RETURNS FROM SKETCHING TRIP

CHARLES CHAPEL JUDSON is the first of the artists to return from a summer sketching trip. He has brought back 30 sketches, which represent about three weeks' work in the region of the Little Sur river, south of Monterey. A great many of these are outdoor studies of the nude and have been painted chiefly as records of color and of values—records and notes which Mr. Judson expects to use later on large canvases. He has obtained some agreeable decorative effects with the human figure, and his experiments with flesh tones, under varying conditions of light in the open air, have been productive of interesting results.

NEWS OF ART AND ARTISTS

By PORTER GARRETT

XAVIER MARTINEZ and Francis McComas left during the week for the desert country of New Mexico and Arizona. They will visit the Zuni, Moki and Navajo reservations, following a route with which Mr. McComas is familiar and which offers the greatest pictorial possibilities. It will be remembered that Mr. McComas' pictures of this country aroused a lively interest when they were exhibited some years ago. They showed us the artist in a new phase. We had become familiar with his California landscapes, particularly those of Monterey, and we had found fresh qualities to admire in his paintings of Spain and of Greece. But his desert pictures marked his most distinctive growth—the most considerable extension of his talent.

Lately he has been again painting and drawing his Monterey oaks, and he has also been experimenting with some success in oil. Secure as has been his technical proficiency in the handling of water colors, his painting has steadily improved on the side of form and also in the treatment of values and in the employment of colors of stronger body. His work continues to mature and to gain in dignity. It is more than ever possible to say of his water color paintings that they vibrate the medium. There has been at times a certain loss of the poetic spirit which animated so many of his earlier canvases, but this spirit of poetry and romance appears now and then in his recent paintings raised to heights of passion and beauty which he never reached before.

Dr. Bertha Wagner Stark has left for New York en route to Europe to attend the international congress of medicine, which will convene in London in August.

ALTHOUGH Mr. Martinez is visiting the desert for the first time, he has painted similar country in Mexico. Only lately he has made some paintings of a quarry in Piedmont which suggest a more formal attitude into these pictures he has imported color which in its intensity suggests possession of these qualities, combined with his earnestness and sincerity, which seem to justify confidence in his future.

EDWARD KAUFFER, who left San Francisco last September to pursue his studies abroad, is now in Munich, where he expects to remain for some time. He spent several months at the Chicago Art institute, where, despite the fact that he was really a novice, he carried off two honorable mentions.

The exceptional promise displayed by this young and self-taught artist's work made some of those who saw his paintings before he left here believe that he was destined to achieve something distinguished. I venture to prophesy now that, after three years of study, which should test and prove him, he will return to San Francisco to be hailed by those most difficult to please as one of the artists of whom California may be justly proud.

Mr. Kauffer writes from Venice that, during the two months he has been traveling in Europe, he has made some 200 notes. He expresses himself as gratified with the results he has obtained in the handling of values and in color. He maintains, with modesty, the attitude of the student, and is as desirous of improving himself as he is of expressing himself. He evidently realizes that, in order that an artist should express himself with that degree of fullness which has given the best art to the world, it is necessary to undergo a severe disciplinary preparation. The opportunity to observe and the contact with art which young Kauffer is now enjoying will benefit him vastly. Those who saw the paintings that Mr. Kauffer exhibited here will remember that they showed vision, imagination and an altogether delightful feeling for color. It is his interest in this because of the fact that Mr. Martinez has been painting more in the manner of his earlier work—a manner
