

SPEED AND GRAVEL WON'T MIX, WARNING GIVEN TO AUTOISTS

"Speed and gravel don't mix, any more than white mule in the human tank is a safe bet for the control of the gas in the tank," declares a recent safety bulletin issued by the Hoosier State Auto association.

"Continual hammering on this subject of fresh gravel on the highways and the necessity for caution on the part of motor car drivers has had little apparent results in the elimination of highway accidents," the bulletin continues. "Almost every day we read in the papers of serious or perhaps fatal accidents in which the blame is placed on fresh gravel in the roadway. As a result it appears there is state-wide indignation over the gravel that interferes with the airplane speed of the speed lustful drivers."

The Gravel Case

"The Hoosier State Auto association seeks to advance the best interests of all automobile owners whether they are assisting in our work or not," the bulletin continues. "In this matter of gravel it is believed that automobile owners fail to realize the absolute necessity of getting more material on the roadways of the state. The only way to get gravel on the roads is to put it on and do as good a job of spreading as possible. When that is done it is a case of motor vehicles driving through it to pack it down, for the cost of steam rolling the hundreds of miles of fresh material would be prohibitive."

"Therefore, isn't it just as well for all of us to try and make the best of an unpleasant situation and more particularly cut down on our road speed whenever fresh gravel comes in sight? Thirty miles an hour is too fast for loose gravel. Anything is apt to happen at any second. Even 15 miles an hour and second gear at that is sometimes too fast if the gravel is real loose or heavy."

Must Use Discretion.

"The discretion that the old-time motto makers declared was the better part of valor should be applied by automobile drivers at this season. Discretion and good judgment in proceeding slowly will avert serious and fatal accidents. The mounting list of road-way tragedies in Indiana may well be charged to poor judgment on the part of drivers who hit loose gravel without materially lessening the speed of the vehicle."

"We have suggested that road supervisors erect a red flag or other warning device some distance away from freshly applied gravel. This especially would be effective at curves. Some of the counties are acting on this suggestion and it is urged that all others should do so. Already suits are being contemplated against certain counties because of fatalities due, it is alleged, to fresh gravel."

"There is just one good rule: Go slow, play safe, take no chances and you will get there all in one piece."
