corate. We have printed the list as far as the names could be ascertained. It aggregated five, all of whom are statesmen of good repute, but the plain, unvarnished and undoubted truth is that, as a rule, the Democratic mob hungers after the spoils and has profound contempt for any theory of reform that does not hinge on office.

A Sample Speech on Office. A National telegram to the Republican gives the details of a gross outrage perpetrated by some of the bourgeois of South Boston, Va., on State Senator Gaines, of Newtary county.

He was inveigled into a room by a number of burbons, the door was locked, and he was informed that neither he nor any other Republican could speak in that town. Mr. Gaines was finally permitted to leave the room, but was followed to his hotel by bullies and repeatedly threatened with personal injury.

The Democratic scoundrels who thus insulted Senator Gaines declared that if Mr. Wise should attempt to speak there he would be seized and thrown into the river. They had made up their minds that no Republican meetings should be held in that locality.

To this complexion has local opinion brought the Old Dominion. The right of free speech has been repeatedly denied within her borders during the present campaign. Meetings have been broken up and speakers grossly insulted.

It is high time for the solid men of Virginia to step to the front and put a check on the enthusiasm of Fitz Lee's most ardent supporters. Capital and enterprise will turn a state in which the right of free speech is denied.

A Vail from Waco. Waco is a flourishing city or town in the great state of Texas, and the Examiner the name of a lively Democratic newspaper printed there. The Examiner has been examining the returns from Ohio and the result is generally favorable.

Washington is making rapid progress in all the arts, but struggling ahead in the development and culture of musical talent and taste with a rapidity that is little less than marvelous.

It is wrong to "revive memories of the war," what excuse can be offered for the parading of Lee's army saddle and the organization of cavalry brigades as adjuncts of the Democratic campaign in old Virginia?

Dr. Gill, of New York, had not been endowed with a sympathetic soul he would not have pardoned one hundred and three convicts in nine months. He obeys the injunction, "remember those in bonds as bound with them."

Democratic leaders who are interested in the future of their party as a national organization will do well to reflect that a Democratic victory in Virginia won by violence, fraud, or any other unfair means will tend to make the North solidly Republican.

Senator Evans falls in with the "re-Admitte" procession. He is so fossiliferous as to insist that honest elections are indispensable to legitimate and wholesome government, and the continued prosperity of the republic. Senator George should bestir himself to combat this ancient heresy.

This is the season when many of the secret societies hold their annual national convocations. The telegraph wires get fearfully strained and demoralized in the attempt to transmit those titles of protection length and width of sound with which the officers of these associations are loaded down.

It will not require many years of southern solidity, maintained in the expression of vote, to create Republican solidity in the north. The only way to avert the danger of such sectionalism is to give equal rights to all citizens in all the states. This is the demand of the Republican party. It asks no more, and will be content with it less.

It is a game of bluff that the Democrats are playing in Virginia. Their leaders know that their chances of success have been growing small by degrees and, beautifully less every day since the campaign opened. The Republicans have had the advantage in all parts of the state which squarely reject the bombastic claims of the bourgeois.

In reply to the awful charge that the New York Republican candidate for governor is not magnetic, the Albany Evening Journal says: "Mr. Davenport is not one of the effusive, boisterous kind, who rush through the streets grinning from ear to ear and pump-handling every one he meets." We have never heard it intimated that Mr. Cleveland was a parsimonious gusher, very liberally endowed with magnetism, but has a record of several rather successful races for office.

Efforts will be made during the coming session of Congress to have a state declared to a number of the nation's illustrious dead. It is hoped that some of the mistakes of the past will not be repeated in this connection. It were better to have no statues or other monuments erected than to ignore a long list of glorious heroes, as was done in the Dupont statue was erected. This is not said in disparagement of Dupont. We do not object to any honor that has been or may be done to his memory. But the earlier heroes of the navy were entitled to be appropriately remembered before his bronze image was set up in the capital.

GEN. CARRINGTON, formerly United States attorney for the District of Columbia, is lecturing to large and delighted audiences in the cities and towns of Maryland. His impetuousness of many distinguished orators of the last and present generations are artistic bits of character acting which would make the fortune of a comedian. Gen. Carrington was "with Grant" not "in Illinois six years before the war," but in Mexico during our war with that country. It has ever been a rule, and seems it time, enough, and is able to draw on a well-stored memory for an affluence of material, which he serves up in most entertaining and instructive discourses.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND makes a mistake if he thinks decency and dignity in his great office will satisfy or strengthen his party. The ideal Democratic President is a coarse dispenser of public plunder as an ever-greedy hunter to local campaigns. It would be much easier to "make a silk purse out of a sow's ear" than to educate the average Democrat up to that reform theory which the Democratic party falsely professes last year in order to get the few favored local Republican votes which save it from defeat. It is cheerfully conceded that there are Democrats who appreciate the proprieties belonging to the executive office, but they are a small minority of that party. It is as cheerfully conceded that there are honest civil reformers. Demand the seal of the general land office to be hereinafter.

Given under my hand at the city of Washington, the thirtieth day of December, of the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six and of the independence of the United States the sixty-first.

It has been found for granted, even in official circles, that the Cherokees hold their lands by a fee-simple title, which the owner defines as an estate belonging to the owner without condition attached to the title.

Such is not the case will be readily seen by reading the celebrated Van Rensselaer grant. It appears to have been carefully drawn, in accordance with well defined and clearly understood provisions of laws of the United States, and with all the rights and regard to the equities of the case. The government realized in 1838, as well as at the present time, that the tribal system would sooner or later be abolished and the Indians made citizens of the United States.

Hence it was wisely provided that the land owned by the Cherokees should ultimately be returned to and made a part of the public domain. The practice of treating the Indian wards of the government as independent nations capable of making treaties has already been discontinued. Hon. E. S. Parker, commissioner of the general land office, and with all the true Republicans put forth every energy and to attend to every detail in the pending controversy.

The Democratic candidate for governor of Massachusetts, boasts that he never concealed his contempt for "the President of the United States." In view of this the veritable and impudently admitted of the drooping eyelid will probably put on his No. 9 stumps and prepare to do some more free booting.

The Democratic masses have no use for any Mugwumpian idea of civil service reform, and they will never listen to the siren voice of any man who is seen to be seeking to allure the administration with his blandishments. It is nothing strange to the Democrats are protesting against such a policy.

Andy Johnson an Optum Fater. (New York Sun.) Use of the controller's facts in the history of Andrew Johnson is that he was an optum fater. To the extent his most extraordinary eccentricities should doubtless be attributed; and among them the scheme he proposed to force the country to buy his cotton. His career had several peculiar outbreaks that were inconsistent with a claim of perfect sanity. At the same time they were presented with a general air of clinical shrewdness; and this is one of the characteristics of an optum fater.

A Test of Party Unity. (Union Herald) (Box.) One of the tests which this election is to decide is whether the Democratic party, without those who seek to perpetuate personal vendettas or to profiting individual trugs, is strong enough to carry the state of New York. The question can never be clearly understood provisions of laws of the United States, and with all the rights and regard to the equities of the case.
