Giants' Five Runs in the First Inning Win the Game

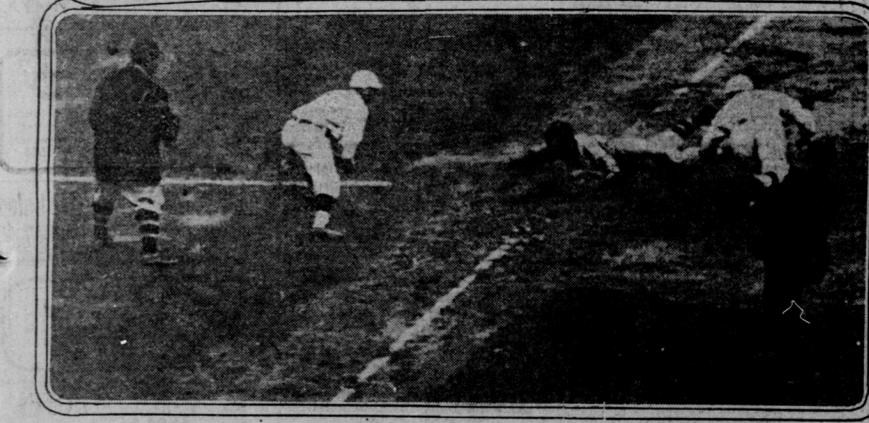

FOUR STIRRING SCENES IN THE SECOND GAME OF THE WORLD'S SERIES, AT FENWAY PARK, BOSTON, CAUGHT BY THE CAMERA

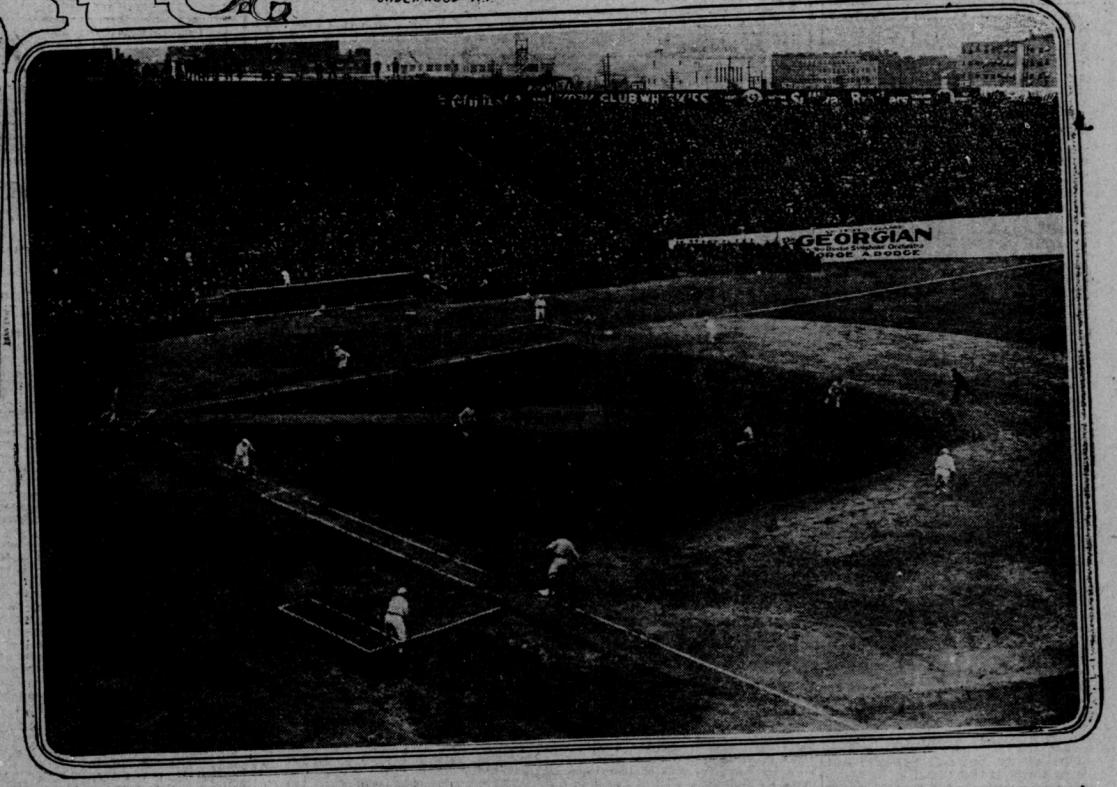

Lewis of the Red Sox tying the score in the eighth inning after Gardner knocked a two bagger.

In the third inning Speaker's hot shot past first was marvelously stopped by Merkle.

Herzog making third on slide in second inning when he made the longest hit of the series by smashing a long drive to deep center for three bases.

With bases full, Gardner of the Red Sox drives a grounder to Doyle of the Giants, scoring Yerkes.

Vicious Opening Rally of McGraw's Men Sets Manhattan Fans Crazy

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Fighting in the last trench, the New York Nationals repulsed the onrushing Boston Americans today and sent them back to defeat by a score of 5 to 2 in the sixth game of the world's series. A victory for the Red Sox would have carried with it the title of world's champions of 1912, and when "Rube" Marquard walked off the Polo grounds this afternoon with his second triumph over Boston tucked away in the sleeve of his pitching arm New York took hope that the Giants might be able to capture two more games and bring the title to this city.

lade of hits came with such suddenness that for the first time in the series the Boston infield were unable to meet the attack of the New Yorkers. Two crisp doubles, four singles, a balk by O'Brien and a double steal netted New York five runs in the first inning. The four singles garnered by the Giants were slow infield rollers, which on the soggy diamond were difficult to handle. Boston made its tallies in the second on Marquard's error on Gardner's grounder, hit by Stahl and a two-base smash by Engle, who batted for O'Brien. "Rube" Marquard curved them over low and then sent up his fast ones around the necks of the Boston batters. One of the results of Marquard's service was a great day for the Giant outfielders. The trio of gardeners—Murray, Snodgrass and Devere—covered acres of ground and gobbled up no less than 15 fly balls. Of these "Red" Murray in right, whose fiery locks seemed to glow as a beacon to the Boston batters, so many drives did they send his way, captured seven, while Snodgrass took six and Devere two. The Bostonians fought gamely to overcome the lead of five runs which the Giants piled up at the start. The Red Sox made two failures in the second, but their attack was broken in the third with a brilliant catch by Snodgrass. This play was the turning point in Boston's offense. Stahl had made first on a hit when Wagner drove a screaming liner to deep center. Snodgrass turned and ran toward the fence. The drive looked good for a home run and Stahl was rounding second with Wagner turning first when Snodgrass caught the ball as it came over his shoulder. That ended Boston, and, with the exception of the eighth, Marquard sent the Red Sox back to the bench in one, two, three order in every inning. Ray Collins twirled a fine game, and in the seven innings that the Giants faced him not a run was scored. "Things might have been a little different had Collins been sent in from the first," remarked Manager Stahl, "but it was a dark day—the kind that is just suited to O'Brien's fast ball. But O'Brien didn't get the 'breaks' and we will have to try to end the series tomorrow."

CONDENSED STORY TOLD BY INNINGS

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Following is a condensed summary of the play today by innings. The Giants made all their runs in the first, and the Red Sox all theirs in the second: FIRST INNING Boston—Hooper singled over second and Doyle made a fine stop. He could not throw the runner out at first. Hooper was caught napping at first and thrown out. Merkle to Fletcher to Speaker. Yerkes flew to Snodgrass. Speaker walked to first after having two strikes called. He stole second. Lewis flew to Devere. Devere made a great catch and saved a run. No runs. One hit. No errors. New York—Devere out. Gardner to Stahl. Doyle scratched an infield hit which Yerkes could not field in time. Doyle stole second. Snodgrass fanned. Murray got an infield hit. His roller was too slow for Wagner to field. Doyle went to third. On O'Brien's balk, Doyle scored and Murray went to second. O'Brien made a motion to throw to first, but did not release the ball. Murray scored on Merkle's double to right. Merkle scored on Herzog's double to left. Meyers got an infield hit on which Wagner made a phenomenal one hand stop, holding Herzog at third. Herzog scored on a double steal on bad throw by Yerkes to the plate. Meyers went to third and scored on a bunt hit by Fletcher. Fletcher was caught off first. Five runs. Six hits. One error. SECOND INNING Boston—Gardner scratched an infield hit. The official scorer gave Marquard an error on the play. Stahl singled to

Rube Fans Hopes of Fans Into Flame; Fans Sox Too

Attenuated Southpaw Handed a Halo by His Admirers After His Second Victory

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Rube Marquard, who operates so successfully under southern exposure, fanned into flame the flickering hopes of New York for a world's championship by defeating the Red Sox in the sixth game of the series, played at the Polo grounds this afternoon. A brief inning in which the visitors for the first time in the season became slightly demoralized, a batch of lucky breaks and a couple of clean hits gave the southpaw a lead of five runs to work behind right at the start of the game. It was ample to last him through the nine innings, and the Giants won by a score of 5 to 2. With his second victory over the Red Sox, the Rube entered the lists as Joe Wood's chief rival for the honor of being named the hero of the series, both having now won two games from their opponents, but the Boston star will get another opportunity to shine today in what will be the deciding game of the series to all intents and purposes. If Joseph loses, Boston's case will be hopeless; if he wins the series will be over, for the games now stand three victories and two defeats in Boston's favor. The thousands in the stands leaned back in their seats as Marquard took his place in the box. Hooper, the first man up for Boston, slammed the ball toward Larry Doyle, who made a remarkable bare handed stop near second base but snapped the ball to Merkle a fraction of a second too late to get the runner. GIANTS ON JOB EARLY Marquard quickly trapped Hooper off the bag for the first out, and things looked better for New York when Yerkes flew to Snodgrass. The mighty Speaker was next, and after getting himself in the hole on two strikes, he waited patiently as Marquard passed him to first base. He stole second on a pitchout which Meyers could not hold, but was left when Joseph Devere came in on the run and caught a vicious line drive from the bat of Duffy Lewis at his shoe tops. The breath of the crowd, which had been drawn in as the ball went singing toward the left field, went out again in a mighty roar as a dangerous situation had been saved. The Giants then took their turn at the bat and without more ado scored enough runs to win the game—five to exact. Devere, with the count three and two, stabbed the ball down to Gardner, who threw him out at first, but Larry Doyle beat out a slow hit to Yerkes and stole second. Snodgrass came next, but struck out after fouling off two or three balls, so that the
