On the way toward their camp Rice became weak, and finally gave up. He was attacked by a blood flux that gradually wore him down. He succumbed, and was interred in an ice grave by his companion.

LIFE AT FORT CONGER.

Two Winters Happily and Profitably Spent in the Paradise of the Arctic.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., July 18.—There was very little suffering at Fort Conger, where Lieut. Greely and his men spent the first two winters of their exile. Their life there was so pleasant that the survivors speak of the place as the Paradise of the Arctic.

Great attention was paid to cleanliness. The men were required to bathe once a week, and the quarters were kept scrupulously clean.

Whatever the hardships were of the life at Fort Conger, it was life in paradise compared with that in winter quarters at Camp Clay. There a hut was built of stones, roofed over with a whale boat, the oars serving as rafters and covered with canvas.

reported that he had done so, not, however, without much suffering from cold. His party experienced the lowest corrected mean temperature ever known in the annals of Arctic travel—viz., 61° below.

Having fully prepared the way by establishing caches of provisions during his previous journeys, Lieut. Greely, with a party of eight men, set out on April 2 with Brainerd and Frederick Christensen with a dog team to explore the northern shore of Greenland.

They were supported as far as Cape Smyth by a party of eight and advanced thence with twenty-five days' provisions, drawn by eight dogs, crossing the Polar ocean direct to Cape Britannia.

Here they found land trending to the westward of north as far as North Cape, where it turned to the northeastward. On their way, through a region never before explored, they made, following the general direction of the coast and traveling generally by the main track, but occasionally on the ice foot, Lieut. Greely and his party attained, namely, 85° 24.5', in longitude 40° 45' west.

On the 13th day of May, 1883, they even went a short distance beyond this point, but finding that the shadows from the ice prevented his getting an observation, and being required by his orders to establish indisputably the astronomical position of the farthest point reached, Lieut. Greely returned to Lockwood Island, and during the remaining two days carefully determined his position by a series of observations, the date of which are now in the possession of Maj. Greely.

Building a large cairn, he left a record of the journey and a minimum thermometer for the extreme latitude.

WHAT THEY WILL DO.

Proposition to Acclimate the Survivors at Greenland, Me.—Commander Schley's Telegram.

Admiral Nichols, acting secretary of the navy, and Gen. Haron, chief signal officer, had a conference yesterday, at which it was concluded to suggest to Commander Schley that he bring the survivors of the Greely party from St. John's to Portland, Me., where they can remain until better prepared to stand the change of climate.

The following telegram from Commander Schley was received at the navy department this afternoon:

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., July 18.—Nov. WILLIAM E. CHANDLER, SECRETARY OF THE NAVY, WASHINGTON, D. C.: Iron cage for the dead will be delivered July 20. As soon as the remains are transferred to them I will sail for New York, advising you when ready. Lieut. Greely sustained serious injuries to his back, and I have directed a board of three officers to report their extent, when will be advised. Under the charter I hold as surgeon, I am bound to make good the assumption of risk of sea covering all else.

The week of rest for officers and men, after the incessant labor and peril of the past sixty days, is most grateful to you. Your telegram, and that of the acting secretary, Admiral Nichols, gave us great satisfaction. Please accept my thanks for them. In respect to the members of the board flags of ships will fly at half mast during my stay.

W. S. SCHLEY, Commander.

Mrs. Pavy Gets the News.

MARYVILLE, Mo., July 18.—Mrs. Lillie Pavy, wife of Dr. Octave Pavy, the surgeon and naturalist of the Greely expedition, received the news yesterday afternoon from Gen. Haron, of Washington, of the rescue of Lieut. Greely and some of his comrades and the death of her husband.

What is the result of the Greely expedition from a coast and geodesic survey standpoint? asked a REPUBLICAN reporter of Prof. Hilgard, superintendent of that service, yesterday.

The principal object of the international polar expedition was to obtain meteorological and magnetic observations all around the Polar sea. The only connection this service had with the Greely party was to loan instruments to it, and train one or two of the members in their use, notably Mr. Israel, of the earth.

The relative diameter of the earth at the equatorial protuberance and of the so-called flattened poles is ascertained by testing the force of gravitation at the extreme and intermediate points of the decrease of the action of this force by the lessened diameter, causing a slower movement of the pendulum.

read enough on the subject to express any opinion. He had not as yet read even what had been published. This was, he said, especially the case as regards the Arctic. The expedition was led by Lieut. Greely, Lieut. Lockwood, and Sergt. Brainerd. He had found, in his own experience, that most alleged discoveries are made by accident, and in high latitudes estimates of distances by sight are very deceptive.

It may be possible that the land of Greely forms a narrow isthmus, or that about the circle of 85° or higher, so that Franz Joseph's land may be a part of the same continent.

Rochester Brewing Co's BEER.

Analysis of Dr. Engelhardt's Analysis of Prof. Lattimore

Member of the Board of Chemists, State of New York.

1881. 1884.

The results of the analysis, expressed in percentages by weight, are as follows:

Specific Gravity, 10.11 Alcohol, 4.58

Extract, 4.00 Maltose, 0.50

Dextrins, 2.75 Albuminoids, 0.30

Lactic Acid, 0.16 Ash, 0.21

Phosphoric Acid, 0.03 Water, 61.18

The analysis gives no indication that in the manufacture of this Beer any other substances have been used than malt, hops, yeast, and water.
