

Tennessee Governor Is Again Enjoined

(INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE)
NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 23.—Those opposing ratification of the Tennessee amendment before the Tennessee legislature, further delayed today official certification of the senate and house's action on the resolution when a second injunction was issued by Judge E. F. Langford restraining John Green, clerk of the house of representatives, and Wm. Carter, clerk of the senate, from signing or certifying to the passage of the measure.

The petition upon which the injunction was granted, was filed as an amended and supplemental bill to the original bill filed Saturday enjoining Governor A. H. Roberts, Secretary of State Ike B. Stevens and the speakers of both houses from taking any official action towards proclaiming the passage of the resolution.

It was alleged that notwithstanding the fact that no quorum was present when the house acted upon the resolution Saturday, Clark Green had been ordered to transmit the resolution to the clerk of the senate as if there had been valid reconsideration.

The injunction will be argued before Chancellor James B. Brienman at a date not yet announced.

Governor Roberts has issued a statement that he will countenance no act intended to nullify the ratification and the will of the majority, either by flight and abandonment of official duty upon the part of members or otherwise.

The governor states that he will exercise and bring to bear all the legal and legitimate powers of the office of governor to consummate in an orderly and legal manner the certification of the action of the legislature to the proper federal authorities.

Suffrage leaders state that they are convinced that the resolution has been ratified so far as this legislature is concerned and most of the visiting suffrage workers have returned to their homes. The anti's, however, maintain that the refusal to reconsider the resolution by the house at its session Saturday was illegal because the house was not legally and constitutionally organized to transact business.

The thirty-eight members of the house, who went to Doacur, Ala., in order to break a quorum and thereby prevent action on the measure, have announced their determination to remain out of the state until the special session of the legislature is declared finally adjourned.

BOOTLEGGER KILLED
NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The wife of F. P. Eckert, the young bootlegger and automobile thief, who was found shot dead in a stolen automobile on Staten Island, has given police information, it was learned today, which may solve the mysterious murder.

Mrs. Eckert believes her husband was assassinated by accomplices who feared they might be implicated in evidence Eckert might give the authorities. Eckert had just been released from the toms before the murder.

Eckert, the police said, was involved in wholesale evasion of the prohibition law and the men who worked with him were determined they should not be caught in the federal enforcement net.

WHITING HONORS HER DEAD HERO

team, and was later identified with the Owl club's famous team. He was also a graduate of the Chicago Technical College and was employed at the S. O. previous to his entrance into the army on September 17, 1917. He was united in marriage to Miss Blanche Butcher of Whiting at Camp Taylor, Ky., on November 24, 1917, he leaving for overseas duty in May, 1918, where he was assigned to duty as a part of the famous Third division of the Second Army Corp., with whom he saw hard service. The armistice having been signed it was while on a march to the point of embarkation that he contracted pneumonia and was taken to a French hospital, where in the evening hour of December 2, 1918, he passed away. Simple, but truly military services were held for him and he was laid to rest in a little cemetery not far from the battle front where but a few weeks before he had endured without fear the horror and dangers of war.

The government in complying with the requests of the nearest kin, are sending home from foreign fields the remains of the hero, Mrs. Whiting was made happy by the return home of her heroic son, and the tribute paid in memory of the departed by the American Legion and Whiting as a whole, will never be erased from the minds of the people since it was a demonstration of the gratitude we feel to those who gave their lives that we may enjoy freedom from subduity.

The American Legion took full charge of the funeral which was held on Saturday, the spirit of patriotism in the military principles being beautiful. The Legion members gathered at the community house from where over one hundred American Legionnaires marched to the Grand home, 401 Sheridan ave. Here a short service was held following which the remains were taken to the Congregational church. The pall bearers were Frank Duggan, A. Exton, Porter, Llewellyn Griffith, Thomas McBride, Chas. Patterson and James Bartuska. The band provided the American Legion escort in the line of march to the church.

At the church she flag draped casket was removed while the firing squad presented arms and the band played "America." The church service rendered with the American Legion tribute to the departed by Oscar A. Ahlgren, followed by a scripture reading and prayer by the pastor, Rev. Charles T. Trueblood. A vocal solo, "No Night There" was rendered by Miss Esperance Schlechty, a quartet's rendering was numbers. Mrs. Walter Smith presided at the pipe organ. A beautiful sermon was preached by Rev. Trueblood, the firing squad standing guard throughout the service. As the casket was removed to the hearse the firing squad again presented arms and the band played the national anthem. The procession then moved eastward to Cleveland avenue, where the band and Legion found machines in waiting to convey them to Oak Hill cemetery. At the gate the escorts again alighted from the machines and marched to the grave, where the American Legion service was conducted, the firing squad pouring the three volleys over the grave.

Bien, Madame, "noblesse oblige," and besides, who could resist the appeal of being so chic in suits and my styles, and you ask for an outfit—very well, here is the dress itself.

You are quite right in saying that the latitude is not large in this material. The natural temptation of the designers is the "jackety things" you talk about, the eternal flous that are done to death in suits and so unsuitable to most. For what the crowd wears is so rarely good taste. Of course there is an excuse, for linen hardly "drapes"; it is the bane of a modiste's mood, for there is no give nor grace to it. So, to give you what you ask, a truly captivating frock, we must use a bit more than ordinary ingenuity.

I have used rose-pink linen combined with white voile, the latter daintily embroidered in double crescents. Linen forms the skirt and the bottom of the one-blowse, as well as the collar, cuffs and front and back panels of the waist. You will notice I have used hemstitching quite generously where the two materials join. The belt I have made quite narrow, of linen, finishing it in the back with a creaser twice as wide as of tucking at the shoulders is the only other detail besides the embroidery.

Every woman has her color—the one she just knows she looks best in, so I am a bit surprised this lady did not mention her preference. If it be not the pink I have used, the same frock looks equally well in almost any shade combined with white voile, or it would be stunning in all-white with white embroidery, or white linen and voile with just the embroidery in color.

The church service rendered with the American Legion tribute to the departed by Oscar A. Ahlgren, followed by a scripture reading and prayer by the pastor, Rev. Charles T. Trueblood. A vocal solo, "No Night There" was rendered by Miss Esperance Schlechty, a quartet's rendering was numbers. Mrs. Walter Smith presided at the pipe organ. A beautiful sermon was preached by Rev. Trueblood, the firing squad standing guard throughout the service. As the casket was removed to the hearse the firing squad again presented arms and the band played the national anthem.

The procession then moved eastward to Cleveland avenue, where the band and Legion found machines in waiting to convey them to Oak Hill cemetery. At the gate the escorts again alighted from the machines and marched to the grave, where the American Legion service was conducted, the firing squad pouring the three volleys over the grave.
