This is an unfavorable season for heretics. The latest trial reported is that of Rev. H. A. Westfall, a Universalist preacher, in Erie.

The points of his departure from the Universalist fold, are, well, you don't care to know. They were something about Universalist theology.

Two thirds of the cattle ranches in Wyoming and Montana Territories belong to Englishmen. It costs a about three dollars to rear a head of cattle to its third year, when it is worth forty dollars.

The greater the herd so much less the expense of the owner in raising each head of cattle, for the pastures are mostly on Government lands.

The North American says, the Democratic argument made use of at this time to influence the colored vote is that the Republicans refused to nominate a negro candidate for Vice President or to appoint a colored man to a Cabinet office, from which it would follow that the Democrats ought to nominate a negro candidate for Vice President in order to be consistent.

The editor of the Circleville, Ohio, Herald, published an article concerning the habits of a fast woman. The woman went to the post office and there waited till the editor came. When he put in an appearance she drew a cow hide from the folds of her dress and began to whip him. The knight of the quill was gallant enough not to strike a woman, but ran, laughing away.

The New York Independent remarks: A church quarrel that is so violent as to lead to the tarring and feathering of the organ of the church must be a pretty sharp dispute among the members; and yet this is just what has recently happened in a New Jersey village. Such a mode of expressing angry feeling certainly has the merit of novelty. The organ undoubtedly went through the ordeal with all becoming patience.

A French journalist says: A small forehead and a heavy jaw are found after a study of the skulls of assassins to be general characteristics of the criminal type. The test is not only by direct measurement of the frontal cerebral curve, which gives 101 millimetres for assassins as against 111 for Parisians as a rule, but also by summing up the several angular angles, which give a like result. The degree of heaviness of the jaw in assassins and Parisians is represented by 15 to 13.

The Fenians have taken to blowing up buildings, and underground railroads in England. On the last day of October they exploded some sort of an infernal machine in an underground railroad, in London, where by 28 persons were injured. Fenians in America declare that it is the purpose of the Fenian Brotherhood to blow London to pieces if the British do not change the policy of government in Ireland. Wouldn't it be better for the Irish to emigrate than to precipitate such a state of affairs? If they begin the business of blowing up British cities, thousands of innocent people will of necessity suffer, and their suffering will cause the whole civilized world to declare against them. Instead of awakening the sympathy of the world in their favor it will be turned against them. But the Irish and British for it.

The North American expresses its opinion of the situation of the colored people, in a statement relative to their course of action in Iowa, as follows: The colored people of Iowa are so much alarmed at the abrogation of the Civil Rights bill, or rather of its first two sections, that they are petitioning the State Legislature to come to the rescue by turning the clauses which the Supreme Court has avoided into a local statute. If the Iowa legislators see fit to act upon that suggestion, no one outside of the State will have any reason to complain, but at the same time it may be doubted whether the negroes are well advised in making the demand. It is not good policy for them to draw attention to their inferiority in this or any other way. They had much better show an independent spirit, and instead of asking for special protection on account of their color, be content to stand upon their rights as men and citizens. They are foolish to admit that they need anything more than the legal equality which they have already secured.

A Pistol at a Wedding.

A MINISTER FORCED TO OFFICIATE.

One of the Members of the Notorious Welsh Mountain Gang Marrying a Deaf and Dumb Girl—An Exciting Chase After the Outlaw.

From the Philadelphia Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., October 28.

"Professor Jake" Bonnell, the young desperado and highwayman who became the commander of the notorious Welsh Mountain gang of land pirates after Ike Buzzard was deposed and locked in Lancaster Jail a few months ago, has just placed the capstone on his criminal record in Berks, Lancaster and Lebanon counties by forcing a minister, at the point of a pistol, to marry him to Miss Lydia McComas Kline, the young, rich, pretty and deaf and dumb niece of Job V. Flettermann, of Norwegian township.

The enforced marriage ceremony was performed on Thursday last in the house of an ignorant German farm hand named Andrew Bock, who lives on the road between Schaeferstown, in Lebanon, and Coalingo, in Lancaster counties. On Friday the girl disappeared from her uncle's house, and yesterday Bonnell and a tramp called "Horse" Spiegle were brought to bay by Constable Schwartz, Mr. Flettermann and two other men in Kline's woods, near Womelsdorf. Both sides engaged in pistol practice at long range and when the constable's posse emptied their revolvers and Bonnell did not surrender, they retreated, leaving the representative of the Welsh Mountain gang in possession of the bloodless field.

SEPARATING A PAIR OF LOVERS. Bonnell is the son of a Berks county farmer and is not more than thirty years old. Three years ago he taught school in Norwegian township, and during the winter bounded with Mr. Flettermann, whose daughter Adelle he became infatuated with and wanted to marry. Flettermann made some inquiries about Bonnell, and learning that he was dissipated and had been arrested in Reading for garroting and robbing a drunken man he ordered him out of the house. He also endeavored to have him removed from his position as teacher of the district school, but failed. Bonnell then went to board at a neighboring house and kept up an secret correspondence with Miss Flettermann, Miss Kline, who at that time sixteen years of age, carrying the letters between the separated lovers. Miss Kline is an orphan and has for eleven years lived with her uncle, who holds in trust for her $35,000, which is her share of her father's estate. She is a blonde and very pretty, and although deaf and dumb, has had several offers of marriage. When Bonnell learned that she was an heiress he began making love to her, and although he is neither handsome nor intelligent she fell in love with him and, in order to keep her rival cousin out of the field, exposed her letters to Mr. Flettermann. He at once sent his daughter to Philadelphia, where she still lives. Before the school term ended Bonnell was accused of stealing a gold watch from Henry W. Zulich. Constable Hoffman then attempted to arrest "The Professor," who, in the school room, in the presence of his revolver, drew his pistol, shot the constable through the shoulder, dashed out of the house, jumped into the Constable's sulky and drove off. He went West and did not appear in this part of Pennsylvania until last spring, after Zulich was dead. Shortly after he was arrested in Bethlehem for robbery. The charge was not proved, and in Easton a few days later "The Professor" stabbed a tramp called "Dublin Dan," with whom he quarreled over the division of the proceeds of the robbery. He spent the summer traveling about Lebanon, Berks and Lancaster counties and although the police authorities have suspected him of scores of offenses they were unable to fasten any of the crimes upon him. He made his headquarters while in the Welsh Mountains with the Freglies, Strousses and other families connected with the Buzzards.

THE MARRIAGE. Last Thursday morning Miss Kline left her uncle's house, saying she intended to pay a visit to a girl friend who lived half a mile off. That afternoon as the Rev. Andrew J. Hoechler was driving from Schaeferstown to Coalingo, he overtook Bonnell, whom he did not know. At his invitation Bonnell got into the carriage. They had not gone one hundred yards together before Bonnell grabbed the lines, pulled the horse to a standstill and excitedly asked: "Are you a preacher?" The astounded minister replied, "Yes."

"Then you are the man I'm looking for. I was just making for Coalingo when you met with me."

"With that he deliberately turned the horse around towards Schaeferstown. Mr. Hoechler objected, on the ground that he had business to attend to and could not go back.

"You must go," said Bonnell. "This is business, and if you make any fuss there will be trouble." Then he told the minister that two miles back there was a dying man who wanted to make a confession that would release an innocent man from the penitentiary. They drove two miles, got out and walked half a mile across the fields to the cabin of Bock. Bonnell went in without and when Mr. Hoechler entered "The Professor" closed and bolted the door. Bock, who was intoxicated, went into a back room and soon returned with Miss Kline, who was crying.

"Now," said Bonnell, taking the weeping girl by the hand and addressing the minister, "you must stop there, and when he reached Freemansburg he jumped off, though the cars were going forty miles an hour. He turned a somersault and his neck was broken. A wife and child survive him.

Two Parsian Esaus were taking supper at a farm house near Orleans. All at once one of them made a wry face, called the housewife and showed her a very fine blonde hair in the hare-ragout. The good woman smiled and said: "Yes, there is one after all: excuse me, gentlemen. I thought

I had taken them all out!"—Paris Paper.

A dispatch from Smyrna, dated Sunday, October 28th 1883, says, that another shock of earthquake was experienced there to day damaging the wall surrounding the town as well as the aqueduct and a mosque.

At Yonkers sixty-one persons were seriously and sixty-one slightly injured, seventy-nine are in the hospitals.

Silas Shingler, a farmer, living on Stone mountain, eight miles east of Huntingdon, while hunting on Saturday morning a week, treed a large bear which he shot, but only slightly wounded. The bear thereupon quickly descended from its lofty perch and attacked Mr. Shingler, who after a desperate struggle, succeeded in killing the animal, when dressed, was found to weigh over 200 pounds.

One Savteukin, a Russian, who lives in a Sarabian province, is declared to be 13 years of age and to enjoy perfect health and strength. His hair, which was formerly white, has taken on a greenish hue. His eldest son is more infirm than he, and his age is only 87. The village in which the old man lives was founded by him and a friend of his, and its 120 houses are all inhabited by their descendants. There are 50 families in the tribe of Savteukins, and they live in peace and quiet without going to law.

James Winter, the noted sheep farmer, arrived by the Celtic at New York on Tuesday night, a well known Australian in stock-raising, five thousand, but his interests in the business are small compared with those of Samuel Machey, of New South Wales. Mr. Winter, speaking of Mr. Machey, says: "He sheared one million five hundred thousand sheep last year and this year he expects to have two million five hundred thousand. His lands run seven hundred miles in one direction and comprises five million acres and have been nearly all reclaimed from the desert."

The New York World gives the following particulars of the shooting of John M. Lynch, a well known Utica lawyer, by E. M. Rowell, of Batavia, N. Y., on Tuesday night, October 30th. Lynch was infatuated with Rowell's young and beautiful wife, and although frequently warned that the boldness of his visits would surely expose him to danger, he assumed the risks. They were formerly neighbors in Utica.

When Rowell left home early on Monday morning, telling his wife that he was going on a business trip, he proceeded directly to the National Hotel, opposite the Central Depot, where he remained in seclusion until a few minutes before 6 o'clock on Tuesday evening, at which time the train was due from Utica upon which Lynch arrived. Mrs. Rowell was at the depot to meet Lynch. Rowell hastened to his home, which was vacant, his children having been sent by the wife to visit a friend. Rowell secreted himself and waited for Mrs. Lynch and Lynch to enter the house. They ate supper and then retired to her room.

Shortly afterward Rowell emerged from his hiding place, and, looking into the sleeping-room, was amazed at what he saw, and fired two shots in rapid succession. One of the bullets passed between the faces of Mrs. Rowell and Lynch, and lodged in the wall. It was so well aimed that their faces were discolored by powder, the ball grazing Mrs. Rowell's scalp. The second bullet was buried in the pillow.

Lynch fled from the room and rushed down stairs. As he descended Rowell fired two more shots, one of which took effect in Lynch's back, passing through his right lung and penetrating the aorta near the base of the heart, lodging in the muscles of his chest. It caused instant death.

When the officers approached Rowell he submitted quietly to arrest. After he had put on his overcoat and he turned to his wife and said: "Well, Jennie, I have got to go to jail. Good-by! Won't you kiss me before I go?"

His voice was tender and compassionate, and his reply was breathed between sobs and sighs.

"Oh! how can I! Oh! how can I, after doing such an act!" she piteously asked.

His wife did not kiss him, and she accompanied the officers to the Justice's office and thence to the jail, having been committed for murder in the first degree.

Two letters from Mrs. Rowell were found in Lynch's pockets. The first, written a week ago to her husband, "Dearest John," and ended as follows: "I want to see you so very much—Have lots to tell you. Will drop you a line when R. goes, and perhaps you can arrange to come here. I trust we shall see each other soon. With a world of love, I remain your sincere friend. JENNIE."

The second note was written on Monday afternoon, and is as follows: "I am alone. R. went away this morning. He will be absent two weeks or longer. I agreeable to you I should be glad to see you some evening this week, say Thursday or Friday. Can you not get here at 6 and come up to tea soon afterward? Will try and have the chicks in dream-land by 7. Let me hear from you soon. Will look for a letter on Wednesday. Affectionately yours, JENNIE L."

Lynch was a large man, handsomely dressed, and wore considerable jewelry, including a fine gold watch and chain and diamond collar button.

Rowell is a small man, and is some what given to melancholy. Mrs. Rowell is a blonde.

While the Coroner was making an examination of Lynch's body Mrs. Rowell remained up-stairs, sobbing and crying and giving vent to her expressions of grief. "Oh, my God!" she cried, "why did he do it? What a terrible disgrace!" There the officers remained until Mrs. Rowell's grief seemed to be more on account of her paramour than her outraged husband. "Why didn't he pound him and kick him," she is represented to have said, "as other husbands would, instead of killing him!" Later in the evening Mrs. Rowell was taken to the house of a friend, where her children were, suffering greatly from nervous prostration.

IT LEADS ALL.

No other blood-purifying medicine is made, has been known, which so completely meets the wants of physicians and the general public.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

It leads the list as a truly scientific preparation for all blood diseases. If there is a lurking taint of scrofula about you, SCROFULA AYER'S SARSAPARILLA will cure you.

For constitutional or scrofulous Catarrh, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is the best remedy. It has cured numerous cases. It will stop the suppurating discharges, and remove the sickening odor of the breath, which are indications of scrofulous origin.

Hutto, Tex., Sept. 26, 1882.

ULCERUS. "At the age of two years one of my children was terribly afflicted with this disease, which so completely met the wants of physicians and the general public."

SORE EYES. "I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla in several cases of sore eyes, and it has cured them all."
