wise the Seals, were more successful and managed to land the samples with the skill of salesmen. It was a great day and Mayor Rolph said in his speech: "Nowhere but in San Francisco can such things happen. Ours here, under the blue sky and a good sun and such an outpouring of enthusiasm interfere with the ordinary modes of commerce and business."

This year there will be three pitchers instead of one. There will be an equal amount of raisins to distribute, there will be some of the boys whose business it is to pitch, and who will for the nonce not catch, and there will be music and the mayor all conspiring to assist The Call in its already successful effort to make of raisin day a festival rather than a date.

When Olivet Morosco was asked whether he thought it would be possible to gain the consent of the principals of his company and to participate in the festival, he said that he was a regular San Franciscan who had lived in Los Angeles for 13 years and that Fresno was somewhat of an average point between the enterprises of which were as dear to his heart as those of his home and his adopted town.

By which he intended to convey the fact that he was heartily in sympathy with the affair, which sympathy was later evidenced when he took the matter up with Dolly and Lenora and Edith. The first said that she was born in Australia and perhaps wasn't eligible to participate in a purely California event. "You're eligible," said Morosco, "if you love us."

"I do, indeed," said Dolly, "did you see that matinee last Saturday when there was a big house but dear little kiddies and their mothers and their aunts and a few uncomfortable looking gentlemen?"

So Dolly qualified her in the team of pitchers very easily, for she is American born and of Latin parentage, and thus in spirit with any festival that has to do with the constitution of the state and its people. Lenora and Edith, the first said that she was born in Australia and perhaps wasn't eligible to participate in a purely California event.

"You're eligible," said Morosco, "if you love us." "I do, indeed," said Dolly, "did you see that matinee last Saturday when there was a big house but dear little kiddies and their mothers and their aunts and a few uncomfortable looking gentlemen?"

ANOTHER WAR AMONG THE ALLEES IS LIKELY TO WRITE SLAVE CHARGE

Fighting Between Bulgars and Serbs Reported in London

LONDON, April 28.—The mystery surrounding events in the Balkans is becoming deeper. No further news has been received of Essad Pasha's exploit in Albania, and the situation in Saloniki is difficult to understand. A dispatch from Saloniki confirms the report that orders were given for the Bulgars to evacuate all places occupied by the Greeks, but that later three orders were countermanded and that official attempts were made to pretend they were never given.

A Bucharest dispatch, dated April 29, to the Daily Telegraph, expresses the opinion that immediately after peace is signed between the allies and Turkey a new war will commence between Serbia, Bulgaria and Greece.

A Bulgarian correspondent says that a large concentration of opposing troops is in readiness for these new campaigns, and adds that considerable fighting has already occurred and that three important engagements were fought last week, concerning which the greatest secrecy has been maintained.

He describes fighting with heavy losses on both sides between the Bulgarians and Serbs to the northeast of Monastir April 10, and fighting between the Greeks and Bulgarians for a week in the vicinity of Niagara, Seres and Salona.

The Daily Telegraph calls attention to the fact that, while the Serbians recently were endeavoring to capture David Pasha's army, these operations appear to have ceased, and suggests that the cessation of the Serbian attack is connected with Essad Pasha's coup.

Apparently the ambassadors' conference in London today postponed its decision until the next meeting, which is set for Thursday.

"THE CAR CLEVER" Love, Politics and Belasco Mingle in Effectiveness of Play

Love, Politics and Belasco Mingle in Effectiveness of Play

The William C. de Mille drama, "The Woman," was produced last night at the Alcazar theater with the same Belasco touch that characterized the performance when "The Woman" was played for the first time in San Francisco at the Columbia theater.

The role of Wanda Kelly, the telephone girl at the Keswick hotel, was assumed last night at the Alcazar by Rhea Mitchell, who challenged Marjorie Wood in the same role when the Belasco production was seen at the Columbia theater in the month of October in the year 1912.

Charles Waldron, as the insurgent, the Hon. Matthew Standish, exhibited the strength of a reformer and the ease of a believer, and even when he seemed to be beaten by political and romantic powers was at his ease.

On the eve of the end of a fierce political combat over the Mullins bill in congress, the Hon. Jim Blake, manipulator of the party machine, discovered that his dreaded rival, Matthew Standish, whose political asset was personal integrity, had a weak spot in his past—an affair with a woman.

To unearth her name was the task before the boss, who craftily figured that Standish would wear her, as soon as he heard of the rumor. Consequently Blake hastened to inform Standish, who fell into the trap by telephoning.

Excepting for the omission of dialogue, a novel may be better dramatized for the motion picture film than for the stage, and so the presentation of "The Prisoner of Zenda," with James K. Hackett as the leading figure, which was shown on the screen at the Savoy theater last evening, has a decided merit, which will appeal to the theatergoer.

Technical pictures, which were prepared under the personal direction of Mr. Hackett and Daniel Frohman, are unexcelled. Hackett, whose most famous roles in motion pictures have been the dual characters in this romantic Anthony Hope story, proved himself a pantomimist of rare facility.

His support is splendid. The staging of the drama is more adequate than the staging of the play.

SUGAR RESERVES Says Foresters' Estimates Should Be Raised to Save Stock

Says Foresters' Estimates Should Be Raised to Save Stock

(Special Dispatch to The Call) WASHINGTON, April 28.—F. J. Sinclair, secretary of the California Livestock Breeders' association, has written to members of the California delegation saying that the decision of the chief forester to allow not more than 8,000 to 10,000 cattle and 25,000 to 30,000 sheep to graze on forest reserves in California will not meet the requirements of the situation.

He states that forestry officers in San Francisco have already received requests for the grazing of 150,000 sheep, and he believes that 250,000 have been disastrously affected by the drought. He says: "After all, the fact remains that the forest reserves belong to the people. While we have always advocated federal supervision as the best means of fostering their various reserves, it would appear that under present circumstances future benefits should be waived to supply present wants."

"Small stockmen will be seriously injured, if not ruined, should the estimate of Chief Forester Graves not be widely extended."
