

In The Social Whirl

BY RUTH CAMERON.
"THE only way to have a friend is to be one."
"There is hardly any one outside my immediate family whose presence or absence means much to me," I heard a man say the other day. "The people who want to be friends with me have to seek me out; I don't bother much with them."
He said it proudly.
He evidently thought he was showing how superior he was.
I think he should have said it sadly,

because he was acknowledging a lack in himself.
It is a common idea—this notion that one is fortunate when one receives more love than one gives.
A great many people seem to take pride in realizing that this or that friend cares more for them than they for him. It is the same feeling that makes a woman proud of, having excited a love which she can not return, and ashamed of loving when she is not loved. And it is just as wrong and cheap a conception of the great force of love.
The love a human being can feel is a far better measure of his character than the love he can excite.
"It is more blessed to give than to receive" is as true of love and friendship as of any material gift.
It is blessed to have a friend; it is far more blessed to be one.
Like mercy, friendship is twice blessed; it blesses him that gives and him that takes. But contrary to the common belief, it is he that gives who gets the most out of it.
It is, of course, a legitimate reason for pleasure and pride to know that one is the object of another human being's admiration, respect, affection and whatever other feelings go to make up the wonderful sentiment of friendship.
But on the other hand it is an even greater reason for pride to know that one is sufficiently capable of recognizing and appreciating another human being's value to feel that wonderful sentiment of friendship for him.
The fewer people a man cares about, the fewer people there are who can hurt him, argues the man who is proud that there are few people who count with him.
True. And the fewer who can help him happy, the fewer who can stimulate and inspire him, and generally help him to expand into his highest self, as the true friend will.
It is as foolish for a man to rejoice that he cares for very few people as it would be for a tree to be glad that it had few roots.
Moreover, the self-sufficient man is sure to be the self-centered man. It is only through realizing our need of others that we understand their need of us.
Don't be afraid to love. And by love I mean love in the bigger sense in which it includes friendship and all kinds of love, as well as the love between the sexes. It may bring you some of suffering, but it will bring you infinitely more of happiness.
Don't be ashamed to love. He who loves most has the most reason to be proud.

Mrs. Jack Gouraud Entertains

Hostess in Oriental Costume

Mrs. Jack Gouraud Hostess at Brilliant Assemblage

PARIS, June 29.—Mrs. Jack Gouraud gave a fancy dress ball last week to 150 guests. The hostess represented a woman of an oriental harem in a costume of black and gold. The bodice was covered with diamonds, pearls and emeralds. The costume was designed by Paul Poirer. She was carried down the grand staircase by four stalwart slaves veiled with bronze paint. Estimates of the value of her jewelry vary between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000. Her daughter also wore an oriental costume.

Prince Troubetzkol, the sculptor, by appearing in evening dress, broke his rule. M. de Max, the actor, who assisted in receiving the guests, impersonated Hamlet. Princess Erlstoft was in an Egyptian costume with genuine antique head dress. Rene Chappelle, La Tapierkowsky, and Countess Swiska danced. The disguises were so perfect that it was difficult to identify 100 of the guests. Rumor has it that one had been under a painter's hands for two days while she was being converted into an artistic bronze.

The invited guests included Prince Nicolas Oroussoff, Jan Van Beers, Count de Govinne, Anna Held, Gaby Deslys and Gabriele d'Annunzio.
