The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Tonic Pills.
NERVOUS DEBILITY,
However obscure the cause may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting, as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of

NERVOUS PROSTRATION,
Is characterized by a general languor or weakness of the whole organism, especially of the nervous system, obstructing and preventing the ordinary functions of nature; hence there is a disordered state of the secretions; constipation, scanty and high-colored urine, with an excess of earthy or lime sediment, indicative of waste of brain and nerve substance, frequent palpitations of the heart, loss of memory and marked irresolution of purpose, and inability to carry into action any well-defined business enterprise, or to fix the mind upon any one thing at a time. There is great sensitiveness to impress, though retained but a short time, with a flickering and fluttering condition of the mental faculties, rendering an individual what is commonly called a "whiffle-minded or fickle-minded man."
This condition of the individual, distressing as it is, may with a certainty be cured by THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND LOTHROP'S TONIC PILLS,
Medicines unrivaled for their wonderful properties and remarkable cures of all Nervous Complaints. Their efficacy is equally great in the treatment and cure of Cancer, Nodes, Ulcers, Pustules, Pimples, Tetter, Fever, Sores, Ringworm, Erysipelas, Scald-head, Barbers' Itch, Scourvy, Salt Rheum, Copper-Colored Blisters, Glandular Swellings, Worms and Black Spots in the Flesh, Discolorations, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth and Nose, Sore Legs, and Sores of every character, because these medicines are the very best

Sold by all Druggists, and will be sent by express to all parts of the country upon addressing the proprietor, G. E. F. LOTHROP, M. D., 143 Court Street, Boston, Mass., who may be consulted free of charge either personally or by mail. Send 25 cents and get a copy of his Book on Nervous Diseases.

How Peebles Asked the Old Man.
Peebles had just asked Mr. Merriweather's daughter if she would give him a lift out of bachelorhood, and she had said "yes." It therefore becomes absolutely necessary to get the old man's permission, so that, as Peebles said, arrangements might be made for hopping the conjugal twig.
Peebles said he'd rather pop the interrogation to all of old Merriweather's daughters, and his sisters, and his female cousins, and his aunt Hannah in the country, and the whole of the his female relations, than ask old Merriweather. But it had to be done; and so he sat down and studied out a speech which he was to deliver to old Merriweather the very first chance he got to shy at him. So Peebles dropped in on him one evening when all the family had meandered to class meeting, and found him doing a sum 'n' beer measure, trying to calculate how many quarts his interior would hold without blowing the head off of him.
"How a-re you Peeb?" asked old Merriweather, as Peebles walked in, as white as a piece of chalk, and trembling as if he had swallowed a condensed earthquake.
Peebles was afraid to answer, because he wasn't so sure about that speech. He knew he had to keep his grip on it while he had it there, or it would slip away from him quicker than a greased eel through an augur hole. So he blurted right out:
"Mr. Merriweather—Sir: Perhaps it may not be unknown to you that during an extended period of some five years I have been busily engaged in the prosecution of a commercial enterprise?"
"Is that so, and keepin' it secret all the time, while I thought you was tendin' store. Well, by George, you're one of 'em now, ain't yer?"
Peebles had to begin all over again, to get the run of it.
"Mr. Merriweather—Sir: Perhaps it may not be unknown to you that during an extended period of some five years, I have been engaged in the prosecution of a commercial enterprise, with a sufficient determination to procure a sufficient maintenance."
"Sit down, Peeb, and help yourself to some beer. Don't stand there holdin' your hat like a blind beggar with the paralysis. What's the matter with you, anyhow? 'I—I never saw you behave so in my born days.'"
Peebles was knocked out of time again, and had to wonder back for a fresh start.
"Mr. Merriweather—Sir: It may not be unknown to you that during an extended period of some five years I have been engaged in the prosecution of a commercial enterprise, with a determination to procure a maintenance—"
"A whicheance?" asked old Merriweather; but Peebles held on to the last word, as if it was his only chance, and went on:
"In the hope that some day I might enter wedlock, and bestow all my earthly possessions upon one whom I could call my own. I have been a lonely man, sir, and have felt it is not good for a man to live alone therefore—"
"Neither is it, Peebles, and I'm all-fired glad you dropped in. How's the old man?"
"Mr. Merriweather—Sir:" said Peebles, in despairing confusion, raising his voice to a yell, "it may not be unknown to you that during an extended period of a lonely man, I have been engaged to enter wedlock, and bestow all my commercial enterprise on one whom I could procure a determination to be good for sufficient possession—no, I mean—that is—that, Mr. Merriweather—Sir, it may not be unknown—"
"And then again it may. Look here, you'd better lay down and take something warm; you ain't well!"
Peebles, sweating like a four year old colt went in again:
"Mr. Merriweather—Sir: It may not be lonely for you to prosecute me whom you call a friend for commercial maintenance, but—but—oh, shee fly—Mr. Merriweather—Sir: it—"

"Oh! Peebles, you talk as wildly as an idiot. I never saw a more first-class idiot in the whole course of my life. What's the matter with you, anyhow?"
"Mr. Merriweather—Sir:" said Peebles, in an agony of bewilderment, "it may not be unknown to you that you prosecute a lonely man who is not good for a commercial period of wedlock for some five years, but—"
"See here, Mr. Peebles, you're drunk, and if you don't behave better than that, you'd better leave. If you don't I'll chuck you out, or I'm a Dutchman."
"Mr. Merriweather—SIR!" said Peebles, frantic with despair, "It may be unknown that my earthly possessions are engaged to enter wedlock five years with a sufficiently lonely man who is not good for commercial maintenance—"
"The bloody deuce he isn't. Now you just git up and git, old hoss, or I'll knock what little brains out of you that you've got left."

With that old Merriweather took Peebles by the collar and shot him into the street as if he had just run against a locomotive going at the rate of five miles an hour. Before old Merriweather had a chance to shut the door, Peebles had collected his legs and one thing and another that were lying around on the pavement, and arranged himself in a vertical position, and yelled:
"Mr. Merriweather—Sir: It may not be unknown to you—" which made the old man so savagely mad that he went out and set a bull terrier on Peebles, who went home half a pound lighter, while Merriweather asserts to this day that they had to draw all the dog's teeth to get the flesh out of his mouth, for he had a awful holt for such a small animal.

Why Men Need Wives.
It is not to sweep the house, and make the bed, and darn the socks, and cook the meals, chiefly that a man wants a wife. If this is all he needs, hired help can do it cheaper than a wife. It is this, when a young man calls to see a lady, send him into the pantry to taste the bread and cakes she has made; send him to inspect the needlework and bed making, or put a broom into her hand and send him to witness its use. Such things are important, and the wise young man will quietly look after them.

But what a true man most wants of a true wife is her companionship, sympathy, courage and love. The way of life has many dreary places in it and a man needs a companion to go with him. A man is sometimes overtaken with misfortune; he meets with failure and defeat; trials and temptations beset him, and he needs one to stand by and sympathize. He has some stern battles to fight with poverty, with enemies and with sin; he needs a woman that, while he puts his arm around her he feels that he has something to fight for and will help him to fight; that will put her lips to his ear and whisper words of counsel, and her hands to his heart and impart new inspirations. All through life, through storm and through sunshine, conflict and victory, through adverse and favoring winds, man needs a woman's love. The heart yearns for it. A sister's or a mother's love will hardly supply the need.
Yet many seek for nothing more than success in house work. Justly enough, half of these get nothing more; the other half, surprised above measure, have gotten more than they sought. Their wives surprise them by bringing a noble idea of marriage, and disclosing a treasury of courage, sympathy and love.

Miss Agnes Beckwith, daughter of the proprietor of Lambeth Baths, London, England, recently won a purse of one hundred pounds and a gold medal by swimming over five miles in one hour and nine minutes. She is only fourteen.

Something to Read on Sunday.
The whole family climbed out of the wagon and went into the Atlant book store.
They were father and mother, and a sixteen-year-old daughter.
"Mister, we want ter sorter git somethin' good to read on Sunday, which is powerful lousense in the country."
"Shall be glad to serve you, sir. What will the ladies like?"
"What d'ye want, Sofy?"
"I'd choose somethin' 'bout the new fashions, pa!"
"Of course, I mought a know'd that! Kin you fix her out?"
"Oh, yes," replied the storekeeper, "we 'have here Godey, Leslie, Harper Bazaar, Peterson, Demorest, and numerous other magazines."
"Godey? W'y you don't tell me he's live an' figerin' out fashions yet, do ye?" cried the old man.
"Oh yes?" was the reply.
"Well, centennial snakes and cross-barred breeches; W'y ole 'ooman, don't ye mind ye that we hed our weddin' close fixed up arter his plan? Godey? Of course, Sofy, ye'll take jody, and I'll bet the bob tailed mule an' the black sheet that what he says is the fashion can't be discounted."
"What will your wife like?" asked the merchant, as the old man paid for the magazine.
"Somethin' that's got good church readin' in it—some religious paper, ef ye please," replied the old lady.
"Here is the best we have—the Christian at Work."
"Hold up thar! Is that got any of that Beecher an' Tilting bizness in it?"
"None o'yer bizness, anyhow! S'pose there is"—fired up the old lady.
"Taint! hey!"
"No, taint! So's it's church readin' it don't bother you, sir; so dry up!"
"Well, mebbe that's so; what I read don't bother you, too? All right, mister; jist haul me out a dozen 'lustrated papers full of pictures of legs with striped stockin's on and fifty dollar garter, and—"
The old lady chuckled the Christian at Work under the table, grabbed the old man by the ear, and if he had worn striped stockings, about eleven inches of them would have been seen between the tops of his shoes and the bottoms of his pants' legs, as she made him walk Spanish out to the wagon. —Atlanta Constitution.

Expressions of the Emotions.
There is nothing more wonderful in nature than this expressiveness of the human face, nor anything which excites a wider sympathy than this expression of the emotions. The whole charm of art lies in the expression, and no art is so powerful as the dramatic, in which words are interpreted by looks and gestures. Any one who has seen a great play well acted, will know that even the most powerful words convey half their meaning without a visible embodiment. The countenance utters a thousand things which words miss or mar. In delicate natures it is as sensitive as the surface of a lake, and is ruffled or calmed by every breath of feeling. Each shade of passion, from rage to tenderness, from love to hate, from joy to misery, has its peculiar reflection, and the slightest shades of variation are perceptible. A glance, a blush, a smile, a tear will convey in an instant the thought which a poet would labor for hours to express, and which he would, after all, fall short of.

They were husband and wife, and as they stood before the Soldiers' monument she asked:
"What's that figger on top?"
"That's a goddess," he answered.
"And what's a goddess?"
"A woman who holds her tongue," he replied.
She looked side-ways at him and began planning to make a peach pie with the pits in it for the benefit of his sore tooth.
