

COL. MORROW'S PAY.

THE EVIDENCE YESTERDAY BEFORE THE SWAIN COURT-MARTIAL.

The Secretary of War Testifies That He Had No Official Information As to the Fraudulent Accounts—Col. Morrow Himself a Witness on the Subject.

When the Swain court-martial convened yesterday Mr. Robert T. Lincoln, secretary of war, appeared as a witness called by the prosecution. His direct examination was confined simply to the inquiry whether he had received any report or communication from Gen. Swain prior to the 18th of April, 1884, relative to the pay accounts of Col. Morrow. This date (April 18, 1884), is the date of the indictment made by Gen. Swain upon the letter sent him by the secretary of war, communicating to him the charges laid against him before the war department by Mr. Bateman, in which indictment reference was made to the alleged duplication of Col. Morrow's pay accounts.

The secretary testified that he had received no information on the subject from Gen. Swain prior to the report contained in the indictment.

The cross-examination of the witness was conducted by Gen. Grosvenor. It was directed to showing that the secretary had information on the subject prior to April, 1884, of the duplication of Col. Morrow's pay accounts.

The first question asked was whether at the time Gen. Swain referred to in the indictment of April 18, 1884, to the alleged duplication of Morrow's pay accounts, the secretary had not full knowledge of the condition of those pay accounts. This question was objected to by the judge advocate. The ground for the objection was stated to be that the question was incompetent unless the defense proposed to show that Gen. Swain knew that the secretary had information on the subject.

A long argument between counsel followed on this question. The court refused to sustain the objection, and the secretary answered that he had no knowledge whatever of the duplication of Col. Morrow's pay accounts prior to the indictment of his letter by Gen. Swain, to which reference has been made.

He was then asked if he had read reports of the fact, but this question was objected to, and the objection was sustained by the court. The question was also made to the next question, whether the secretary had information that the accounts were said to be fraudulent. The court sustained the objection, and held that the question should be confined to the secretary's "official" information.

The secretary testified that he had had no official information on the subject. In answer to further questions he testified that Maj. Carey, then acting paymaster general, came to see him about a letter he had received from Col. Morrow asking that his (Morrow's) pay be stopped except in order to settle certain debts. His impression was that Maj. Carey simply asked for instructions, and that he did not know what debts Col. Morrow wished to settle. He (the secretary) thought Morrow's request unusual, and did not remember such a request had been made before during his tenure of office. His reply to Maj. Carey was that he would not consent to put an officer's name on the stop page circular, except for some recognized debt.

Gen. Grosvenor then asked if at this time the secretary had any suspicion that these accounts were fraudulent. The question was objected to and was modified so as to ask if it might not have been that at that time he (the secretary) had information, official or otherwise, that these accounts were fraudulent, and if this was not the reason why he (the secretary) had not inquired of Maj. Carey the subject of this assignment. Objection was made to the question in this shape, and the objection gave rise to another question.

The question was finally ruled out by the court. Gen. Grosvenor then asked the witness if he had not on April 15, 1884, had information, official or unofficial, that Morrow's accounts were duplicated. This question was objected to by the prosecution and the question was ruled out.

Gen. Grosvenor then asked if the secretary had ever seen the witness in question, Sherman, the subject of Col. Morrow's pay accounts. The witness said he had never had a conversation with Gen. Sherman on the subject and had not received any communication from him with regard to the pay accounts.

He said, however, that he had had a conversation in the spring of 1883 with Gen. Sherman touching complaints that had come to him concerning the indelicacy of Col. Morrow.

He was asked if a newspaper correspondent named Scott Smith had not come to him early in March, 1884, and told him that Morrow's accounts were fraudulent, and showed him a publication on the subject. This question was objected to and ruled out.

In answer to a question by Gen. Grosvenor, the secretary said that when Maj. Carey brought Col. Morrow's letter to him he (the secretary) knew that the accounts mentioned were in violation of the articles of war.

Gen. Grosvenor then asked: "Did you understand at that time that such an assignment of accounts was in violation of section 2280, in regard to officers' pay accounts?"

Secretary Lincoln replied: "Perfectly well." And Gen. Grosvenor then asked: "Then why did you not prosecute Col. Morrow for violation of the articles of war?"

Mr. Chandler immediately objected to this question, and Gen. Grosvenor said that if objection was made they would not insist upon it.

AN APPEAL FOR MERCY.

Langster, the Murderer of Officer Fowler, Seeks to Be Saved From His Rope.

In the case of the colored convict, Langster, convicted and sentenced to be hung for the murder of Officer John H. Fowler in September last an application has been made to the district attorney's office for his pardon on the ground of insanity. The application is signed by Langster, and is written in his own hand. He says he is self-defense or in manslaughter; says that the police and others had attacked him, and "told him enough to get him hung." He says when he called a murderer in Gaitheer, who killed Gardfield, Bedford and Queenan, who killed Hirth, and the man who killed Lincoln in 1865. He protests that he is insane and says he got his father to be hung for him. He says he is a member of the A. S. M. and he signs his name as "the murderer of Officer John H. Fowler," and asks, "Please get me saved from the rope. God bless you if you do it."

A PARADISE FOR PRESENTS.

Odd Concepts in Gold, Silver, Brass, Bronze, and Iron.

"Cut glass, china, and bronzes," said one of the salesmen at Galt's jewelry store yesterday, "are our special features for this season. In bronzes we have lamps—all the way from the little lamp-pattern cigar lighters to this big one for $100. Seating sets for the ladies, smoking sets for gentlemen, clocks set at work, and trophies in plaques, cases, and every other odd shape and style imaginable."

"But what is this?" asked the reporter, who had strayed in pointing to a piece of art work that was apparently neither gold, silver, bronze, nor brass.

"That is Berlin iron. It is being used largely in all sorts of decoration, armor, trophies, &c. We have iron and silver in combination for personal wear also, a new and popular idea, which is also cheap. You see we have beautiful and artistic things to suit every purse. Here is a diamond, ruby, and emerald studded watch for $450; another, a repeating chronograph, for $450, and here is a fine gold watch for $300."

"But perhaps we have a larger variety of goods in silver, with a greater range of price, than in any other metal. Here is a table pepper mill in silver, there is a silver spoon, and gentlemen, too. Silver candelabra in all designs, tea services in George IV patterns, candle snuffers, silk umbrellas with silver handles, and, in fact, everything that can be made or bought with metal, even to hair brush and manicure sets—we have them all, and in great variety, to suit every body."

"What is positively the latest thing in ladies' ornaments?"

"A pear-shaped pearl, with small diamonds at the small end, mounted as earrings."

As the reporter left the Westminster china store from the latest idea in imported clocks, filling the store with wood and metal.

A Verdict of Not Guilty. In the criminal court yesterday afternoon three young men, John Story, Wm. Story, and James Powers were tried on the charge of larceny from the person of George Bouie, residing near York, Pa., in August last. The testimony was to the effect that the prosecuting witness was quite drunk; that he fell in with three young men and found that something was wrong; that he was robbed of $100. When the defendants were arrested one or more were drunk, and it was alleged that they made a confession. The court in instructing the jury said that he could not put reliance on the statements of a man who would come here to see the city and get drunk, taking for his meals three crusts of bread per day, nor could he put much reliance on the confessions of a crime made by a party while drunk.

The jury found a verdict of not guilty, and the court in discharging the prisoners delivered a good temperance lecture.

Nothing so reliable as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for colds, coughs—in short, for all derangements of the respiratory organs, and in all cases of consumption. In all ordinary cases it is a certain cure, and it affords rare relief for asthma and consumption, even in advanced stages.

East Washington Christmas Clubs. The meetings of the children interested in the Christmas club were held yesterday afternoon in the various school buildings in East Washington, and were well attended and very enthusiastic. Besides the members of last year rejoining, a large number of new ones were added, each one of them paying 10 cents for a certificate of membership. Books were lent to them for the purpose of soliciting contributions, and they have gone into the work with a will. Mrs. E. A. Hilton, the principal of the Peabody building, presided over the meeting in each building, securing over 200 members and collecting about $30. It is thought that Odd Fellows' hall, Eighth street southeast, will be secured for the dinner, as there are more accommodations there than at either of the school buildings.

DIL. R. C. FLOWER.

Boston's Greatest Physician—His Short Stop in Washington on His Way South.

We have just been informed that Dr. R. C. Flower, of Boston, at the earnest solicitation of some of his Washington patients, has a single day stop at the Riggs house, Washington, next Wednesday and Thursday, Dec. 17 and 18, on his way south. We understand that this will be Dr. Flower's first visit to the national capital, and will undoubtedly be taken advantage of by many of the sick and suffering. An opportunity to consult Boston's most famous physician almost at the home door is an opportunity which may never occur again to those of this city vicinity.

The long account of Dr. Flower and his miraculous cures was published a short time ago should be to the sick nothing less than a revelation of hope and life. It is said of Dr. Flower that he has the largest practice of any physician on earth, that he has a number of physicians in his employ, and that his mail reaches into the hundreds of Philadelphia. It is claimed for Dr. Flower that he can tell any one their disease without asking a question, and that out of nearly 100,000 examinations he has never asked a question and never made a mistake, thus enabling to detect the exact condition of his patients he is enabled to treat them with unerring accuracy.

Christmas at Ballantyne's.

The two beautiful panel pictures in the windows of Mr. William Ballantyne's large establishment on Seventh street are but an earnest of the attractions within that test the strings of one's purse to the utmost.

Mr. Ballantyne has always made a specialty of religious literature, and today he has a stock of Bibles, Hymn and Prayer Books, and other religious literature, that for variety and amount is not excelled, south of Philadelphia. The number of various editions of the poets, the superb works on art, the novelties in library ornaments, the large variety of exquisite cards and Christmas books, make a visit to this favorite store a pleasure. Mr. Ballantyne's connection with the book business in Washington extends over more than thirty years, and he is a dealer, and every year finds the business larger than before, the result of business enterprise and an integrity that is never questioned.

The Carroll Institute Fair.

In the center of Massena temple last night was a large Christmas tree laden with handsome presents, and guarding it and amusing the children at the same time was a genuine Carroll Institute Kris Kingle. The attendance at the fair during the evening was very large, and the evening is getting popular. To-day at 3 o'clock the inmates of some of the orphan asylums will attend.
