The "Excelsior" Bagasse Furnace.
THE attention of the Sugar Planters is respectfully called to the superior advantages combined in this Furnace, both in principle and mechanical arrangement, the air to support combustion is heated in its central hot air chamber, from whence it is distributed to all parts of the Furnace, where entering in small jets it readily consumes the incandescence bagasse.
It thoroughly mixes and consumes all the bagasse where the three exit flues meet in the mixing chamber ere reaching the boilers. There is no grate of any kind nor iron works in its interior.
There is very little slag formed, and the whole Furnace can be cleaned at any hour without stopping. In case of need the whole heat can be turned off from the boilers at any moment.
Its feed apparatus is so constructed that no cold air can get in, neither can any heat or sparks of fire escape at the top, so that there is no danger of fire during its operation.
It works upon different principles to any other Furnace in use. An examination of the patent, drawings, and specifications will at once convince any scientific men that it is founded on the only correct principles.
All intriguements of my patent will be held strictly accountable.
For further information please address the patentee.

Report of the Board of Commissioners of the Grasse Tete Road.

To the President and Members of the Police Jury of the Parish of Iberville.

The undersigned Secretary of the Board of Commissioners for the Grasse Tete and Maringouin Roads, would respectfully submit to your consideration the following Report of the proceedings of said Board of Commissioners, as required by ordinance of your honorably body.

Said Board of Commissioners, after organizing itself as is usually done in such cases, proceeded to negotiate the bonds received from the President of the Police Jury, as follows:

All of said bonds, amounting to the sum of thirty-five thousand dollars, were negotiated and sold to Mr. P. Marianneux & sons, at par, and the sum of thirty thousand four hundred and fifty dollars was appropriated for the purchase of twenty-one negroes--nineteen men and two women--all good, able-bodied working negroes--The nineteen men are kept at work in making the contemplated road above mentioned, and the two women are kept for the purpose of cooking, washing, and attending on the sick--thereby keeping said body of negroes clean and healthy.

The said negroes were at first put to work on the Maringouin road, which will yet need about one month to complete it.

They are now engaged under the supervision of an overseer in making the road and levee from Grasse Tete to the Indian Village, which said work is progressing energetically and satisfactorily to said Board of Commissioners.

Said Commissioners have reserved the balance of said sum of thirty-five thousand--say four thousand five hundred and fifty dollars--and also interest on said $30,450 for 45 days, amounting to $324 50, for the maintenance and management of said negroes. With this sum they have been well supplied with tools and clothing, and had physical attendance when needed; but I am glad to say that as yet they have been very healthy.

The Commissioners are now having fitted up for the residence of said negroes a large and commodious thatch with cisterns, &c., in order to have them conveniently to their work and get rid of building cabins all along the work.

There is at present in the hands of the Treasurer the sum of three thousand five hundred and fifty-three 78-100 dollars, to be used for future wants of said negroes--all of which is respectfully submitted to the Police Jury.

C. W. KEEP,
Secretary of Commissioners.

Moral Value of Courage.

At the storming of Mome Fortune, in the West Indies, Lieut. W. was the first to ascend the breach and plant the British colors on the captured redoubt. His behavior excited general admiration, and he was recommended for immediate promotion. The next morning, however, he waited on his commanding officer, and requested leave to return to Ireland, his native country, and to resign his commission in favor of his younger brother. The Colonel surprised at this extraordinary request, asked him what was his motive for making such a singular proposal. The young man frankly told him, that when the troops were moving forward for the attack, and the enemy's fire had opened upon them he felt a strong inclination to fall out; and he believed that nothing but the rapidity of the advance, and the shouts of the men, prevented him from disgracing himself. In a short time his brain was on fire; he knew not where he was; and he found himself on the summit of the breach with his colors in his hand, but he knew not how. He felt that the profession of arms was not his vocation, and fearing that at some future time he might not have sufficient courage to overcome his fear, he was desirous to leave the service with honor while it was still in his power.

It seems the universal testimony of soldiers that whatever may be their fears previous to an engagement, they are all dissipated as soon as the fight commences. Every man then becomes a hero. The beating of the drums, the shouting of the men, the roaring of the cannon, and especially the signal of blood, drown the reasoning faculties, and induce in some an irrepressible animal bravery, similar to that attributed in scripture to the horse: "The horse rusheth into battle; he goeth on to meet the armed men; he mocketh at fear, and is not affrighted; neither turneth his back from the sword. He saith among the trumpets, 'Ha, ha,' and he smelleth the bat le afar off, the thunder of the captain and the shouting."

A highland soldier, who served in the Peninsula war, in referring to his first battle, says: "The thought of death never crossed my mind. After the firing commenced, a still sensation stole over my whole frame, a firm, determined torpor, bordering on insensibility. The annals of our late wars in the Crimea and India afford numerous illustrations of the bravery alluded to above. An officer writing to his friends at home, after one of the sanguinary battles in the Crimea, says, 'I never in my life experienced such a sublime sensation as the moment of the charge. Some fellows talk of it as demonic. I cannot depict my feelings when I returned. All my uniform, my hands, my very face were bespattered with blood. It was that of the enemy! Grand idea! But my feelings--they were full of that exaltation which it is impossible to describe.'

To YOUNG MEN--Don't rely upon friends. Don't rely upon the good name of your ancestors. Thousands have spent the prime of life in vain hope of aid from those whom they call friends, and thousands have starved because they had a rich father. Rely only upon the good name which is made by your own exertions, and know that the best friend you can have is an unconquerable determination united with decision of character.

"He who rises late may trot all day, but never overtake his business."

Women should be acquainted that no beauty has any charms but the inward one of the mind; and that a gracefulness in their manner is much more engaging than that of their person; that modesty and meekness are the true and lasting ornaments; for she that hath these is qualified as she ought to be for the management of a family, for the education of children, for the affection of her husband, and submitting to a prudent way of living. These only are the charms that render wives amiable, and give them the best title to men's respect.

The true-hearted Mason both loves and fears God; he is, moreover, kindly affectioned towards his fellow men.

Attitude of Persons Killed by Lightning.

"That which particularly characterizes the effects of lightning," writes Boudin, "is its suddenness. At one time, the individual is killed on the spot, remaining in a sitting posture, or even on horseback. At another time he is thrown a long distance." The first mention made of this kind of death is in the history of Alexander. "During a dreadful tempest," says Quintus Curtius, "he destroyed a thousand men, some were found supported against trees, as if still alive and talking with each other, and just in the attitude in which death had surprised them." According to Carder, as quoted by Riviere, eight reapers taking their food under an oak were struck by lightning, and died, preserving their attitude--one of a man eating, another drinking. In Lorraine, a woman and one of her children were killed, and remained in a sitting posture. At Dover, a man killed with four horses, was found sitting under a bush. A man of law at Troyes was killed by lightning when on horseback; the animal, still continuing his journey, brought home his dead master, retaining the posture of a man on horseback. On the 11th of July, 1816, at Chateau-neuf, three fire-balls fell on the church. Nine persons were killed and eighty-two wounded. All the dogs found in the church were killed, and retained the attitude which they previously had. On January 22, 1849, a goat was killed near Clermont, and found sitting upon his hind-quarters with a branch of green leaves in his mouth. Now, this phenomenon is sometimes equally observed in persons killed by fire-arms. In the Morning Herald of November 8, 1854, the following details are given of a visit to the field of Inkermann, immediately after the combat: "Many faces still seemed to smile; others had a threatening look; some bodies had a funeral pose, as though laid out by friendly hands; others still knelt upon the ground convulsively grasping their weapon, and biting their cartridge. Many had their arms raised as if endeavoring to ward off a blow, or as if desiring to offer a last prayer. All their faces were pale, and the fierce blowing and keen wind seemed to animate their dead bodies; one would have said that these long lines of the dead were about to rise to recommence the struggle."--M. Boudin writes the same thing of the appearance of many of the Russians after the battle of the Alma: "Some seemed still writhing in the agonies of despair and death, but the most wore a look of calm and pious resignation. Some appeared to have words floating on their lips, and a smile as in a sort of high beatitude. One was particularly observed, his knees bent, his hands raised and joined, his head thrown back, murmuring his supreme prayer." At Magenta, again, many dead bodies, as we are informed by Surgeon-Major Armand, of the army of Italy, maintained the attitude they had when struck, passing instantaneously from life to death, without agony or convulsion. A Zouave, struck point blank in the chest, still held his bayonet in the position of the charge, with the menacing aspect of a dead lion. His Majesty the Emperor is said to have remarked a similar case at Palestro. Near to the Zouave was an Austrian, dead from hemorrhage. His face and eyes were turned to Heaven, his hands joined, and fingers interlaced, evidently in the attitude of prayer.

A MYSTERIOUS TRUNK--An old trunk found yesterday in the third story of the store of Mr. E. F. Favrot, Union street, upon being opened was ascertained to contain the skeleton of a man, two suits of wearing apparel, a number of books, a fine gold pen, a dirk knife, and several letters. In the clothes were found cards bearing the name of J. N. Robertson, of Alabama, and a diploma awarded to Mr. Robertson by the University of Nashville, in 1856. Those desiring to know more of this mysterious trunk, can be gratified by calling on F. M. Woodall, at the store of Mr. Everett.--Nashville Gazette.

THE VENOM OF "THEY SAY."--"They" will say anything and everything--"They" have said everything mean and despicable. "They" say things that break up families, crush hearts, blight hopes and smother worthy aspirations. Whenever a man circulates slander, and gives "They" as his authority, turn your back upon him. He means no good.

Madame de Girardin again: "Of a hundred men you may find one witty; of a hundred women you may find one stupid. See the proportion.

When you receive a note from your lady love, and kiss it, (as, of course, you are expected to do,) why is it like a nightmare? Because it is in the ink-you-buss.

Prentice thinks if a young lady has a thousand acres of valuable land, the young men are apt to conclude that there are sufficient grounds for attachment.
