IN MEMORIAM

MEMORIAL In tribute to Mildred Shade, who is spending her first birthday in Heaven; aged 15 years, May 26th:

Gone from the home and the friends, Missed from the circle so dear, Sadly we gather without thee, Yet feel thy presence is near.

In the words that the pen hath spoken, Ere thy hands they were folded to rest, Ere the heart was hushed into silence Ere the Father had whispered "Thy heat."

Then weave we a garland of flowers Bright flowers that never shall decay To crown the dear one's sweet memory.

"Till we meet her just over the way, One by one our dear hand is taken And sadly we weep o'er them all; With a pang for the home that is broken.

Where sorrow falls down like pall, But the merciful death angel called And the spirit must ever obey; 'Tis the diamond of light that he takes And leaves but the casket of clay. But over the river the dark mystic river.

He bears the burden we love, May we meet her in heaven above, Her cherry smile and kindly ways Are pleasant to recall.

She had a kindly word for each And died beloved by all. Parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Shade, Brother Edward. 5-26

QUESTION WAS IT MIKE OR MIKE?

"Have you noticed the worried look on the face of Ed Bohling of late?" inquired one of his friends yesterday. "Well, I'll tell you what it is, Ed.

you see, is perplexed. Down at Ed's house, 1965 South Hohman street, they had two canary birds. Ed called 'em Mike and Ike on account of the similarity of expression and habits, as it were. Friday afternoon Mrs. Bohling removed the water cup from the wicker cage of one of the birds. A fairly large hole was left in the cage which fact the bird noted. He flew from the hole, through the open kitchen door, and into the wide world. Mrs. Bohling hung the other bird's cage beneath a tree out in the yard. The freed canary lingered around for parts unknown. Seems he hung over the Bohling homestead. There is a chance that someone will pick him up of course because when these songsters get cold or hungry they flutter to human habitations. Mrs. Bohling is offering a reward for the return of the bird.

"That's too bad, but what is Ed worrying about?"

"Well, y'see, he's trying to figure out which it was that flew away, Mike or Ike."
