

LASTECHOS OF 'WAH,' SIR!

THE JOINT CAUCUS OF DEMOCRATS ADOPT CONSERVATIVE MEASURES.

Which is Highly Commensurable—Various Enamatory Propositions of the "Wah" Opponents Sensibly Voted Down—An Utter Defeat of Dudley Field and Dough-faced Cochrane.

While we are glad to note a growing tendency in the better element of the Democracy towards a peaceful submission to the decision of the Commission, it is interesting to note another tendency—the more extreme revolutionaries.

The final decision of the Democratic caucus last night will, no doubt, be satisfactory to the more conservative of the Tildenites, yet it was in direct opposition to the title revolutionary idea of the party.

The resolution offered, proposing to abandon the Commission and resort to the extreme measures to defeat the final verdict of the arbitrators, was a mere proposition, and, after the usual vote, which would have been a majority, it was voted down.

When it was first decided to offer the resolution in question, there could not be found anyone who had the hardihood to dare introduce such a proposition.

After the caucus, it was discovered that away off in the oblivion of the party ranks, there was an anti-be-comes defunct M. C., from the rural districts of Pennsylvania, answering to the name of (Cochran), who had written a word in Congress, and who would do the ignoble deed, so as to become "well known."

And thus it was that this festive coxcomb, in all the glory of his self-conceit, rose and sat down again with the whole caucus upon his head.

But he was not alone in his misery. Pretty soon the indefatigable DAVID DUDLEY FIELD, of New York, rose and proposed that in view of the various impending dangers to the Democratic party, the House withhold all appropriations for the army and army stores.

The revolutionary character of this measure was suggested by Mr. Willis of New York, and the also sat down upon the floor quietly, withdrew from himself and his infamous resolutions from the caucus.

A ye and nay vote in the House yesterday showed a strength of 161 votes, but at the caucus last night, although re-inforced by several members of the Senate, the majority was reduced to a vote of 100.

It is not to be supposed that the members were indifferent to the action of the caucus, and absented themselves from the want of interest. After the House had adjourned yesterday it was loudly talked by the filibustering element that gentlemen must come up and go upon the record.

A number staid away by attending and participating in the caucus, and a few others were present, but the majority in case of filibustering should be decided upon by a majority of the caucus, which would prevent them from meeting with the Republicans to defeat so revolutionary and disastrous a scheme.

The Democratic Senators held a caucus yesterday afternoon, but took no action, deferring the resolution to the next day.

Col. Robert G. Ingersoll's Lecture at the Academy of Music.

An audience most flattering to a public speaker assembled in the Academy of Music last evening to listen to the lecture of the West. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll. The stage was occupied by over one hundred of the most distinguished citizens of Philadelphia, among whom were numbers of prominent bankers, brokers, merchants and lawyers.

Mr. COGHILL, of Pa., then offered the following resolution: "Resolved, That the count of the electoral vote should be made by the Electoral Commission, and that the provisions of the said law should be strictly adhered to."

CONGRESSIONAL REVIEW.

OUTRAGING RANDALL'S USURPATION OF POWER.

A Most Outrageous Insult to the Senate of the United States. The following interesting and anticipatory letter was written by the author upon securing information...

Obedience to the law and the Constitution is one of the cardinal principles of the Republican party. Hence, when the Republican majority in the Senate received the information yesterday...

Mr. KELLY, who is a single elect in the Oregon investigation, wanted to know whether a personal explanation would be in order. The chair ruled that it would not be. There were but few Senators present at the time...

At ten minutes of 1 o'clock a message was received from the House of Representatives announcing that that body would be prepared to receive the Senate in joint convention at 11 o'clock on Monday.

There was no delay in receiving this message from the House. In strict conformity with the law, the Senate refused to do any business, but it was conceded that any Senator who chose to, could ventilate his views on any question that came up...

Mr. ROOY, of Missouri, was the first to avail himself of this opportunity. He denounced all frauds and asserted that the Republican party was "full of hell and dead men's bones."

There is not a man in the Commission, Democrat or Republican, who does not believe that Justice Bradley acted from the purest motives, and that his official twaddle in either House cannot affect him.

Senator COOPER, of Tennessee, and Senator SARGENT, of California, then resuscitated the Florida caucus and discussed the disgusting question until nearly 3 o'clock, when the Senate took a recess.
