

TELL WILSON MY WEALTH AT U. S. CALL--MORGAN

Late Financier Ready to Give Everything to Country if Needed, Says Colonel Harvey

HOME LAND LOVE BARED BY EDITOR

Magnate Before Last Trip Recited Scott's "Lives There a Man"

NEW YORK, May 8.—"When you see Mr. Wilson, tell him for me that if ever there should come a time when he thinks any influence or resources that I have can be used for the country they are wholly at his disposal."

These, the last words of J. P. Morgan spoken to Colonel George Harvey the day before Mr. Morgan sailed for Europe, never to return alive, were related tonight in an address by Colonel Harvey before a gathering of bankers and other representative men at a dinner of the trust companies of America.

Mr. Morgan was a republican, and in the words of Colonel Harvey, not only regarded the political views advanced by Mr. Wilson with honest apprehension, but never considered the democratic party fully capable of governing this nation. His message to the new president, Colonel Harvey cited as measuring the depths of the man's patriotism.

OPTIMISTIC FOR COUNTRY

Mr. Harvey said: "The election had taken place, the inevitable had happened, and, using Speaker Cannon's phrase, Mr. Wilson had become Mr. Morgan's president as much as mine. In fact, a little more. Anyhow, there was no constraint upon our conversation when I saw him for the last in his library the day before he went away. He was optimistic regarding the country and I naturally spoke hopefully of the prospect of the coming administration."

"Suddenly turning those piercing eyes on me, Mr. Morgan said, 'Do you remember that American speech you made in London?' I remembered very well. It was not a speech; only a few remarks at the close of a private dinner in reply to an Anglicized scoundrel who had mistakenly thought to curry favor with Mr. Morgan by speaking contemptuously of Mr. Bryan, who, on the preceding day, as it happened, I had introduced to him at a reception."

QUOTES SCOTT POEM

"And do you recall," he asked, "those lines from Scott that you quoted when that man (I can hear now the emphasis upon those two words)—when that man had left the room?"

"I did, of course, and began to recite: 'Breathes there a man with soul so dead'

"Who never to himself hath said—'I hesitated for a moment, and the succeeding words came from the big arm chair with odd distinctness: 'This is my own, my native land.'"

"Then, quietly, Mr. Morgan asked if I could recall the remaining lines, and I quoted imperfectly: 'Whose heart has never within him burn'd As home his footsteps he hath turn'd From wandering on a foreign strand? If there such breathe, go, mark him well.'"

REPEATS "MY NATIVE LAND"

"Half a minute, gentlemen, is a long time; but for fully that period, I should say, Mr. Morgan sat perfectly still. Then, unconsciously, beating time upon the arm of his chair, as he used to do in church, he repeated, as if soliloquizing: 'Who ever to himself hath said—'"

"This is my own, my native land—' And rising with difficulty from his chair, for he was then quite feeble, he said, with the emphasis that only quietude can give: 'When you see Mr. Wilson tell him for me that if there should ever come a time when he thinks any influence or resources that I have can be used for the country, they are wholly at his disposal.'"

Barring the usual leave taking, those were the last words I heard from the lips of Mr. Morgan. They were the words of a true patriot, of a great, a very great American, spoken from the depths of a passionately loyal heart. Surely I can do no better than to leave them with you to remember, to cherish and to feel so long as you all shall live in this, our native land."

The fire department arrived soon afterward and extinguished the flames, which partially destroyed the furniture in the room.

The blaze was started by Bernard endeavoring to light the gas and accidentally setting fire to the lace curtains.

The Piano With a Memory

What would you give to have in your home the piano which a Paderewski or a De Pachmann took with him on his concert tour—if that piano had a memory, and could repeat at your request all the marvelous triumphs of the masters?

How do you know that the Eilers Bungalow Player Piano is not just such a piano? Have you heard it? Those who have listened to its wonderful renditions of the masterpieces are enthusiastic in its praise. They call it the "piano with a memory."

You can hear any day such a program played on the Bungalow Player Piano at Eilers Music House, 975 Market Street, where you will be courteously received if you ask to hear the pianos The Call is offering as grand prizes in the great Booklovers' Contest.

Or in lighter vein, the Bungalow will play, as Paderewski might not be willing to play, the latest popular dance or song music. Or, you can play it "by hand" just as though the player attachment were not built into the case.

For these reasons, and because it is the only player piano specially adapted to the needs of the small city apartment, the Eilers Bungalow Player Piano was chosen by The Call for this big contest, as something of interest to every home.

The Bungalow Player Piano May Be Seen at 975 MARKET STREET HOUSE OF THE CHICKERING PIANO Or at any of the Eilers stores on the Coast.
