun rise over the back bay fens.

Like a huge and overripe orange looked Old Sol, cupped by a dun bank of threatening clouds—promise of rain or, at best, a dark day. Darkness stopped the game with 11 innings played and the score tied in the eleventh inning.

Boston's peculiar climate flirted with the fans and with the teams. As the hours grew toward midday, the air lost its crispness and gained in stumminess, clamminess. Flashes of brightness were succeeded by lingering intervals of semigloom, with a few heavy splashes of rain to keep the gathered thousands on the anxious seat.

Tie Jolts Bostonese

The tie score of the second game in the world's series was not anticipated by the Boston ball crowd. The odds offered against McGraw's men lengthened from 19 to 8 to 10 to 6. New Yorkers who accompanied the teams from Manhattan in the train which arrived here last night in two sections accepted these odds liberally.

In enthusiasm, good nature and belief in the capacity of their favorites, there was little to choose between today's crowd at Fenway park and that which watched the sensational close of the game in New York on Tuesday when Joe Wood proved himself Joe, the Giant Killer.

There was less noise; or to be more strictly accurate, the noise was of a more graduated, euphonious sort—Boston's way.

When the gates were opened at the park there were approximately 20,000 people already in their places. Quickly the remainder of the seats filled until you could not have wedged in an additional spectator when the home team straggled out on the diamond to win the customary ovation.

Cheers Impartial

There could be no doubt of Boston's wide in the defenders of the home stadium. Big and hearty were the cheers for Wood—who gave an exhibition of some fancy long flies—for Speaker, for Stahl and Collins and the dead end left hand. Nor were there

'Boston Ahead! Fine' Murmurs Patient, 'Now Let Me Sleep'

[Special Dispatch to The Call]
SACRAMENTO, Oct. 9.—Harry Coon, aged 21, a hotel clerk, was injured this afternoon in a runaway. For an hour he lay unconscious at the receiving hospital while physicians sought to bring him back to life. As he opened his eyes he turned to the nurse and asked her the score. She told him Boston was ahead, and he relapsed into unconsciousness, satisfied.

Chemist Finds Way To Silence Alarm Clock of Farmer

[Special Dispatch to The Call]
SANTA MONICA, Oct. 9.—No longer will the silk stocking brigade residing in the exclusive residence district be bothered by the cock's crow at sunrise, for A. J. Weinland, a retired chemist residing in Ocean avenue, has manufactured a concoction which on being fed to roosters prevents them from crowing. According to Weinland, his preparation contains only ingredients that are harmless to the birds, while putting an effective stop to the early morning call.

MRS. EDDY'S BIG TRUST DECLARED VOID BY COURT

$2,000,000 Involved in Suit May Be Taken by Two Heirs
BOSTON, Oct. 9.—A trust, estimated at $2,000,000, created by the will of Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy founder of the Christian Science church, for the benefit of the denomination, was declared void by the Massachusetts supreme court today.

The court holds, however, that a charitable trust has been created and that new trustees may be appointed to administer it.

The trust was to have been administered by the directors of the Mother church in Boston, but the court decided that the trust provisions were nullified under the statute limiting the amount of the income from bequests to religious organizations to $2,000 annually.

The court dismissed the bill brought by the contestants of the will, who alleged that the teachings of Christian Science were against public policy. The contestants are given 30 days in which to bring additional evidence to support their claims.

The court holds that the action of the attorney general in becoming a party to the suit gives George W. Glover, the son of Mrs. Eddy, and Ebenezer J. Foster Eddy, her stepson, a standing, because it is possible the heirs may take the property.

WIFE URGES HENRY TO TAKE HIS PUNISHMENT

"Lord" Convicted on Second Charge of Embezzlement

OAKLAND, Oct. 9.—"Lord" Thomas B. Henry, convicted today for the second time within a month on a felony charge, and scheduled to go to trial on a third tomorrow, probably will drop his appeal from his first conviction and begin serving the three year term which has been imposed.

A verdict of guilty was reached today six minutes after the jury retired. The charge was embezzling $200 from Abraham Stockett, a negro, in a mortgage transaction.

When the verdict was read, Mrs. Henry, who was present with a baby 3 weeks old and a child of 3 years, broke down and cried. Assistant District Attorney Hynes, who conducted the prosecutions, attempted to comfort her. Mrs. Henry urged her husband to abandon further resistance.

FIRE ENDANGERS LIVES OF TENEMENT DWELLERS

Half Hundred Leap From Windows to Safety

Fire broke out at Eighteenth and Hampshire streets, at 2 o'clock this morning and forced more than 50 persons to leap from second and third story windows of a tenement structure to save their lives. Several were injured.

The fire started in the livery stable of David De Martin, scavenger for the fire department. Before the blaze was controlled it partially destroyed the stable, burned to death eight horses, and burned down a three story tenement.

The loss is estimated at $5,000.

DEATH COMMUTES CONVICT'S SENTENCE

San Francisco Prisoner Drowns at Folsom While Bathing

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 9.—E. A. Wetzel, a convict sentenced to Folsom prison from San Francisco for passing a fictitious check, was drowned in the dam at the prison this afternoon while in swimming. Wetzel had been working with a gang of other prisoners, and after their work ended they all went in swimming. Wetzel did not tell the others he could not swim, and when he went beyond his depth he perished.

IDAHO SUPREME COURT EXCLUDES T. R. ELECTORS

Presidential Ticket Has No Right to Be Represented on State Ballot

LEWISTOWN, Idaho, Oct. 9.—The decision of the Idaho supreme court, handed down here, which will prevent the names of the progressive party electors and candidates for congressman at large from appearing on the official ballot, was based on the court's determination of the term "convention."

The court held that "a mass assemblage of self-appointed delegates" did not constitute a legal convention, which, according to the decision, must conform to the representative principle with the delegates chosen by some "recognized class, body or party."

The progressive electors were named at a state mass assemblage in St. Anthony, and also by petition. The court held that neither method was lawful, declaring that under the statute the candidates should have been designated by the state central committee, since the progressive party did not enter the primaries or hold a representative state convention, the alternative procedure prescribed in the code.

GOULD PREDICTS PROSPERITY FOR US

[Special Dispatch to The Call]
SANTA BARBARA, Oct. 9.—Edwin Gould, accompanied by Norman E. Detman, D. H. Morris and A. H. Morris, three New York associates, left in his private car tonight for San Francisco, where he will spend several days.

At the Potter hotel tonight, Gould declared that his visit to California had no significance in the business world; that he had just completed an inspection of the St. Louis & Southwestern railway and had traveled to the coast "just for the fun of it."

Concerning a rumor that he is to be a director of the Western Pacific railroad, and may be its president, Gould says that it is untrue and that he has no connection with that road.

TAFT MEN MAY BE TURNED DOWN

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 9.—While Acting Governor Wallace will not say what action he will take concerning the request of the regular republican state central committee for a special session of the legislature, so that the Taft electors may get on the November ballot, it was rumored about the capital today that he would turn down the request.

Wallace admitted having received the application and said he would give it his immediate consideration.

"I do not know what I will do, but I shall decide the question at the earliest possible moment," said Acting-Governor Wallace. "I will give the application the deepest of consideration before deciding what my answer will be."

MISSING SON IS FOUND AT WORK, MIND A BLANK

Horace H. Walling Convinces Car Sealer That He Forgot His Real Name

[Special Dispatch to The Call]
STOCKTON, Oct. 9.—Horace H. Walling, vice president of the Keystone Type Founders company, today found his missing son for whom he had advertised all over the coast, in this city, and took him home to San Mateo.

The young man, who was suffering from lapse of memory and apparently had lost knowledge of his identity, was working as a car sealer for the Southern Pacific company.

Young Walling was a wireless telegraph operator and while in the navy was stricken by sunstroke. He was sent to a hospital at Norfolk, Va. On recovery he was ordered home and his folks were instructed not to allow him to do any violent exercise. The last heard of him was September 11.

Fled From Tennis Game

He was playing tennis when he became overheated. He laid aside his tennis racket and disappeared. He went to Sacramento under the name of Eugene Harold Hickey, and then came to Stockton. Chief Clerk Tandrow of the Southern Pacific freight office took a fancy to him and gave him employment. The boy gave as reference his nurse at Nordik.

The father had written the nurse, one Fitzgerald, concerning the boy's disappearance. When Fitzgerald received the photo and reference blanks from the Fidelity Bond company, he telegraphed the boy's father. Walling immediately took the train for Stockton.

"The boy did not recognize his father. 'Well, Horace, don't you know me?' asked Walling, when he met his son at the Southern Pacific depot.

Youth Denies His Name

"Are you speaking to me?" asked the boy. "My name is not Horace. My name is Eugene."

"No, my son; your name is Horace Stuyvesant Walling of San Mateo. I am your father. Don't you remember your father?"

"My name is Eugene Harold Hickey," the car sealer said. "My father was

WAR RAGING ALL ALONG OTTOMAN BORDER

Whole Northern Frontier of Turkey Is Ablaze With Strife as Result of Balkans Uprising

BULGARIANS DECIMATE FORCE OF MUSSELMANS

Advance Guard of Islam Army Defeats Montenegrins and King Nicholas Rushes Reinforcements

PRINCE MIRKO TASTES BITTERNESS OF REVERSE

[Special Cable to The Call]

LONDON, Oct. 9.—The entire northern frontier of Turkey, from Antivari, on the Adriatic, to Ato-Gon, on the border of the Black sea, is aflame with war tonight.

According to a late dispatch filed in Karakal, Roumania, this afternoon, a horde of Roumanian bandits, acting as the advance guard of the Bulgarian army now being rushed to the frontier from Sofia and Shumla, fell upon a force of Turks massed in a gorge above Mustafa Pasha and decimated them after a hand to hand encounter.

The Mohammedans were under Erhed Pasha, who was the last to fall. He severed his windpipe with his scimitar when mortally wounded by the leader of the Roumanians.

Montenegrins Beaten

On the western frontier the army of the sublime porte won an abortive victory over the Montenegrins, who assailed Kalava in force. King Nicholas of Montenegro was not present at the battle, but when news of the fighting reached him he rushed reinforcements, hoping to open the war with a decisive victory.

The reserves arrived too late and Prince Mirko, who accompanied the first brigade, had the unpleasant experience of beginning his taste of real warfare under the gloom of serious reverse. The prince tried to rally the stragglers, but they had lost heart owing to ferocity of the Moslem rallies.

In Kalava the Turks used several light automatic field pieces of German construction with deadly effect. The fight continued throughout a bright moonlight, according to one account, and the Montenegrin infantry deployed in a broad valley, the lower basin of which was unprotected, leaving them an easy target for the Turkish shells and small arms. If the Turkish commander in Kalava had been properly supported the Montenegrin invasion might have been nipped in the bud. A swift, concerted move across the frontier would have placed Cetinje in jeopardy and demoralized the morale of the Montenegrin army. The combination was lacking.

Serious conflict is reported among the Turkish commanders.

Prince Peter Opens Battle

At dawn this morning the main force of the Montenegrin army attacked the Turks, strongly entrenched on Mount Slantza. Prince Peter, the youngest son of King Nicholas, fired the first shot at the Moslem position, a band of household regiment playing the national hymn and the soldiers kneeling in prayer, calling upon God to aid them in ridding Europe of the Turk.

Following this dramatic opening the charge was sounded and the Montenegrins, regaining the courage lost through their previous reverse, rushed up the mountainside and assailed the Turks with cold steel. A battery of artillery had silenced the Turkish guns, which were abandoned in haste.
