THE NEW TRIBUNE OF TODAY LIKE THE OLD TRIBUNE OF THE PAST, IS TO BE CONSIDERED THE BEST OF ITS KIND. OF IDEAS, THE EXPANSION OF PERSONALITY, AND THE PRO- SEDITION OF THE

THE maximum and unmediated verdict of the hundreds of thousands of readers of the TRIBUNE is, that the paper was never so good as at the present time. During the past year it has enlarged its field and improved its facilities in every direction, and enters upon the closing months of 1874 with most encouraging prospects. THE TRIBUNE, however, believes in deeds rather than in words—in results rather than in promises. It points to its records, and its columns for the past twelve months as the best evidence of what it has done, and the most satisfactory pledge of what it will do. All the distinctive features of the paper will be preserved and strengthened; the "Extras" whose sale has reached hundreds of thousands, will be continued, and the present admitted pre-eminence of the paper not only maintained, but still further advanced. Its new building, the largest newspaper office in the world, is now rapidly approaching completion.

Terms of the Tribune—Daily (by mail) one year, $10 00; Semi-Weekly (by mail) one year, $5 00; Five copies, one year, $1 25; Weekly, one year, $2 00; First copies, one year, $7 50. Each person presenting a club of ten or more subscribers to the Weekly, or five or more to the Semi-Weekly, is entitled to one extra copy.

Papers addressed separately to each member of a club will be charged ten cents additional to the above rates.

Special copies of either edition of THE TRIBUNE, and Circulars giving full details of the extra sheet, sent free to any address in the United States.

The Louisiana Outrage in England.

All the leading London journals have editorially on the subject of the late outrage perpetrated in Louisiana by Gen. Grant. The Times says:

"If this was a mere squabble between rival factions, or even between rival legislatures, it would hardly deserve notice from those who are not especially interested in the local politics of the United States. But the use which Gen. Grant has made of the army for manifestly political purposes, and which, we are told, 'is generally condemned throughout the country,' is a very remarkable symptom of danger in the working of the American constitution. Gen. Sheridan, it is true, has telegraphed to the secretary for war that the community of New Orleans is devoid of lawful authority, and that human life is not secure in Louisiana. But for these strong statements there is no sufficient authority in the information that has reached this country as yet, and the people of New Orleans, have we perceive, protested against them. It is true that the language of the constitution is very loose and will allow a daring administration to assume powers as despotic as those with which the Roman consuls were invested when they were charged to see that the commonwealth received no detriment." But this license has never hitherto been allowed to go too far, and if it be seriously maintained that the federal government is bound to interfere on Gov. Kellogg's invitation at New Orleans because five unqualified members have been admitted to the legislature, the United States army may be used to coerce the legislature at Albany and Harrisburg for no other reason than that the great states of New York and Pennsylvania have shown themselves hostile to the party in power at Washington. It cannot be denied that the president acted with deliberation and with a full knowledge that his interference would not be needed to repress insurrection, but to disturb the balance of parties. He had evidently settled beforehand with Gov. Kellogg that the first attempt of the conservatives to dispute the decision of the retiring board should be met by the intervention of the federal troops, for Gen. Sheridan had, long before the assembling of the legislature, been instructed to take the command at New Orleans, and even before that officer arrived upon the scene the useful coercion had been applied by Gen. Emory. Gen. Sheridan seems to have fully entered into the spirit of Gen. Grant's policy, and had advised the president to issue a proclamation declaring the White League "bannitti." In these circumstances, we must take what comfort we can in the great improbability. In which we are comforted by our latest intelligence from Washington—that partial as has been the president's policy hitherto, such mad advice will be accepted."

The Morning Post says on the subject—

"It is not surprising that all over the United States indignation is expressed and that a democratic Senator at Washington has introduced in the senate a resolution demanding of the president by what authority he has thus interfered by military force with the legally elected legislature of a sovereign state. The whole thing reminds one more of Mexico, or one of the petty states of South America, than of the great republic. And not the least sombre feature in the business is the fact that the president planned, or at least consented to, what has been done, several days before it occurred, and that the whole affair was a deliberate and determined exercise of the most arbitrary and unconstitutional power."

The Fall Mall Gazette; after an able review of the events which led to the invasion of the legislature by United States troops, says:

"It, as the returning board alleges, there was such general intimidation by the whites that the vote of whole counties, or parishes, as they are called in Louisiana, was falsified; and if moreover, the election law is so impossible of execution as to be wholly administered that there was no valid election in the state, the proper course would have been to order a fresh election, and to take proper precautions against intimidation and falsification of returns. Instead of that, the president has determined to enforce decisions which the public opinion of the whole union stigmatizes as shamelessly partisan and corrupt and which even those who gave them admit to have been arbitrary and without foundation in law. And in enforcing them he has allowed one of his officers to imitate the worst practices of Spanish-American military adventurers."

A NIGGER ON THE SAFETY-VALVE.

—The old Mississippi river joke had curiously enough become a political fact. The Republican steamer is already quivering from stem to stern; the Breven, with faces of grim determination, are pouring in fresh supplies of turpentine; and "the nigger is sitting on the safety-valve." It is no fault of his, poor fellow; but there he is and there he is likely to stay until the explosion.—(Springfield Republican.)
