

POLITICS IN VIRGINIA.

A Native Virginian's Views of the Situation.

Necessity for Unity Among the Republicans of the State--Tactics of the Enemy--Worth Copying--Nourish Opposition--Free Schools to be Met--The State Debt the Great--Local Issue in the State.

Suggestions to Virginia Republicans. NORFOLK, VA., July 28, 1879.

To the Editor of the National Republican:

Sir: Politics in this State, from the "off side," among the negatives, is assuming a laboratory of mystery, beyond comprehension, and emphatically expressing it, too copiously for reasonable conjecture, long drawn out to divine what the opposition do mean. Some of the big leaders of the opposition, heavier in verbiage than intellect, are trying to ring in, "check by jowl," with Republican influences.

In order, if they can make the combination, to secure the Legislature next year, in the hands of the "Republicans." There is a big game of policy on foot, and no matter how crossed politicians look and pull, the people are the pushers. General Mahone, the leader of the Readjusters, is full of vim and nerve, and where "he don't justify the means," when he opens the fox-hunt in the fall, "Tray, Blanche, and Sweetheart" will join in, for the "Little Corporal" is an organizer of no mean order of men.

The Conservative but once divided in Virginia, on the antagonistic local issue, which now threatens the unity of the "negatives," the State debt, will be a powerful factor, and the pocket empty, like unto the State treasury now.

Conservative rule has impoverished Virginia; and it fell upon them, they propose to bring up before the Legislature a bill to abolish free schools as an expensive luxury to poor but hopeful humanity in the pursuit of knowledge under difficulties; to the State debt, will be a powerful factor, and the pocket empty, like unto the State treasury now.

If our Republican leaders will therefore join issue in earnest, come down to the congn, and realize facts, there is nothing to prevent them from doing so. They are not to be crowned our united efforts, and like the light straw that floats along the stream, glides with the current still, and leads to ultimate issues. It has not been in the power of a Republican here in Virginia, by its own means, to do the proud bigots, and vaunting villainy against us to secure success, but like "Sempronius, we'll deserve it," and all the more so, by pushing from the front the Republican party success. The world judges actions by results; but when we manage by a just effort, how to control events, "success is prudence," and possession right. It is then that satisfaction descends upon the victor, and crowns our united efforts, and like the light straw that floats along the stream, glides with the current still, and leads to ultimate issues.

ELECTION INVESTIGATION.

The Congressional Committee Work in Cincinnati.

More About the Repeaters from Kentucky--Men Employed to Watch and Detect Them--A Witness Willing to Elector for Anybody who Would Pay--Admittance to Help Chums.

Democratic Witnesses on the Stand.

CINCINNATI, July 30.--In the Congressional committee investigation to-day Governor Gano testified as follows: Was President of the Hamilton County Executive Committee in the last Congressional campaign. The money appropriated for the campaign was supposed to pass through the treasurer's hands; did not know who the managers were before their appointment; Mr. Faraker requested our committee to suggest some one to have some men from Kentucky to prevent repeating by men from that State; I do not know who selected them; do not know that the Congressmen were furnished with money by the campaign committee; Mr. Conger here doubted the propriety of inquiring for the source of campaign funds unless it was shown that the funds had been improperly used. After some discussion the chair decided that the question did Butterworth and Young receive money from the campaign committee was admissible. The witness continued:

I furnished the campaign committee with $2,500, but distributed about ninety-three per cent; $2,000 had been usually distributed in similar campaigns; the $2,500 covered the expenses of stands, speakers, ticket-holders, etc.; a great deal was spent in advertising bill-posting; I will furnish the amount given to Kentuckians later.

Mr. Drew recalled--He said he could not give a list of the Kentuckians, but might be able to get it from the campaign committee. Mr. Hugh--Was about being refused work on the custom-house because they were Democrats?

Mr. Drew--I told the superintendent if I received a man for that work they would have to be Republicans, or men who would work for that ticket; don't think I ever recommended Democrats on condition that they would vote for the Republican ticket.

James Egan, Democrat, testified that he had been called upon by Butterworth to go to work for him; we were to get $2 down and $4 when the work was completed; Butterworth said he did not care who else we worked for so we worked for the Republican ticket; Butterworth gave me $50 in all; saw him give money to several men; Mr. Butterworth had a satchel in his carriage, and the money was taken out of that; saw five men vote in the Fifth Ward three times then afterward voted in other precincts in the same ward; they had Republican tickets; I spent the $50 spending among the boys; some ten days ago I was called upon by Butterworth to go to work for him; he asked me to come and see him at his office; I went, but he was out; McCallister showed me a letter he said was from Butterworth, in which he stated he would give me $100 to go to work for him; I had sold myself like a hog to him; Butterworth did not attempt to bribe or corrupt anybody; was told that if I made an affidavit it would go to the State; I refused to do so; I was given $2 for making it. I did not buy votes for Mr. Butterworth. Butterworth asked me how many votes were in the ward, how many votes they would cast; don't know that he meant anything about buying votes; I took an interest in Butterworth's candidacy on account of the money he paid me. I would have worked for him if I had not had the money. I was cross-examined by Mr. Wright it was developed that two or three of Egan's statements before the committee were in conflict with his affidavit. The witness admitted having received money from Butterworth to parties ask him about the affidavit, but he insisted that the statements herein given are true. Adjournd.

COUSINS IN VIRGINIA. Memorial Services for the Prince Imperial. RICHMOND, Va., July 30.--The memorial services in honor of the late Prince Imperial of France, celebrated under the auspices of the native and descendant Corsicans of this city, took place to-day in St. Peter's Cathedral in the presence of a very large congregation. A solemn requiem mass was sung by Rev. Father Hanley, with Rev. Fathers O'Connell and Habbs as deacons. Rev. Dr. J. O'Connell pronounced the oration, which included a clever review of the career of the Bonapartes, and in which he spoke of the fact noticed by historians, that while that great family remained friendly with the church of Rome they prospered, and that the words "Plus the VII had not been spoken in vain. In referring specially to the deceased, he said, the young Prince Imperial of France, Napoleon III., was born in the Tuilleries in the year 1856, and slain in Zululand in June of this year, was not only great but noble by his blameless and pure life. The man that trained him was that of the historians existed, and his widow, who to-day has the sympathy of all the world, and even of the foes of the Bonapartes, she it was that taught him to be a man of peace, love and mercy. Upon earth in the beautiful prayers written by the Prince shortly before his death, he asked not that his enemies be forgiven, but that he might be forgiven. His prayer was heard, and his spirit ought to be, "This was the greatest of the Napoleons." The entrance and interior of the Cathedral were elaborately dressed with mourning insignia, an immense and tastefully decorated catafalque occupied a prominent space in front of the high altar.
