

SECOND TRIAL OF HENWOOD TUESDAY

Famous Denver Murder Case Will Be Given Another Airing.

(National News Association)
DENVER, Mar. 4.—The second trial of the most sensational murder case in the history of Denver, will begin Tuesday morning, when Frank Henwood, the New York traveling salesman, already under sentence of life imprisonment for killing George E. Copeland, will be brought to court to answer an indictment charging him with the first degree murder of Sylvester Von Phul, the well-known St. Louis clubman and ballplayer.

Henwood shot and killed Von Phul after the latter had knocked him down during a quarrel which occurred in the grill-room of the Brown Palace hotel, on the morning of May 25, 1910. A stray bullet from Henwood's revolver struck Copeland, an innocent bystander, who died as a result of the wound.

The quarrel between Henwood and Von Phul was the result of a dispute over Mrs. Isabelle Patterson Springer, who was at that time the wife of John W. Springer, the millionaire head of the Continental Trust company of Chicago. The scandalous revelations brought out at the beginning of Henwood's trial for the Copeland killing caused Springer to begin divorce proceedings, which ended in his being granted a decree without any opposition.

During the Copeland murder trial, Mrs. Springer was called as a witness for Henwood, but her testimony proved of far greater value to the prosecution, although it is believed her story was somewhat influenced by her husband's pending divorce suit. Whether she will testify at the coming trial is a matter that is causing considerable speculation on the part of both the prosecution and the defense. In case she does her testimony is expected to be more sensational and the attorneys for the prisoner believe it will be more favorable to their client.

Ever since his conviction at the first trial Henwood has repeatedly declared that if Mrs. Springer had told the whole story of her relations with himself and Von Phul, when she was on the witness stand, the jury would have set him free. This statement of Henwood's has caused his attorneys to carry on a diligent search for the woman in the case, in the hope of inducing her to return to Denver and aid him in his fight for life by testifying in his behalf. So far as is known, her whereabouts is still a mystery. The rumors that she is now in town cannot be verified, and the possibility of her returning to Denver, for the purpose of testifying in defense of the prisoner, is the one big puzzle to all those who have been following the case.

It has been reported that when Springer gave his wife all of the family jewels and $15,000 in cash as a final settlement after he had received his decree, he exacted a promise from her to the effect that she would never return to Denver. At the same time the district attorney released her from a subpoena for her appearance to the Von Phul trial so that any decision to come back to Denver and act as a witness will be governed entirely by her own feelings in the matter.

Intimate friends of Springer have hinted that for a long time he has been oppressed with the feeling that he is indirectly responsible for the ill-fated romance and its tragic ending. It was through him that Mrs. Springer first met Henwood and Von Phul, when he brought them into his home as dinner guests. Mrs. Springer was then known as the most beautiful woman in Denver and the two guests became infatuated with their fair hostess at first sight. The determination and nerve of both men had often been put to severe tests in the field of aerobatics, and these bull-dog traits urged the men into a secret rivalry for the favor of their friend's wife. This rivalry caused the longstanding friendship of Henwood and Von Phul to develop into a bitter hatred, ending in the fatal quarrel that cost two lives and may demand the taking of another before the ends of justice are satisfied.

Desertions in the United States army in 1911 amounted to only 2.88 per cent., a lower rate than in any other year for ninety years, except in 1898.

Hundreds of Richmond Citizens Can Tell You All About It.

Home endorsement, the public expression of Richmond people, should be evidence beyond dispute for every Richmond reader. Surely the experience of friends and neighbors, cheerfully given by them, will carry more weight than the utterances of strangers residing in faraway places. Read the following:

Dallas Cassel, 711 S. Eighth St., Richmond, Ind., says: "About fifteen years ago I suffered from kidney trouble, brought on by heavy lifting. I was weak, subject to dizzy headaches and I thought I would never be well again. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a supply at A. G. Luken & Co's Drug Store and after beginning their use, I felt like a different man. In July, 1906, I publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills and I can only add at this time that I have since had no need of a kidney remedy."

CINDERELLA.

The Palace theater has another feature for tomorrow and Wednesday, when Cinderella, the most expensive colored 3-reel moving picture ever photographed. The story is beyond doubt, the sweetest ever told and with Miss Mabel Taliaferro as the star in scenes of dramatic perfection. The costumes and settings for this masterpiece are imported and represent a fortune. The price of admission has not been advanced.

Murray.

The bill at the Murray this week is one that can safely be commended to the patrons as worth every cent of the money. It is composed of people who make good at every turn.

Italia and Passio open the show with their clever novelty offering introducing the world's greatest contortionist dog. This act is something entirely out of the ordinary and is an act of merit. Bland and Clayton have a good comedy singing and dancing act that scores well. They are both good singers and excellent dancers as well and their efforts are well appreciated.

One of the best features of the bill is the act furnished by Dave and Percie Martin "At Hickory Crossing," a little rural sketch. The comedy situations are well handled and the lines are bright and interesting. The sketch is much better than the average "rube" efforts seen of late in the variety houses and deserve attention.

The Crowder Richardson Company in their artistic musical act close the bill. Especial scenery is carried for the act and the costumes are magnificent and it is well termed "The Act Beautiful."

Motion pictures as usual conclude the performance.

CHINESE ART.

Materials the Painter Uses and His Methods of Work.

Chinese painting is very frequently described as calligraphic—that is to say, closely allied to or derived from handwriting. Inasmuch as Chinese handwriting is brush work of a high order, it follows that every Chinese who can write well has the making of a skilled mechanical artist in black and white. He has a fine delivery and flexibility of touch, so that, if he possesses any bent for transferring to paper representations of objects of nature or the imagination, he would be expected to produce work having a special character.

The nature of the material used, such as slightly absorbent paper and sized silk and thin water color, also leads to work having a special character. A member of any western race would have great difficulty in painting a picture on a bit of blotting paper with a Chinese pen filled with this watery pigment. These characters, however, give the Chinese painting its chief charm. Birds and flowers and landscapes and figures are put in once and for all with no possibility of subsequent touching up.

They are painted with unerring strokes of the brush, and the result is a clean, vigorous and living picture. The Chinese artist, as a rule, spends a long time thinking out his picture and then rapidly dashes it in.—Chicago News.

Tavern and Loan Office.

The time honored London tavern, the Castle, at Cowcross and Farringdon streets, enjoys the unique distinction of being also a fully licensed pledge shop. Any one may here negotiate a loan upon his personal belongings without being under the necessity of first calling for refreshments. This strange combination of business dates from the reign of George IV., who, after attending a cockfight at Hockley-in-the-Hole, applied to the landlord of the Castle for a temporary accommodation on the security of his watch and chain. By royal warrant a few days later he invested that obliging boniface with the right of advancing money on pledges, and from that time down to the present a pawnbroker's license has been annually granted to the Castle. This hostelry is mentioned once or twice by Dickens in his novels.—London Answers.

INVENTOR OF PHONE OBSERVES BIRTHDAY

(National News Association)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 4.—Many messages of congratulation have been received at the home of Alexander Graham Bell in anticipation of the birthday anniversary of the inventor of the telephone. Professor Bell was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, and was sixty-five years old Sunday. He made his first experiments with the telephone while residing in Brantford, Ont. The invention was placed on exhibition at the Philadelphia centennial exposition and a short time later the first practical line was put in operation between Boston and Salem. Professor Bell is one of the few great inventors who has lived to see the fruition of his invention and also reap the financial benefit of it. For a number of years the inventor has made Washington his winter residence. He has a summer home and laboratory in Nova Scotia, where he has conducted experiments with a view to perfecting the flying-machine.

Root and Herb Remedies

stand the test of time because they possess merit and though many years have passed since our American grandmothers commenced to make their annual collections of roots, herbs and barks, from which to prepare medicine to relieve different ailments science has failed to produce other remedies so dependable.

Many of these old recipes which our ancestors found so reliable have developed into proprietary medicines of world-wide reputation, such as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the most successful remedy for woman's ills the world has ever known, and tons of roots and herbs are used annually in making it.

RIDING THE BUZZARD.

The Ricebird Uses His Bulky Enemy as an Aeroplane.

People generally associate size and brute strength with victory, especially among the lower animals. Many times, however, this is far from being the case, especially in the bird kingdom. Among the rice fates of the Carolinas there abound at some seasons of the year tiny ricebirds, birds so small that it takes two dozen for a good meal, though bones and all are eaten.

The great buzzard is found circling over the fairs at all seasons. He dreads the time for the ricebird to come, for he is then nearly powerless to do so. It is a common sight to see one of these little birds fly up to a buzzard and, after dodging this way and that round the awkward bulk, finally alight well forward between the buzzard's wings on the back. Here the tiny passenger grabs a few feathers in his beak and holds on for grim life. After enjoying a ride for as long as he desires the little fellow hops off and is gone before Mr. Buzzard is well aware of it.

The peculiar part of the whole thing is that apparently the only purpose the ricebird has in getting on the back of the buzzard is to take a free ride. It puzzles every one who chances to see the little drama to find any other reason, yet the fact remains that it is a frequent occurrence and the little birds seem to enjoy it immensely.—New York Tribune.

INDIAN DEATH CUSTOMS.

Graves of the Hopi and the Hogenas of the Navajos.

The Hopi Indian believes that the souls of all deceased adults go to the Grand canyon. When a man dies a grave is dug. The nearest relative of the deceased carries the body to the grave, places it in a sitting posture facing the Grand canyon, erects a long pole between the legs, locks the dead man's fingers around it and fills the grave. To the top of the pole, protruding above the ground, he ties one end of a string and leads the other end in the direction of the Grand canyon. At the end of four days it is believed the soul leaves the body, climbs the pole and with the string to guide it goes to its eternal home in the canyon.

The Navajos, on the contrary, are very superstitious about handling dead bodies. They believe that the evil spirit that kills the person hovers around the hogan, as they call their lodge, awaiting other victims, and a hogan in which a death occurs is never occupied again. Navajo hogans are always built with the entrance facing the east. When a death occurs in one of them an opening is invariably made in the north side. Therefore when one sees a hogan with the north side knocked out he may be certain some one has died in it.—Dillon Wallace in Outing.

A MESSAGE TO WOMEN

A Patterson, N. J., young woman, Miss Elizabeth Bushloper, has written a message to the women of America that will be of great value to those who heed it. She says: "Every Spring for some years I have been debilitated, having general weakness and feeling tired and worn out all the time. This spring I determined I would fight it off with Vinol. Vinol has done all that was claimed for it. It has given me new strength and vigor, I can eat heartily and my sleep is light and refreshing. I wish every tired-out woman could know what great good Vinol could do her." Spring is the most trying time of year for most people, and it is well to know that Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron remedy without oil, is the most valuable spring medicine.

Its blood enriching and strength-creating effects are just what one needs, and as we will certainly give back your money if you are not satisfied with Vinol, you ought to get a bottle right away. Leo H. Fihe, Druggist, Richmond, Ind.

Drug Store Signs.

Every one has noticed the beautiful colors in the large glass jars that stand in the drug store windows, but every one does not know why drug stores use that sign. In the old days apothecaries and alchemists were the only druggists, and they made up their own nostrums, the composition of which was supposed to be a great secret. They used to leave their retorts and jars and stills and bottles in the window to impress upon the passerby the mystery and importance of their business. The modern drug store has no use for retorts and stills, all the processes being handled by the big chemical factories, but the large jars full of bright colored liquids are still left in the window, just as they were hundreds of years ago.—New York Sun.

Population by Race.

The population of the world by race is: Indo-Germanic (white), 550,000,000; Mongolian (yellow and brown), 630,000,000; Semitic (white), 65,000,000; Negro (black), 150,000,000; Malay (brown), 35,000,000; American Indian (red), 15,000,000. This latter figure includes every variety of the redman in all parts of the earth, the actual number of Indians in North America being much less than a million. The white race is increasing much faster than the others, owing probably to its superior intelligence and scientific knowledge of medicine and sanitation.—New York American.

LEE WON HIS LOVE.

A Federal Soldier's Change of Heart on Gettysburg Battlefield.

I was in the battle of Gettysburg, myself, and an incident occurred there which largely changed my views of the southern people. I had been the most bitter anti-southern man and fought and cursed the Confederacy desperately. I could see nothing good in any of them. The last day of the fight I was badly wounded. A ball shattered my left leg. I lay on the ground not far from Cemetery ridge, and as General Lee ordered his retreat he and his officers rode near me. As they came along I recognized him, although faint from exposure and right into my eyes, said, "My son, I looked Lee in the face and shouted as loud as I could, 'Hurrah for the Union!'"

The general heard me, looked, stopped his horse, dismounted and came toward me. I confess that I thought he meant to kill me. But as he came he looked down at me with such a sad expression upon his face that all fear left me, and I wondered what he was about. He extended his hand to me and, grasping it firmly and looking right into my eyes, said, "My son, I hope you will soon be well."

If I live a thousand years I shall never forget the expression of General Lee's face. There he was, defeated, retreating from a field that had cost him and his cause almost their last hope, and yet he stopped to say words like those to a wounded soldier of the opposition who had taunted him as he passed by. As soon as the general had left me I cried myself to sleep there upon the bloody ground.—Gamaliel Bradford, Jr., in Atlantic.

Vice President Sherman desires to maintain order in the senate and frequently calls down the body in general terms without smugling out any particular man. It often happens that when a dry and prosy speaker has the floor a group of senators will begin telling stories and make a great deal of confusion with their laughter. On one occasion a group was listening to Senator Taylor of Tennessee, and the mirth was rather uproarious. They paid no attention to the gavel of the vice president nor to the frowns of the speaker.

Finally Sherman sent a note to the group which read, "If that fellow who thinks he is making a speech is interfering with one of Bob Taylor's stories I shall call him to order."—Washington Star.

TEXAS CELEBRATES INDEPENDENCE DAY

(National News Association)

AUSTIN, Texas, March 4.—The seventy-sixth anniversary of the declaration of Texas independence was observed as a public holiday throughout the State today. In 1824 Mexico achieved her independence from Spain and established a republican government. Bustamente, the usurping governor of Texas, prohibited further immigration from the United States, fearing that the white settlers would not be dominated as were the Mexicans. Santa Anna, with whom the colonists sided, overturned the Constitution of 1824, and declared himself a dictator. The Texans continued their efforts for the observance of the Mexican Constitution, but, goaded by tyrannical oppression, held a convention at Washington on the Brazos. On March 2, 1836, this convention declared the independence of Texas and began the drafting of her Constitution. Gen. Sam Houston was re-elected commander-in-chief of the Texas armies and David G. Burnett was made president of the new republic.

While the seed used by the principal tomatoe growers in the vicinity of Los Mochis, state of Sinaloa, Mexico, is all bought from well known seed houses in the United States (about one thousand pounds having been imported during 1911), Consul Alexander V. Dye, of Nogales, reports that there is also raised a small, round, native tomato that is said to be very sweet.
