Samuel J. Tilden.

Mr. Samuel J. Tilden said nothing in a public manner in regard to the late Presidential election, since the inauguration of Hayes, until a recent event afforded him a fitting opportunity. Hon. Thos. A. Hendricks, on his way to Europe, was honored with a grand reception by his friends in New York. Mr. Tilden, of course was present, and spoke as follows: Everybody knows that after the recent election men who were elected by the people President and Vice-Presi dent of the United States were counted out, and men who were not elected were counted in and seated. I disinvolved in this transaction. Not by any act or word of mine shall that be dwarfed or dragged in personal grievance which is in truth the greatest wrong that has stained our national annals to every man of the four and a quarter millions who are defrauded of the fruit of their elective franchise. It is as great a wrong to the country as it was to me and no less to every man of the minority will the ultimate conequences extend. The evils in govcrimient grow by success and impurity They do not arrest their own progress They can never be limited except by external forces. If the men in possession of the Government can, in one instance, maintain themselves in power against an adverse decision at elections, such an example will be condoned. The temptation exists always. Devices to give the color of law and false pretenses on which to ground false decisions will not be wanting. The wrong will grow into practice if condoned. In the world's distory the changes in a succession of governments have usually been the result of fraud or force. It has been our faith and pride that we had estabtished a mode of peaceful change to be worked out by the agency of the bal-lot-box. The question is, whether our elective system in its substance, is to be maintained. This is the question of questions. Until it is finally settled ere can be no politics founded on inferior questions of administration polinvolves the fundaments light of the people. It involves the elective principle. It involves the chole system of popular government. The people must signally, condemn a great wrong which has been done to them. They must strip the example of anything that can attract imitators. They must refuse a prosperous immuaity to crime. This is not all. The people will not be able to trust the auas or beneficiaries of the wrong to advise remedies, but when those who sondenin the wrong shall have power they must devise measures which shall render a repitition of the wrong forever If my voice could reach groughout the country, and be heard in the remotest hamlets, I would say, be of good cheer; the republic will live. The institutions of our fathers are not to expire in shame. The sovcreignty of the people shall be rescued from this peril and re-established. Sucwrong never appears so tri aphantly as on the very eve of its Seven years ago a corrupt dythisty culminated in its power over the million of people who live in the city of New York. It had conquered or beibed or flattered and won almost everybody into acquiescence. It appeared to be inevitable and invincible.

Why He Did Not Insist Upon His Bights. Washington Special to-the Baltimore Sun. An eminent citizen of Alabama, who passed through Washington yesterday on his way back from New York, had, while in that city, an interview with Mr. Tilden. He said to Mr. Tilden that the people of the South were con-vinced that he had been fairly and lawfully elected to the office of Presilent of the United States; that the peo ple of that section, in common with the great body of the people of the whole United States, thought that Mr. Filden, as the lawfully elected ruler of the country, should have taken early after the election a decided attitude and insisted upon his rights; that had ne done so, and the proper announce ment of the vote of the Electoral Col eges been prevented, the House of Representatives would have elected aim according to the forms of law, and made itself responsible for his indue ion into the office which belonged to Tilden listened attentively to the remarks of his visitor, a gentlemen nearly twenty years his senior. He replied that he had thought carefully nd most conscientiously over the sub et lo all its possible phases; that h ad become convinced that should he topt the course suggested it would be sirred by the Radical party to the exhat he shrunk from the responsibity I precipitating another terrible civil ar upon his countrymen, and consenat to the compromise which averted o dread a disaster. He felt as keenly as any one the impropriety of the wen thought about, but, for all that, odd not regret his own action. As was, and people of the United States terstood it; the Democratic party -day occupieo such a proud attitude before the country as it had never occupied before, and no moral power equid resist its triumphal march to
