THE NATIONAL REPUBLICAN HAS A LARGE CIRCULAR FILE OF THE MORNING PAPER IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

THURSDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 23, 1875.

BEN HILL, Democratic Congressman from Georgia, advises his fellow-partisans not to talk politics. Cautious Ben! He is afraid that his friends will express their real opinions.

The chairman of the Democratic State central committee of Mississippi is virtually Governor of that State to-day. The colored citizens of Hinds county are compelled, under the present condition of affairs, to look to him for protection. They cannot walk with safety to their homes, without the immediate aid of their homes, without a passport from him.

It is possible that Governor Ames, of Mississippi, is a technical observer of the maintenance of the red tape system which taught at West Point, but if he is not, it is about time that he should speak to the public in some more definite form than through his communications to the officials of the General Government. He stands accused of having frittered away his legitimate authority by pursuing a policy of inebriety. He is entitled to be heard in his own defense.

JOHN COCHRANE and his gang have spoken in favor of Tilden, Bigelow, Morrissy and the balance. But Cochrane's voice, unsupported by the other members of the party who formerly gave what little substance there was to the Liberal Republican party of New York, sounds very weak. Whitehead, with Tilden's check for $50,000 in his pocket, will take up the echo and try to make it appear that the meeting of Cochrane's squally yesterday amounted to something.

CONSUL VIDAL, a worthy gentleman, no doubt, has been sustained, the honor of our country and its flag has been vindicated. The insult offered to the American flag by the representative of American dignity in that country. All this at the expense of thousands of dollars and much display of diplomacy, bunting and cannon. Meanwhile, on their native soil, a hundred or more citizens of Mississippi have been murdered, and Tripoli has apologized for a cold blooded and the Government, after spending a few dollars in telegraphing the construction of constitutional law, has allowed the perpetrators of this great outrage to take control of affairs in that State and supersede the power of the legitimate authorities.

THE ARREST and incarceration of ex-Assistant District Attorney Fisher will prove to be most fortunate and needed warning to the class of young lawyers in the District who, regardless of party preferences, have been in the habit of generally pressing the most objectionable and prevalent and are winked at by the Government authorities, and who have, therefore, sought opportunities to benefit themselves at the expense of the public and their own personal characters. No one who is acquainted with the circumstances precedent to this arrest will free himself from the feeling that the father of the unfortunate young man, from all blame in the matter; but a generous public will yield him the recognition that is due to his undoubted personal honor and integrity, while it will hold him responsible for having repaid too much confidence in his free ward son. In fact, the public estimate of this affair is Judge Fisher has suffered under circumstances which entitle him to sympathy, because he has been betrayed by a member of his own family, but which could not have existed if he had not yielded indiscreetly to the promptings of an indulgent and forgiving disposition towards one who was unworthy of such kindness. Of course, the Opposition has not failed to make the most of the affair, and every man, woman and child in the District who is supposed to have even the remotest sympathy for the Government under which Judge Fisher served is accused of complicity in it.

For the last two years it has been impossible to tell a Republican from a Democrat, except by the party emblem growing out of the hat. The public has been so confused by the confusion has struck in, and both the old parties seem to have lost their bearings and policy and nominate mixed tickets, thereby to gain votes for their opponents."

Do not the Graphic is right as regards the city of New York, and perhaps the rest of the country, because, in common more or less with the people of the entire North, New Yorkers are puffed up with a vain-glorious opinion that they are the best governed city which really still divide the two parties mentioned by whipping the Southern rebels ten years ago. But where this blundering and criminally blind self-conceit does not obscure the public consideration of the transactions of these ten years, a different opinion that they are the best governed city in the South, and for example, Republicanism and Democracy are terms which find synonyms in the words loyalty and disloyalty. There can be no confusion "struck in" in that section, for party lines there are drawn as distinctly as when they were the present cover of a common in the Southern Democracy (called an overt treason. One of these days the stupid, arrogant and self-conceited North will wake up to a full realization of this fact, and find out that every principle for which the Northern people fought during the war has been sacrificed before the gradual encroachments of the Southern Democracy. In short, disloyalty is rapidly undermining the structure established by loyalty, while the self-sufficient builders of that structure slumber quietly and in comfortable oblivion to the danger which surrounds them.

The New York Times, which is, perhaps, presented before a Republican journal by the ignorance and stupidity of its management, complains of Judge Pershing, the Democratic candidate for Governor in Pennsylvania, because he voted, while a member of the Legislature, for a bill to prohibit negroes from coming into that State to make it their temporary or permanent residence. Also because he voted to censure President Lincoln for the issue of the Emancipation Proclamation and against the ratification of the amendment to the National Constitution to abolish slavery. There are other reasons why the Times objects to Pershing, but like the foregoing, they are the result of a false security. Looked at in the light of the ten years ago by every true man in the country, he has given no proof of repentance for his disloyal course since then, and his nomination now cannot be accounted for in any other way than by the assumption that the people have become negligent and forgetful under the influence of the teachings to which we have alluded.

For these reasons we insist that the campaign in Pennsylvania is more important, more fraught with national significance, than any of the number to be fought this year. From a Southern Republican standpoint the issue involved in it over-rides every question presented in Ohio or New York, or those likely to be presented in any other State. Soft money and hard money may be the features of the contest which will attract the attention of the voters directly interested in it; but the result can only be decided on account of these incidents in his past record, he should be treated differently than any other pro-slavery, State Rights Democrat. The war is over, and the treatment of American citizens who look upon it as the first direct hand-to-hand fight since the war on Northern soil between the friends and the enemies of republican government.

"HARPER'S WEEKLY" AND THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY. Harper's Weekly is of the opinion that the political situation is exceedingly interesting, and adds that "a few months since" it was asserted that the country was tired of the Republicans, and that it would not "disturb the Democratic party to-day" merely because it was the losing party "yesterday." From this standpoint it argues that things being equal as regards the currency question, the former might retain its ascendancy in the General Government. But having asserted the idea that the Democratic party was "the tool of slavery yesterday," it does not say anything to prove that it is the tool of slavery to-day. Here is where the Weekly and other journals of similar political tendencies make a great mistake, to the injury of the Republican party, because they do not teach the public that the Democratic party is as much the tool of slavery to-day as it ever was. It is the mission to teach this truth to the masses of the people, and thousands of good citizens and loyal voters in the North to become negligent of the obligations assumed by the party when it solemnly promised to accompany the act of emancipation by provisions for the permanent protection of the emancipated.

THE PENNSYLVANIA CAMPAIGN—ITS NATIONAL SIGNIFICANCE. If Judge Pershing lives in Georgia, instead of the influence of the Southern Democratic leader the same as he is now, and his Democratic followers would applaud him the same as they do now, because he is a Bourbon of Bourbons. Gordon, Lamar and that class of secession Democrats of the South who see the advantage over him of a Democratic leader the same as he is now, and his Democratic followers would applaud him the same as they do now, because he is a Bourbon of Bourbons. Gordon, Lamar and that class of secession Democrats of the South who see the advantage over him of a Democratic leader the same as he is now, and his Democratic followers would applaud him the same as they do now, because he is a Bourbon of Bourbons.

So here we have it. When Gov. Ames did call for a posse, or approve of the suggestion of several of the best white citizens that one should be sent to Clinton, the posse did not wish the sheriff to go because he was a little more than a mere messenger, and was not under command of the sheriff, but with an officer of their own selection, and with every indication that it was composed of men who were laboring under the excitement to which allusion is made above, and were therefore ready to do murder, the same as the posse of the Southern States. It does not prove that the White Liners have complete control, not only of the "ignorant masses," but of the "best white citizens," and we are at a loss to understand it. And these facts, it must be remembered, are furnished by the object of our article, the chairman of the Democratic executive committee, who resided at Raymond, Miss., and who has been in the habit of issuing passes, which he has used to protect himself and his family, and who has been in the habit of issuing passes, which he has used to protect himself and his family, and who has been in the habit of issuing passes, which he has used to protect himself and his family.

EDITORIAL AFTERTHOUGHT. Senator Thurman says that his self-respect forbids his being seen in the company of Saml. Allen, and that he is unwilling to shake off the "old man" who has been so long a partner in the same. Allen, rather enjoys it. Likes associate readily according to the eternal fitness of things. William Allen is fighting the Whig party with all the bitterness of a bygone age. He "still renews the ancient scene, but forgets the forty years between." "These are the effects of doing age." "William, William, whose's your name?"

With the glistering epiphany in the basement of the Capitol, the House of Representatives, in its session of yesterday, was rapidly going to that place where it will read (hot) all over. This is a sad commentary on what might have been. A Daniel comes to judgment. A real live, active, earnest Daniel, Mr. Marsh, one whom you will find exceedingly difficult to shake off. He is a man who can prove you to be a willful violator of the law that was enacted to benefit the moral condition of the Indian. It says so on the records, and records are stubborn facts, Mr. Marsh; records are stubborn facts.

There is a law already enacted that will reach Professor Marsh for dealing out liquor to Indians on Indian reservations, and now, in accordance with the President's wise and humane suggestions, let the coming Congress pass a law making the holding of slaves by American citizens in any form, whether voluntary or involuntary, a crime punishable by imprisonment, or something equally severe. This would reach William Wells, and put an end to his inhuman and selfish transactions, besides relieving Cuba of a searching cure.

ance of public opinion one way or the other as regards the finances, will carry with it the consent of millions of American citizens who look upon it as the first direct hand-to-hand fight since the war on Northern soil between the friends and the enemies of republican government.

As showing the intensity of the canvass in Ohio the Republican announcements of speakers in all the columns of close type, and include now the names of Senators Sherman, Morton, Boutwell, Dawes and Winnow; Carl Schurz, Stewart L. Woodford, ex-Governor James Pollock, Pennsylvania, and a strong array of home talent. On the Democratic side, it should be added, is an equally formidable list. Cassius M. Clay has been put forward in the Western Reserve, to tell his old abolitionist friends to vote the Democratic ticket. He is, and is estimated, indeed, at 650,000.

A few more-converted veteran political pensioners, who have been of no particular benefit to the party for the past ten years, gathered together yesterday at the State House, to take part in resolutions of the Governor of the State and his reform policy. There is something quite ridiculous in the manner in which these worn-out, second-hand men are being used to represent the party. If we remember right it has been nearly a year since he commenced his crusade against the canal monopoly, and yet not one single criminal has been punished. Since Gov. Tilden commenced his reform policy, a number of criminals have been punished. Grant, a broken up and completely destroyed the most gigantic fraudulent scheme of the country, and yet not one single criminal has been punished. Since Gov. Tilden commenced his reform policy, a number of criminals have been punished.

What a change there is sometimes in the affections of the people! The kind words of Professor Marsh's song was, "The Indian has been robbed! His four is poor, his coffee is mixed with chicory, his sugar is mixed with sand, his blankets are moth-eaten, his squaw is dying of starvation. God pity him, or he, too, will die. Some one must suffer for this. The Indian Bureau is to blame, and I'll show 'em up, so help me!" But a change has come over the mind of the Government, and now the Indian Bureau is to blame, and I'll show 'em up, so help me!"
