From the Boston Post. The Poet's Notice to Correspondents.

A paragraph to make one laugh. Should be of ten lines just half. A trival metaphor—a brilliant stream Of verbiage, metaphor and dream— Such as this paragraph I deem!

A stirring song is never long. But must be fiery, deep and strong; With much of thought not fully wrought, But in dim glimpses shown and caught;— Such are the rules Anacron taught.

A good critic should ever seek To check the proud and help the weak; Not swayed by fame, nor prone to blame; Calm, energetic, never tame, And judging all men just the same.

A tale or sketch should seldom fetch Its hero from thy hand, Jack Ketch;— Though for a time the tide of crime Roll down white crested and sublime, It leaves a track of venom'd slime.

In short, be brief!—each added leaf Is so much to your reader's grief; The point is gone—the lightning shower And perished as we labored on;— True wit ne'er feels a second dawn!

Observe these rules, and mock the "schools Of composition" taught by fools!— Briefness and wit together fit, And free, like Parthians, when they "hit"— The archais are too wise to sit.

AGRICULTURAL.

The following is an extract from a letter from Chas. H. Pond, addressed to Hon. Thos. Erbank, bearing date Milford, Conn., December, 1851. We copy from the Patent Office Report.

Hogs are not raised in large droves in this vicinity, but almost every family raise their own pork, which is esteemed better for their use than any that can be bought. Our pork is of the first quality, and as good as the very best. By a State law, swine are not "free commoners;" but towns can make laws to allow them to go at large. Many always keep their swine in pens; but others allow them to graze and feed upon their own lands till they are ready to be fattened, and then they are penned and corn-fed till they are ready to butcher. When about a year old, the hogs will weigh from 300 to 500 pounds; and spring pigs, killed in December, often weigh 300 pounds. A mixture of "old-fashion hogs" with Berkshires, and with the China breed, generally does very well. But more depends upon the feed than upon the breed; but in this last there is a choice; yet almost any breed makes good pork when fully fed. Whole corn is generally fed out; but when the hogs have become fat and lazy, they prefer ground feed. Hogs are better fattened with old corn than with new, especially if fed with ears, as the ears of new corn make their teeth sore. Raw corn is generally fed out; but just before killing time, the hogs like cooked food, and those who have cooking conveniences, and plenty of fuel, pursue this method. Pork is worth from $5 to $7 the hundred pounds.

CUTTING TIMBER.

If oak, hickory or chestnut timber is felled in the eighth month (August) in the second running of the sap, and barked, quite a large tree will season perfectly, and even the twigs will remain sound for years; whereas, that cut in winter; and remaining until next fall (as thick as one's wrist,) will completely sprout, and will be almost useless for any purpose.—The body of the oak split into rails will not last more than ten or twelve years. Chestnut will last longer, but no comparison to that cut in the eighth month. Hickory cut in the eighth is not subject to be worm-eaten, and will last a long time for fencing.

When I commenced farming in 1802, it was the practice to cut post-fencing in the winter.—White oak posts and black oak rails, cut at that time, I found not to last more than 10 or 12 years. In the year 1808, I commenced cutting fence timber in the eighth month. Many of the oak rails cut that year are sound yet, as well as most of those formed of chestnut. If the bark is not taken off this month, however, it will peel off itself the second or third year, and leave the sap perfectly sound. The tops of the trees are also more valuable for fuel, than when cut in winter or spring.

I advise you farmers to make the experiment for yourselves, and if post fences will not last twice as long, I forfeit all my experience as worthless.

PREPARATION FOR CORN PLANTING.—With so many broad acres to be covered as our system of culture on Southern plantations seem to demand, we have little hope of seeing the sub-soil plows used in breaking our lands broad cast. We therefore suggested a sort of compromise between what ought to be done, and what will or may be done. In that formation of the list for planting, in all lands which are hard or tenacious, with an under stratum of clay, we advise that the first furrow be run with a large and long scoter plow, in the bottom of this run the sub-soil plow, as deep as possible; then run the scoter on each side, and sub-soil in the bottom of each furrow. This makes the preparation good immediately under the root, leaving the opportunity for breaking the middle thoroughly at subsequent workings of the corn. If the year should be wet, nothing will be lost, if dry, everything will be gained by this deep plowing. We set no claims to fore-knowledge, but judging from the extreme quantity of rain which has fallen in the past year, we may reasonably expect that this extra labor will be required, it would certainly be prudent to make preparations for any emergency which may arise.

The man that ate his dinner with the fork of a river, has been attempting to spin a mountain top.

How to Get Rid of a Bore.—The very sight of WINCHELL upon our streets, reminds us of an incident, which happened but a year or two ago. Winchell was reclining on his couch in the globe Hotel, Syracuse, on a summer's afternoon, perusing one of James' latest novels, when a drawing down-castren voice was heard in the hall, in a dialogue with an Irish chambermaid, who was busily engaged in mopping the floor, and serenading the Comedian with "Up steps General Bonapart, and tuck me be the hand," saying:—

Yankee.—Whar 'bout is Winchell's room gal? Chambermaid.—Ye'll find him in number 14, the deur is a bit open, ye see.—[singing, "How duiz odd Ireland, and how duz it stand," &c.]

[Enter down-castren into W.'s room—stands on his whistles anything, but a tune, gazes at the recumbent humorist from head to foot and finally opens after this fashion:—

Yankee.—Pick up considerable money a round ha? Winchell.—[feigning deafness.] What kind of hay? Go down the office to Mr. Marsh—it is marsh hay ye've got to see!

Yankee.—[perplexed.] Bin in this business long? Winchell.—There's a Misses Long somewhere in town, takes in white-washing, don't she? Yankee.—Ain't you Winchell, that I have heard stories about? Winchell.—About one story higher, third story is about one story higher.

Yankee.—Je-rus-a-leam! I guess I must be in the wrong room, Jo Thom-sin, you know him don't you? Winchell.—No, I don't chew; but I see you do, by the way you flood the carpet.

Yankee.—[completely dumb-founded.] I calculate I've barked up the wrong tree, here gall look here! Cham.—Who had been listening very attentively to the interesting dialogue. What is it you are after? Yankee.—Didn't you say number fourteen? Cham.—Sure I can't find you wid ears; I said number fifteen. You'll mind that it's him by the way he'll speak French, just for fun like.

Yankee.—Yes, that's the critter, Jo Thom-sin used to tell about his cutting up dog in Schenectady in the Collector's office on the canal.

Yankee tries the door of No. 15, in which Misch Hauser the celebrated violinist was domiciled, and who was just commencing to dress for dinner. Hearing his door appealed to with sundry unsonic kicks, he opened it an inch, and to his horror, in bolted the affords intruder, was erromonty; and sits upon the bed whereon are spread sundry shirts, cravats, jewelry, &c.

Yankee.—Gosh, old fellow, I got you at last; slip on your rags and lets go and take a horn. I got more'n three dollars any how to spend before I go home.

Hauser.—Vou as some bishness wi me.—Vou so vex I am j'aine, in hishible. Yankee.—Never mind the bill, I'll treat; come down. Jo Thomsin used to tell me about you in Schenectady.

Hauser.—[in a rage.] Allez! Allez! Vons Allez, sacra-craucille. Yankee.—Exactly, on the canal, in the Collector's office, there's where he knew you; whoop I got you at last old boss. He said you'd begin to cut up dog.

Hauser.—Oh boss! cut up the dog, that is not my profession; cut up your dog diable, I am sair Mons. Hauser.

Yankee.—Yes, you are a boss sir. Now give us that Dutch story and I'll treat Hauser rings the bell in a violent manner. Enter Bar keeper.—Did you ring sir.

Hauser.—Certaintment I ring; take dis man away, Jo, I am no acquaintance wi him; he come in, he sit down upon de bed, he soll over de bed, he mon shirt, spoil mon cravat, mon chepate, everting, see! see!

Yankee.—[Taking another roll.] You'll dew to travel, I gosh! How da you put that hair on tew your upper lip? Bar Keeper.—You are mistaken in the room. Winchell is in No. 14.

Yankee.—That ar gall said No. 15. Say gall. Cham.—[Sings.] 'Tis a poor distressed Nation as ever was seen, for they're hanging men and women for the wearing of the green. Bar Keeper.—Mary, come here a minute. Faust'ud I be doing there.

Yankee.—Didn't you say No. 15. Cham.—Sair, I tauld ye number 14; I am not after fudin' ye wid ears. "Thin steps General Bonapart," goes off singing.

Bar Keeper.—I guess you've seen the elephant, anyhow. Yankee.—I've seed a lot of dar. skunks, [exit down-castren grumbling.] The scene closes with an explanation between Mr. Hauser and Winchell, to the amusement of both.

This valuable remedy stands without rival in the history of discoveries in this or any other country, in curing those painful and paralyzing diseases in their various forms. Not only recent acute, chronic, or inflammatory, but the old chronic cases of ten, twenty, and even forty years standing, when they had not only tried every other internal and external remedy of which they could hear, but at great expense had visited the various watering places without obtaining relief—some who were reduced to a mere skeleton, their flesh withered and limbs paralyzed—these have been permanently cured, are now enjoying excellent health, are able to follow their former avocations with their usual agility—from the use of these medicines. These facts are fully substantiated by published testimony, which cannot be gainsaid; but can be vouchered by thousands. FRESH GARDEN SEEDS ON HAND and for sale by JOHNSTON, SMITH & CO.

LOUDON, On the Tennessee River, 30 miles below Knoxville and 75 above Chattanooga, (Ga.) and the present location of the East Tennessee & Georgia Rail Road, and the point at which, most likely the Charleston Habon Gap & Tennessee River Rail Road will unite with it, and cross the River to Knoxville, and thence to Lexington and Cincinnati, offers extraordinary inducements to Capitalists, Merchants, Manufacturers, and Mechanics.

FROM ITS POSITION IT WILL COMMAND Tennessee, and portions of Virginia, Kentucky and North Carolina; and as the centre of a fertile and prosperous section of country, in the very heart of the United States, and almost on an air-line between the great cities of the North and East, and New Orleans, it will retain a heavy Trade, and be on the National thoroughfare after the Rail Road (now building) completed to and through Virginia and as is most likely, will be united by lines of road with Charleston on the South, and Lexington and Cincinnati on the North, and as now with Augusta and Savannah, so at no distant day with Mobile, New Orleans, Memphis and Nashville. A very extensive and rich region of country, drained by the Clinch, the Holston, the French Broad, the Little Tennessee, and the Tellico Rivers, all of which are navigable for Steam-Boats, must always make this point its market; and it is also commanded a large portion of the Flat East Trade, which will bring to it vast quantities of Lumber, Iron, Coal, Salt, Plaster, Marble, Slate, Grain, and Provisions. All of these combine to make it a favorable location for manufacturing purposes, and for the purchase, sale, and forwarding of the rich products for which this country is noted. These great natural avenues of Trade, Travel, and Business—the just anticipation that they will confer upon Loudon and its vicinity products of the soil, and the energy and industry of the people of the surrounding country, will afford the most extensive resources for the purposes of successful commerce, and justify the Loudon to be looked to now as one of the most promising locations for a large and flourishing town.
