City Will Continue Trolley Work Despite Mullally's Vow to Hurt Exposition, Says Rolph

"Corking up" plans of the United Railroads will not bottle the Panama-Pacific exposition nor will they deter the city from going ahead with the proposition to open the way for 1915 visitors to the portals of the great world's fair.

Mr. Mullally at the Transportation club banquet at the Palace hotel Saturday night declared that if the city built street railroads the United Railroads would make no extensions to the exposition grounds, and the big fair would be "bottled up" and San Francisco would suffer.

"No threats of any sort will stop the work the city has undertaken unless the people rule otherwise," said Mayor Rolph. "The city is going right ahead with its plans and the Van Ness avenue line and the other lines that the municipality has in view will be constructed."

CITY TO IGNORE THREATS

"The city has devised a system of roads that will, it seems, give it access to the exposition grounds by the most advantageous routes. Work that the supervisors and other officials have begun will be carried out despite threats of the United Railroads or any other corporation."

J. J. Dwyer, president of the state board of harbor commissioners, speaking of the case, made it clear that the state is not contemplating a passenger line on the water front. That would have to be constructed by the municipality or by private capital.

"The state has not offered to build a passenger railroad along the Embarcadero, as some persons have assumed," he said. "What we offer is a terminal and right to construct an elevated railroad either by the city or by private capital. We would assist this project at any time."

"The action of the United Railroads would not deter the harbor commissioners from giving a right of way under terms not considered injurious to the interests of the water front."

STATE LINE UNLIKELY

"The state, we have ascertained, can not build an Embarcadero line for passenger service without the approval of the legislature, and I doubt whether the state would desire to go into that class of business."

Thomas V. Cator of the election commission, who has studied municipal ownership, on being asked of the ultimatum of Mr. Mullally, said:

"The determination of the United Railroads to make no more extensions of its lines in San Francisco in event the city undertakes the general plan of building municipal roads to the exposition will not affect, in my opinion, the status of the proposed municipal lines."

"The city will probably go right ahead with the work, if the people desire the railroads. I don't see that the action of the United Railroads would affect the city's plans in the least."

"I can not discuss the legal status of any specific United Railroads franchise without going thoroughly into the matter. I presume that the corporation could not be forced to extend its lines unless it saw fit to do so."

"The city must, of course, and will, find some means of transporting people to the Panama-Pacific exposition grounds. San Francisco has done bigger things than building street railroads."

OLD KLONDIKERS STILL COURT GOLDEN GODDESS

(Special Correspondence to the Call) DAWSON, Jan. 27.—Gilbert Skelly, who returned recently from Ruby, states that many old Klondikers are in the camp. Some are busy and some have an endless accumulation of time in stock.

Jerome Chute, once one of the Gold Run kings, ranking then with the heaviest of Klondike, is waiting for anything looking like luck to come his way.

Norman Macaulay has been having all kinds of experiences. He has been Harry Edwards, former Dawson lightning sketch caricaturist and anti-thirst specialist, is running a sampling emporium in Ruby in partnership with the redoubtable and effluent Louis Spitz.

The only "Hutch" horseman and hay expert, is using the broncos and trying to spy out an opportunity to get a new start on some pay streak.

W. Fred Harrison, known to fame in Klondike as the man who made hieroglyphics and tickled the type keys for years in the N. C. office, and later for Pattuco & Tobin, is a broker in Ruby. Jack Filbin and Grant are running the only newspaper of Ruby.

"Burr" Burnside, who went down the Yukon with a consignment of Dawson hardware for Ruby to make a fortune for himself and his Klondike angel, is still in Ruby. The hardware angel is in that country.

Oscar Tackstrom, one time leading man for Ed S. Orr, later in Iditarod, is keeping his eye on the long column of figures in the accounting department of the Ruby sawmill.

Pat Keyes and Phil Mehan are freighters.

W. E. Hamilton, one time Dawson telephone superintendent, is at the head of the Ruby telephone system.

Charles Lind, who was operating on Shipaur, is mining on Long creek.

Car Hits Auto; One Killed

VANCOUVER, B. C., March 2.—Crashing into a big touring auto on the Vancouver crossing on the Lulu Island line this afternoon, a city bound car carried the automobile a distance of 100 feet, demolished it and threw the occupant, W. E. Davidson, manager of the Royal Transfer company, fully 75 feet away. His skull was fractured and death was apparently instantaneous.

Tootsy Wootsie's Tweaked

(Special Dispatch to the Call) WASHINGTON, March 2.—"Wanted: A feminine Jack Frost." That is the crying demand of the fair suffragettes who undertake to rehearse their series of tableaux vivants on the treasury building steps in a thirty-mile gale this afternoon in Greek costumes. The irreverent Jack Frost tweaked the tiny tootsy wootsies even before their owners could step out of the taxis and night liners—which also run by day during the inauguration times—in which they had come to rendezvous, and accordingly the scene of the rehearsal was transferred to Rauscher's and there conducted indoors.

The necessity of holding the dress rehearsal indoors, the unalluring conduct of the aforesaid Jack Frost, the contemptible conduct of the weather man and the general disappointment led to an animated debate over the proposition. "Resolved, that natural wool union suits are a more appropriate element of a Greek costume than goose flesh." Just as the debate began to assume coherent proportions all men were barred from the room.

MUSEUM CURATOR BRAVES DRAGON Emblem of Old Chinese Regime, Feature of Last Portola Festival, Acquired

George Barron, curator of the Golden Gate Park museum, writer, critic and authority on all anthropological subjects, is being hailed by his friends as the most courageous man in San Francisco.

Every San Franciscan who witnessed the mammoth procession which marked the festivities of Portola week three years ago will remember the green, fear inspiring, crawling dragon of the Chinese. A marvel of oriental art and workmanship, it wrined and glittered its way over the city's thoroughfares in the wake of the vanguard, and was probably the most talked of feature of the parade. After the celebration the dragon was retired to the storeroom of Sing Fat in Chinatown, where, for at least a couple of years, it was allowed to repose in uneventful solitude.

But since the advent of the modern Chinese republic and the acceptance and recognition of the new government by the local Chinatown, the dragon, that dread emblem of a dead and gone monarchy, has been resting uneasily. No one wanted the dragon—no one in Chinatown, at least—and even had there been a purchaser not a Chinese in town would have laid a finger on the great beast to move it. Its appearance in the streets of Chinatown attended by Chinese would have been the signal for a whirlwind shooting.

Finally the Six Companies met in solemn convolve. After struggling with the dilemma for an hour or so one of the wise men was struck with a sudden, happy thought. There was the park museum. If they could persuade Professor Barron to accept the dragon and, furthermore, to remove it himself, their trouble was at an end.

Barron was immediately called on the telephone and the offer made. In all frankness, he was told of the danger attendant on removing the dragon, dissection, and the Six Companies hung breathlessly on his reply. Barron gave his answer. He thanked the donors in behalf of the people of San Francisco for their splendid generosity and assured them that he was perfectly willing to take any risk to obtain for his beloved museum such a notable addition to its treasures. Arrangements were made at once for the removal and within an hour Barron was speeding to Sing Fat in a big touring car.

The art gallery in the Golden Gate park museum in which the priceless collection of works of art have been rearranged by Curator Barron will be reopened today.

Taken a Trip to the Ten Contest Catalog Stars?

If You Have You Have Found Ten of the Seventy-seven Correct Book Titles

How much of a Booklovers' Contest astronomer are you? Have you found the ten stars in the catalog? They are set opposite ten of the correct book titles, and you'll find them plainly printed in the catalog.

Of course the 77 correct book titles represented by the 77 correct pictures are to be found among the 5,000 titles in the catalog, and the ten stars mark ten of the correct titles. That leaves only 67 correct titles for you to find by yourself!

Pretty handy thing to have around, that catalog. Contains all the 77 correct titles, and POINTS OUT 10 of them for you!

Ten of the contest pictures are represented by these 10 starred titles, and all you have to do in the case of these 10 starred titles is fit them to 10 of the pictures. It is GUARANTEED that these 10 starred titles are 10 of the 77 correct titles. Which 10 pictures these 10 titles fit must be determined by you. But that will not be difficult to do. Suppose that all the 77 correct titles were told you. It would be easy to fit them to the 77 pictures, wouldn't it? Well, it these 10 titles that ARE told you to TEN of the pictures!

The other 67 correct titles are contained in the catalog also, but they are not marked or designated in any way. You must discover them by using your ingenuity.

Suppose a picture appears showing a horse swimming a lake. Well, you know, when you look at that picture, that it must have been drawn to represent, perhaps, some such title as "The Swimmer," or "In the Water," or "Crossing the Lake," or "The Equine Swimmer," or "Swimming," or something like one of those titles. Of course, you just MAKE UP these titles. You do not know, at first, if any such book titles really exist.

But you TEST OUT these POSSIBLE titles. You open your catalog, and turn to the book titles beginning with the letter "S," where you look for some such title as "Swimming," or "Swimmer, The." You turn to the titles beginning with the letter "C" and look for some such title as "Crossing the Lake." You turn to the titles beginning with the letter "E" and look for some such title as "Equine Swimmer, The." And, if you are baffled in all of these, you make UP MORE likely sorts of titles, and test them out in the catalog until you find the CORRECT title that exactly fits the picture.

Keep at it, play the game with all the shrewdness and ingenuity you have, and you will surely win a prize!

And do not forget that ALL the 77 correct book titles which the 77 pictures represent are in the catalog, and that 10 of the correct titles are plainly marked for you by having stars set opposite them.

So the catalog has three aids for you:

1. It contains all the 77 correct book titles.

2. Ten of them are marked for you by stars.

3. And with the catalog you are given seven certificates, which are redeemable free for the first 35 pictures.

No certificate is redeemable, however, until all the pictures for which it is good have appeared. Certificate No. 1 is redeemable now for pictures 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5. Certificate No. 2 will be redeemable after picture No. 10 has been printed for pictures 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10. And so on.

TWEITMUE AND CLANCY RELEASED FROM PRISON

San Francisco Labor Men Convicted of Conspiracy Get Liberty on Bonds

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., March 2.—Olaf A. Tveitmue and Eugene A. Clancy, both of San Francisco, two of the labor leaders convicted in Indianapolis last December on charges by the government of conspiring in the illegal transportation of explosives, were released on bonds from the federal prison here late today.

The order from the court for the release of the labor men was brought here by Edward Nockels, secretary of the Chicago federation of labor, and at 5:30 o'clock Tveitmue and Clancy were free.

At 6:30 o'clock the two, in company with Nockels left for Chicago. Tveitmue said that after two weeks in Chicago he and Clancy would return to California.

"I have no regrets for the past and no fears for the future," he said, "and I am going back to devote myself to helping vindicate labor of these charges."

He said that all of the men imprisoned with him were treated well at the prison.

"In fact," he said, with a smile, "the persecution seemed to end when we entered the prison doors."

He said that neither he nor Clancy would attend the Indianapolis convention. Clancy formerly was vice president of the iron workers' international organization.

With the release of the two, sixteen of the convicted labor leaders are out on bonds and sixteen remain in the Leavenworth prison.

This does not include Herbert S. Hockin, who did not make application with the others for the writ of super-seedeas.

NICELY BALANCED BILL PRESENTED AT PANTAGES

Music, Dancing and Chatter Combine to Give Patrons Their Money's Worth

It is hard to get something new in a talking act on the vaudeville circuits, but Craig and Williams at the Pantages this week have a line of chatter that is up to the minute and takes well with the audience.

Menlo Moore's "Rah-Rah Boys," a musical comedy sketch in tabloid form, is a feature attraction on the bill. Six principals and a chorus form the company.

Golding and Keating get a lot of humor out of their contrasted physical heights. Thomas Curran and Roma Lauri are good in their sketch, "Algy's Love Affair."

The Seven Parisian Violets score in their instrumental and vocal numbers. Mar and Evans have a good acrobatic act of the rough and tumble variety. The Neapolitan trio in scenes from "Il Trovatore" are fair.

An added attraction to the program is a reel of pictures of the Mexican revolution. Realistic views of troops in action are thrown on the screen.

FIRE LIEUTENANT CALLS ON MAYOR

A Lieutenant in the Fire Department in one of the great cities of Ohio was in the hospital. He was so far gone with Bright's disease he was marked for the retired list. His spinal authorities gave no hope. He heard that people were recovering. He left the hospital and sent for the treatment.

Still being in the hands of the department physician he feared his displeasure and said nothing about it. Within a week he was beginning to feel easier. In four months he was able to return to his post.

Fearing that the physician in charge might not approve, he says "I saw the Mayor and told him what is curing me. He said to continue with it and he would see that the department doctor did not disturb me. I am a down town officer, and the reporters know me who ride to fires on the apparatus with me and they have had a lot to say about my getting well, as they all expected me to die."

Send me two of the brochures for Doctor friends, whom I have induced to try it in two hopeless cases, one of which is responding."

The above information came to us on the letter head of the Department and was signed by the Lieutenant, August 5th, 1912. It refers to Fulton's Renal Compound. It was not written or sent at our request. It is open to all who may be interested. (Patient writes Feb. 15th, 1913: "I am fine.")

If you have Bright's disease you owe it to yourself and family to try Fulton's Renal Compound before giving up. It can be had at druggists.

For pamphlet on our investigation into the curability of Bright's disease write John J. Fulton Co., San Francisco.
