

THE AUCTION SALE OF public should not forget the gosses. The to-day, at Barker & Maronneaux's sale Mr. F. L. PARKER, of some of the able, by and buggy horses ever brought to this city. We saw a beautiful and spirited pair of horses passing up the street a few days driven by Mr. PARKER, when they met Union Fire Co. on parade, coming down, and their gay uniform and music of brass instruments with two drums. But with pointed ears, curved necks and glistening eyes, the noble animals passed the military looking over legs under easy reins, without flinching and with the docility pertaining to the most perfectly trained animals. Such horses are worth having, sure!

POSITION OF SENATOR BENJAMIN.—A private dispatch from Washington, dated Dec. 12th, says the Advocate, states that J. P. Benjamin advocates secession by separate State action, and has written a letter to the Legislature to that effect. Since writing the above, the following dispatch, direct from Senator Benjamin himself, has been handed us for publication by Lieutenant Governor Hyams:

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12, 1860.—The report that I made a Union speech is false. I sent a letter to the Legislature on the eighth inst., recommending immediate secession by separate State action. J. P. BENJAMIN.

MISCELLANEOUS SUMMARY.

In the Congressional Senate on the 5th, Mr. Iverson, of Ga., said if Gov. Houston would not call the Texas Legislature together, he hoped "some Brutus would arise to lead the country of such a heavy headed traitor." He further said, "there would be no war, for far seeing statesmen like Seward will see the futility of it."

The House of Rep's of South Carolina has passed a bill authorizing the Governor to call for 10,000 volunteers.

It is rumored that Virginia and Kentucky are about sending commissioners to South Carolina to urge delay of action.

Sec'y Floyd, of the War Department, has written a letter defending Secession.

Mr. Hale's speech is universally condemned in New York.

Business is prostrate in New York and money tighter. Hundreds of operatives, clerks and laborers are daily discharged.

The result of our Presidential election was commented on with much satisfaction in England—of course!

Senator Clay, of Alabama, has tendered his resignation, to take effect on the 4th of March next. We opine that several other Senators will resign about that time.

SECOND EDITION OF AN AWKWARD TEST AMONG MISTAKE.—The senior Mr. Guy, of the National Hotel at Washington, bears quite a likeness to General Cass—a likeness which led to two amusing mistakes one morning some time ago:

A stranger, who supposed he knew mine host very well, put up at the National while Gen. Cass was a Senator. Since this house has become the crack hotel at the capital it is quite full, and at this time the new comer necessarily, for the first night, was sent to the upper floor to sleep. Coming down stairs the next morning, a little cross, he met Gen. Cass—who then had a fine suite of rooms there—in the hall stepped up to him, and in language more forcible and rapid than elegant, said:

"I'll be d—d if I'll stand it! You've put me at the top of the house. I must have a room somewhere lower down."

Gen. Cass, interposing, and nervously—"Sir, you are mistaken in the person you are addressing. I, sir, am Gen. Cass, of Michigan."

Stranger, confusedly—"Beg your pardon, Gen. Cass, thought it my old friend Guy. Beg a thousand pardons, sir. All a mistake, all a mistake, all a mistake, I assure you, sir."

The General passed out of the building, but soon returned. As luck would have it, the stranger met him full in the face again, but in another position. This time he was sure he had mine host, for the Senator from Michigan, he knew, had just gone out. So the stranger stopped boldly up, slapped the General heartily and familiarly on the shoulder, and exclaimed:

"By heavens, Guy, I've got a rich sell to relate. I met that damned old Cass upstairs just now, thought it was you, and began cursing him about my room."

Gen. Cass (with emphasis)—"Well, young man, you've met that damned old Cass again?"

Stranger slooped, and has not been heard of since.

TEXAS. Guarantees.—The Marshall Republican, which has not been a very moderate paper, on the Southern question, gives the following as sufficient guarantees of Southern rights in the Union, and believes if they were granted by the North, accord might be restored:

1. To repeal their unconstitutional enactments nullifying the fugitive slave law, and to provide for its future enforcement.

2. That no more Abolition petitions be presented, or Abolition speeches made in Congress, because, without taking folly, and worse than folly, to shut the question being settled.

3. To renounce all idea of abolishing slavery anywhere.

4. To withdraw the Territories, and to withdraw all slave property, in country, wherever other species of property Federal Government jurisdiction of the 5. The advent extends.

6. To equalize with free slave States.

7. To secure a paperless Texas but what is in favor of prom. Texas but what found. Every mail distance, can be of popular meetings, proceedings raising of the Lone Star, and the notes of preparation for a, and the allegiance of the State.

Hon. Amos R. Johnston. This gentleman, a citizen of Raymond, Miss., and one of the purest, we have no doubt, of whom Mississippi can boast, delivered a speech at Raymond on the 14th ult, from which we make the following extracts:

The Governor of this State has ordered an assemblage of our Legislature, and very soon that body will be in session. We all know that the Legislature will order a Convention of the State, to act upon the momentous questions at issue. We need not pause to inquire whether the power to order a convention, on the part of the Legislature, really exists. The order will, assuredly, be made.

My friends and neighbors here assembled will bear testimony to the fact that, in all past struggles, my humble voice, has been constantly raised in advocacy of the Union of these States. I have by no means changed opinions so carefully matured and so long cherished. And yet, in view of the startling developments of the present; in view of the past, and scanning the future as far as the finite powers of the human mind will enable us to do so, I am free to say, that there must be some settlement, in some mode, of the distracting questions which agitate the public mind, and sway the masses of the Republic. As our Union man, (and I speak only for myself) I acquiesce in the call of a state convention, to give expression, in an authoritative form, to the sovereign voice of the state of Mississippi. Let our people calmly and deliberately resort to the ballot-box, and select delegates who will faithfully reflect their sentiments. Then, let the Mississippi Convention, acting in concert with her sister States of the south, provide for the speedy assemblage of a general convention of all the slaveholding States, to meet at some convenient point, and consider the great interests involved in the sectional struggle that is progressing. Thus we may have a faithful reflection of the sentiments of the people of our entire section. Thus will be brought together the talents, the intelligence and the spirit of the southern masses. Thus will be embodied, in a tangible, systematic and authoritative form, the sovereign voice of the whole south, influenced by such conservative elements as exist in the section. Let this general convention be clothed with full power to act finally and effectually. They should discuss the whole question thoroughly, and deliberately. We should demand through this convention the full measure of our rights under the constitution—"no more, nor less." It may be that the people of the North, seeing that the South is united, and that our demands are just, will afford us the reasonable guarantees which we are clearly entitled to, and thus save us and ourselves from the horrors of Revolution and bloodshed. I hope this may be the happy result of united southern action; and yet I caudally confess that, in view of the past, that hope is not cherished with any great confidence. At all events, fellow-citizens, if the worst of our fears be realized, we shall gain many advantages by pursuing the course I have suggested. Rent asunder now by conflicting southern views and sentiments, we shall become as one man, thro' the instrumentality of a general Southern Convention. Co-operation is the only basis upon which the South can unite. By making a last final offer of nationality and peace, to the people of the North, on the basis of Southern equality, we justify ourselves before all Christendom and secure our own self-approval for any consequences which may follow in the future. Indeed, the idea that the slaveholding States, in view of the election of Mr. Lincoln, should assemble and take "counsel together," is but adopting the course indicated by the Legislature of Mississippi, [and also of Louisiana,] at its last session, as you will perceive by an examination of the resolutions then adopted.

And when this general convention of the slaveholding states shall act in reference to the mighty interests confided to their management, the people of the whole South, without reference to former political differences, should endorse their proceedings without a dissenting voice! It may be that we shall thus secure our own rights as a section, and at the same time not only preserve the Union, but even strengthen the ties which unite us as a mighty Republic.—This should be the end and aim of every Patriot in the land. But, if we fail in this last great effort of co-operation, should the slaveholding States resolve through their convention, to unfurl the standard of revolution, as the only means of preserving the honor and equality of the south; should we have presented to us the question of Liberty or degradation; then I would say, let us boldly and bravely seek out of the Union the rights which have been denied to us in the Union by a fanatical and relentless majority. Born and reared in the south, and intending that, at all events, my remains shall repose in the generous land which gave me birth, whatever destiny awaits the noble people of the south, shall be my destiny.—The idea of forsaking my native land in her hour of trial and adversity, or joining the ranks of those who assail her rights, has never, for a moment, been entertained by me. No, fellow-citizens, your destiny shall be my destiny.

New York, December 3.—The New York Times Washington correspondent says Judge Elmore, and not Mr. Yancy, was appointed by the Governor of Alabama to confer with South Carolina Judge Elmore as an ultra secessionist—Mr. Yancy.

It is understood that Mr. Seward will address the Senate at an early day and offer a series of resolutions declaratory of State rights, in which he will propose embodying the Missouri Compromise line in the Constitution.

The Republicans are much divided in attitude as to Mr. Lincoln's intention. The Republicans I have talked with say they will not yield the right to take slavery into the free territories.

Whether will they yield the reopening of the slave trade, for the right of Mr. Lincoln to the unanimous support of the country, and to make his cabinet as he sees fit without explanation or reservation. A resolution will be thrust in at the earliest moment declaring the right of a State to secede at will.

The privilege sets forth the grievances put upon the South by the North, and the necessity for an independent government. It is urged by some, however, that the movement is undignified, and it may be abandoned. The resolution would be overwhelmingly rejected, and the South Carolina member would then withdraw.

SOUTH CAROLINA APPLIES FOR ARMS.—South Carolina, through her Congressman, Mr. Mills, has applied to Secretary Floyd for the purchase of a quantity of rifles, muskets, &c. Mr. Floyd replied that he had no power to sell United States arms except those that had been condemned on inspection.

CONGR. The sudden changes of our climate are sources of the most baneful and asthmatic affections. Experience having proved that simple remedies often speedily and certainly when taken in the early stages of the disease, a recourse should at once be had to "Brown's Bronchial Trochiscs," or Lozenges, for the Cough, or Irritation of the Throat be ever so slight, as by this precaution a more serious attack may be effectually warded off. FRENCH SPEAKERS and SINGERS will find them effectual for clearing and strengthening the voice. See advertisement.
