

The Smart Set

In case equestriennes of Greenway sets look far ahead and dream of riding in the pageant of 1915, as women of the queen's set rode at Earlscourt last year, and dream of proving dash and horsemanship by racing into pictures with Buffalo Bill effects, quite regardless of the stately measure of the scenes, they may profit by the lesson of the princess.

It is a story of Earlscourt, where Shakespeare's England was reproduced last year under the direction of the distinguished Mr. Benson, who came to San Francisco last week. The princess is that famous beauty who has such a picturesque manner of speech. Dares say anything, because she is the loveliest princess in England. Incidentally, the most accomplished horsewoman. Rides with a free grace that is all her own. It was decided that the princess should ride into a scene of tourney, followed by her train, the members of which, for a touch of Belasco realism, were real princes and dukes; Prince George of Greece and the duke of Marlborough, with one of the Schleswig-Holsteins among them. She was to move in stately measure of the scene across to where the queen of the tourney (Viscountess Curzon, she was) should receive her, in the stately measure of the ceremony.

But the princess had her own ideas. Preferred a more dashing entrance. Proposed to flash into the picture at full gallop. Race madly across the field and bring up with a flourish before the queen.

For a wild West show it would have done very well. Mrs. Cornwallis-West, who, as all Americans know, was Lily Jerome of New York, told her so. And told her this was not a Wild West show, but a pageant of old England. Still the princess insisted. She wanted to ride at her own tempo and dazzle the crowds with her daring. Mrs. Cornwallis-West, who had charge of the affair, was in despair. It would be ruined. She appealed to Director Benson, who had charge, and who undertook to persuade the princess. He is a diplomat. He sought the princess and heard her plan. Quietly explained the different idea. It was scorned. "My dear princess," he said to her then, "I want you to come into the scene as you will. Ride into the field at whatever pace pleases you. But you must understand there will be no place in the display for you."

Effective, of course. How could a princess dash into an affair that was going on regardless of her entrance, with any success? She didn't try, but rode in the stately measure required.

Incidentally, Mr. F. R. Benson, who disciplined a princess and is here to plan a pageant for the exposition, is a lion at home. He is brother to Lord Charnwood, and they're just discovering that in Greenway sets. He doesn't care about it, but lions are always lionized, and he's learned to be gracious.

BRAVES BANDITS FOR 3,000 MILES

Missionary's Widow Arrives With Thrilling Account

Mrs. D. P. Ekvall, widow of a missionary who died last fall of typhus fever at Kansu, on the border of Tibet, had a thrilling trip through a bandit infested country with her two children, Robert, 15, and Alice Ekvall, 5 years old, with whom she arrived here yesterday on the liner China.

The death of Ekvall his widow decided to return to the United States. She was in poor health and needed a rest and she wanted to put her son in school. It was 3,000 miles as the crow flies from the station at Kansu to Honan, and they traveled muleback, which is slower and less direct.

It was winter, and at times the thermometer registered 30 below zero. They stopped at more than 100 inns, in constant fear of molestation from the bands of soldiers returning from the Chinese revolution. For parts of the journey they had a small military escort, but most the way their only attendants were two native servants.

After putting her son in school and resting a few months at her home in New York, Mrs. Ekvall will return to Tibet to carry on her husband's work.

HINTS

7681 Child's Tucked Dress, 1, 2 and 4 years.

707 EMBROIDERY DESIGN.

WITH OR WITHOUT FRILL. WITH SQUARE, ROUND OR HIGH NECK. LONG OR SHORT SLEEVES. WITH OR WITHOUT SHIRTING AT WAIST LINE.

Little tots are always charming in just such simple frocks as this one. The embroidered panel in the illustration gives a very dainty touch but is not essential, for the whole panel can be made of all-over embroidery or it can be plain. It is the long lines given by the trimming that covers the seams that make the feature. Very tiny little ones wear frocks that hang from the shoulders more often than any other kind but, for the slightly older tot, the shirting at the waist line is pretty and the dress can be made in either way. It includes sleeves in two lengths also and the neck can be made in Dutch style or high; as a result, from this one model can be made the perfectly plain little frock for morning and the dressy one for afternoon occasions. There are just enough tucks over the shoulders to provide becoming fullness. All the pretty, dainty materials that are used for tiny children are appropriate, fine, white muslins for the dressy frock, the simple laces, gingham and the like for the simple one.

For the 2 year size, the dress will require 2 1/2 yards of material 36 or 44 inches wide with 1 1/4 yards of embroidery 3 inches wide and 2 3/4 yards of insertion.

The pattern 7681 is cut in sizes for children of 1, 2 and 4 years. It will be mailed to any address by the Fashion Department of this paper on receipt of ten cents.

PUBLIC DEMAND GOVERNS CLASS OF PLAYS GIVEN

Dramatic League Pleads for Uplift in Work of the Actor

Students of the drama and members of the company now presenting Maeterlinck's "Blue Bird" in this city addressed an audience which packed the Cort theater yesterday afternoon, when the San Francisco center of the Dramatic League of America, for the first time since its organization, held a meeting open to the general public.

While the purpose and methods of the league were outlined by those identified with the association advantage was taken of the opportunity to hear several members of the "Blue Bird" cast outline the relation existing between Maeterlinck's fantasy and those who interpret it.

Two years ago the Dramatic League of America came into existence in Chicago, when several clubwomen of that city interested themselves in the general uplift of the present day plays. Maeterlinck's purpose of the league is the support of good drama by inducing attendance, early in an engagement, upon any play on which the committee of the league issues a bulletin.

Among those who made addresses were Mary Austin, the California novelist and dramatist; F. R. Benson of the Panama-Pacific Exposition company; S. A. Chambers of the University of California; Charles Hampden, stage-director of the "Blue Bird" company; Alice Butler, another member of the cast, and Prof. William Dailiam Armes of the University of California, president of the league.

"Our sole purpose is to lend our support to plays which have received the stamp of approval from eastern centers of the drama, pointing out wherein the theater going public is, in a measure, responsible for the existence of the better class of entertainment. Professor Chambers read a paper on the deeper significance of the "Blue Bird" Stage Director Hampden and Miss Butler spoke of the relation of the actor and the director to the drama. Mary Austin declared that it devolved upon the public to let theatrical managers know just what variety of stage productions are in demand.

SARAH A. McCLEES CALLED BY DEATH

Prominent Woman Lays Down Burden

OAKLAND, Jan. 7.—Mrs. Sarah A. McClees, one of the best known workers in the ranks of the Women's Christian Temperance union in the country, died today at the home of her daughter, Miss Mary C. McClees, 37 Monte Vista avenue, at the age of 66 years.

Mrs. McClees had been an active member of the organization since girlhood. She was for many years the national superintendent of the soldiers' and sailors' branch of the W. C. T. U. At the age of 35 years she wrote and published a book, "The Army Canteen," which has had a wide sale. It contained arguments for the abolition of liquor from the army barracks. In addition to many other activities in early life she was a member of the sanitary commission during the civil war.

Mrs. McClees was also an ardent worker in the Young Women's Christian association and founded one of the first branches of this organization in New York city some 40 years ago. It was known at that time as the Ladies' Christian union, but the first branch founded by Mrs. McClees embodied the same principles that have since been followed by the organization all over the world.

She founded the first rescue work in Oakland for girls and this has since been incorporated as a part of the regular work of the Y. W. C. A.

Mrs. McClees was an ardent suffragist and was formerly associated with Susan E. Anthony and other prominent workers for the ballot for women. She registered in this city on her nineteenth birthday and left a sickbed to vote against the recall last July. This was the last time she left the house.

She was born in Wilmington, Del., September 23, 1822, and came to this city from New York 19 years ago. She died following a protracted illness. The funeral will be held from the daughter's residence at 1:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon, interment in Mountain View cemetery. Rev. George W. White will officiate at the funeral.

WORK, PRIVILEGE NOT DUTY CLUB MEMBERS TOLD

Idle Rich Suffer Most, Says Dr. Boone, Urging Thoughts Before Acts

California club members yesterday heard an address on "Thinking Through Doing" from Dr. Richard G. Boone of the University of California, who declared that children do before they think and that many people never understand that every occupation, no matter how menial, requires some training.

He said that before engaging in an occupation thought should be taken as to what it is, what it demands and what training is necessary for it. The music was provided by Miss Marjorie Ward Stanton, daughter of Mrs. C. S. Stanton, and by Miss Dorothy Crawford, daughter of Mrs. James Crawford.

Miss Stanton, who has a charming, sympathetic voice, sang the following group of songs, Miss Crawford being the pianist. They were "Ben" (Clyde), "Der Nussbaum" (Schumann) and "From the Land of the Sky Blue Water" (Caldman).

Things Women Should Know

(From the Journal of Fashion.)

"At this season of the year the complexion requires better protection than is afforded by powder. Dissolve an original package of mayotone in a half pint which hazel and you have a complexion beautifier. It is made of soft, lovely, smooth and satiny. Gently massage face, neck and arms with this in the morning and at night; then brush through the hair.

"If prolix is applied daily with the thumb and forefinger to the roots, eye-lashes will grow long and silky. Thin and straggly eyebrows will grow even when a little prolix is applied to them. Make a paste by mixing powdered delatone with water; cover the hairy surface in the morning and at night; then remove, wash the skin and the hairs will be gone.

"Mother's balm is an old fashioned remedy for coughs, colds in head or chest, catarrh and sore throat. It can be purchased in prepared form from any druggist. It is easy to use and quick to act. The world never saw its equal as a household remedy."
