He Tells Veterans Assembled in Gettysburg Battle of Nation Is Not Ended

REGULAR ARMY PAYS
TRIBUTE OF SILENCE

Thousands of Heroes in Blue and Gray Depart From the Field

GETTYSBURG, Pa., July 4.—The regular army paid tribute of silence today to the thousands who sleep under the hills of Gettysburg.

That five minutes' silence was probably the last formal mark of the semi-centennial celebration. Only a few minutes before President Wilson spoke in the big tent to the veterans in blue and gray and only a short time afterward thousands of those who were left began their preparations for departure.

The president came into Gettysburg shortly before 11 o'clock from Baltimore. Through the narrow, crooked streets of this war famed country town he motored out to camp with Governor Tener of Pennsylvania and Representative Palmer of Pennsylvania by his side.

GOVERNOR TENER PRESIDES

Governor Tener introduced him in a dozen words.

In part the president said: Friends and fellow citizens: I need not tell you what the battle of Gettysburg meant. These gallant men in blue and gray sit all about us here. Many of them met here upon this ground in grim and deadly struggle. Upon these famous fields and hillsides their comrades died about them. In their presence it was an impertinence to discourse upon how the battle went, how it ended, what it signified. But 50 years have gone by since then and I crave the privilege of speaking to you for a few minutes of what those 50 years have meant.

May we break camp now and be at ease? Are the forces that fight for the nation dispersed, disbanded, gone to their homes forgetful of the common cause? Are our forces disorganized, without leaders and the might of men consciously united because we contend, not with arms but with the passions and powers and wickedness in high places? Are we content to be still? Do we cherish our union with sympathy, our peace contentment, our vigor right action, our maturity self-comprehension and clear confidence in choosing what we shall do? War fitted us for action, and action never ceases.

I have been chosen the leader of the nation; I can not justify the choice by any qualities of my own, but so it is. Whom do I command? The ghostly hosts who fought upon these battlefields long ago and are gone? These gallant gentlemen stricken in battle whose fighting days are over, their glory won? What are the orders for them, and what trains them?

I have in my mind another host, whom these set free of civil strife in order that they might work out in days of peace and settled order the life of a great nation. That host is the people, the masses, the great and the small, without class or difference of kind or race or origin; and, whether they be in the front or in the rear, they must be guided and directed and their lives aright. Their constitutions are their articles of enlistment. The orders of the day are the laws which they must obey. The things they have hoped for, and so make way for still better days for those who follow. The recruits are the little children crowding in the quarters, the stores are in the mines and forests and fields, in the shops and factories. Every day some thing must be done to push the campaign forward; and it must be done by plan and with an eye to some great destiny.

President's Train Speeds

NEW YORK, July 4.—President Wilson spent the hours in New York tonight resting at the University club after a thrilling all day journey by special train from Washington by way of Gettysburg, where he arrived in an hour to make a brief speech to the civil war veterans.

Just what the reason for the flying trip was could not be learned, as immediately on his arrival in New York he merely took a long automobile trip on Riverside drive to get a breath of air, as the day's ride was through sweltering heat and dust.

The president dined at the University club and remained there until time to catch the 11:10 train for Cornish, N. H., where he will join his family tomorrow.

Washington Celebrates

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Independence day ceremonies were conducted at Memorial Continental hall, with Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire as orator. Business, public and private, was suspended for the holiday. The president and vice president were attending the Gettysburg celebration and Secretary Bryan was the only member of the cabinet in the city. There was no session of either house of congress, the only signs of life at the capitol being around the senate finance committee room, where the committee men were giving the finishing touches to the tariff bill.

Demonstration in Tucson

TUCSON, Ariz., July 4.—The flag flying above the Mexican consulate was torn down and trampled on during the fourth of July celebration here today. Reports of the incident vary, some saying the act was committed by Americans, others that the flag was desecrated by Mexican sympathizers with the constitutional movement in Sonora.

Consul Anisile, Mexican representative here, was advised by local authorities to place a United States flag over the Mexican flag. He again attempted to hoist the tricolor. Anisile insisted that he intended the hoisting of the Mexican colors over the consulate as a compliment to Americans on their national holiday. He persisted in regarding the incident as international rather than purely local.

AMERICAN STARTS
RIOT IN WINNIPEG

WINNIPEG, Man., July 4.—The waving of the flag of the United States here early today while thousands of provincial soldiers were parading the streets precipitated a riot, during which the flag was trampled and a number received minor injuries. The incident occurred as thousands of soldiers from Winnipeg and Mani-

Husband's Act Surprises Her

Mrs. Edward R. ("Toots") Freeman, whose husband got excited because she rode to San Francisco on the same train as former Governor Yates of Illinois.

morning and we dressed hurriedly and went to the station.
HUSBAND CONSENTS TO TRIP
"Governor Yates said to Ed: 'Mr. Freeman, I wish your wife could accompany me as far as the end of the line.' My husband liked Governor Yates fully as much as I did and he said: 'Sure, she can go if she wants to.'
"Then he told me I could stop in McCann's station and check up on my picture postcards. I told him I might go on to San Francisco to see Mrs. Steinman and he told me to go ahead if I wanted to. He had tried to get me to go two weeks before and I intended to at that time, but didn't. So when Governor Yates and I got to the station I made up my mind to come on overland.
"I am sure there was nothing out of the way in that and my actions have been absolutely innocent. I came right out to Mrs. Steinman's apartments as soon as I got to the city. I can't imagine why Ed should get anything else into his head. Somebody must have jokingly said something and he got jealous.
"Why, only yesterday I wrote him the most letter, telling him all about the trip and of the good time I was having with Mrs. Steinman. We have been going everywhere and having just the finest time! I never thought for a minute of anything of this kind coming up."
GOING RIGHT BACK HOME
Mrs. Freeman said she had intended to remain here several days longer and enjoy herself.
"But that's all spoiled now," she continued. "I'm going right back on the first train in the morning to Eureka. I know everything will come out all right as soon as I explain it to Ed, for we have always been happy together and he will believe me when I tell him the truth.
"But I'm almost afraid to get that letter he telegraphs is coming. I wonder what can be in it? I suppose it's all about this story about my coming here on the train with Governor Yates as traveling companion.
"Why, Governor Yates is one of the most honorable men I ever met. Ed thought so, too, and he and the governor were great friends. When we went down to the station to see him, Ed took down two photographs for the governor.
"Ed kissed me goodbye when we started and I know he never thought of my running away. And if I had intended to do anything wrong, I wouldn't have sent word back to him by the conductor, would I, that I was going on to San Francisco?"
Governor Yates, on reaching San Francisco proceeded east the day of his arrival.

MAKE MUSIC EXHIBIT
Object History of Hawaiian Melody Will Be Presented at 1915 Exposition
Hawaii, in addition to exhibits already arranged for 1915, will enter a comprehensive musical exhibition, according to Ernest Kaai, a young musician of Honolulu, who arrived on the Sierra yesterday to take the preliminary steps. Mr. Kaai is well known in the islands as an organizer of glee clubs, many of his organizations having participated in eastern and foreign exhibitions.
"It is my intention to enter a complete display of Hawaiian instruments which will typify the musical history of the Hawaiian race," declared Mr. Kaai.
He also said that he would bring over several large glee clubs.

WOMAN SUCCEEDS
AFTER SLEUTHS
ADMIT FAILURE

Mrs. Grace Barton Smith-Cuyler Locates Missing Husband Through Assistance of Friend

ABSENT MAN WANTED
IN DIVORCE ACTION

Spouse of Society Woman Regards Suit as Interruption to Pastoral Pursuits

ALAMEDA, July 4.—From Wayside, Ga., comes the information today that a woman succeeded where detectives of the world's most famous agencies had failed in informing Mrs. Grace Barton Smith-Cuyler of this city of the whereabouts of her husband, Telamon Smith-Cuyler, clubman and traveler. Sleuths had sought him in vain from the wildest regions of war torn Mexico to the gayest boulevards of Paris.

The woman is Mrs. D. B. Chiles, a neighbor of Smith-Cuyler, and a friend of Mrs. Smith-Cuyler, who is now dividing her time between the home of her mother in this city and the Fairmont hotel across the bay.

Mrs. Chiles is assisting Mrs. Smith-Cuyler in the divorce action instituted by her in San Francisco last April, the news of which was kept secret until a few days ago, when the quest for the cosmopolitan had proven vain and she took her rather prosaic method of going to Smith-Cuyler's home and seeing him with her own eyes. Then she went to the Wayside telegraph office and formed Mrs. Smith-Cuyler by wire that her husband was enjoying good health in his ancestral home. It was as simple as rolling off a log.

According to Mrs. Smith-Cuyler, her husband has been causing her sleuths some worry through the service of a friend in San Francisco, who has been remailing letters to her from that city. On the anniversary of the birth of Telamon Smith-Cuyler Jr., the five year old son of the divided pair, a package of presents was received at the Barton home here. It was addressed in Smith-Cuyler's handwriting and postmarked San Francisco. Information now at hand is to the effect that the husband has been for many weeks at the Georgia plantation of his mother.

Since his return to Georgia, Smith-Cuyler has been leading the life of a recluse. The missing husband was interviewed by Mrs. Chiles when she "discovered him."
"The affair is very complex," he said, "and very interesting, too, no doubt," he added, as an afterthought. "I may go to Atlanta in a few weeks to consult my counsel—I hardly know exactly when. In the meantime I am very busy here. Our farming is quite extensive and I am preparing to build a new house. In fact, I have drawn the plans myself and will superintend the construction of it."
"Then, the fish are biting splendidly now and I spend an hour or so each day with my rod. My days are rather completely employed and this matter coming up may alter my present plans. As I said before, it has many sides. It is extremely complex and interesting."
In asking for a divorce Mrs. Smith-Cuyler does not seek alimony; but she does petition the court to award her the custody of her two children, Grace, aged 10, and John, aged 5.

SAW MISSING HUSBAND

Two weeks ago, at Wayside, when she received a letter from Mrs. Smith-Cuyler, asking her to try to find from Jones county sources the present abiding place of the much sought after husband, she took her rather prosaic method of going to Smith-Cuyler's home and seeing him with her own eyes. Then she went to the Wayside telegraph office and formed Mrs. Smith-Cuyler by wire that her husband was enjoying good health in his ancestral home. It was as simple as rolling off a log.

The Emporium
JULY CLEARANCE SALE
JULY 5TH TO 12TH inclusive

Store Open Today
Sale Begins 9 A. M.
Store Open Today

Once more The Emporium inaugurates its July Clearance Sale, and without exaggeration, we say that in point of value giving, in quantity of goods left over from the most successful six months of our business, in quality of merchandise offered, this sale completely eclipses all former clearances. It is absolutely impossible to go into any detail in describing the goods, so we have contented ourselves merely with listing, in many cases, the article and its price. The prices themselves, aside from the quality of the merchandise, are enough reason for crowding the store to its utmost, and if previous sales are criteria, Saturday evening will find hundreds of well satisfied customers.

The Day Is Today--the Event Is the Greatest Clearance Sale of Women's Garments Ever in Our History
