[From the Atlantic Monthly.] The Crooked Footpath.

Ah, here it is! the sliding rail That marks the old remembered spot-The gap that struck our schoolboy trail,-The crooked path across the lot.

It left the road by school and church, A pencilled shadow, nothing more, That parted from the silver birch And ended at the farmhouse door.

No line or compass traced its plan; With frequent bends to left or right, In aimless, wayward curves it ran, But always kept the door in sight.

The gabled porch, with woodbine green-The broken millstone at the sill-Though many a rod might stretch between The truant child could see them still.

No rocks across the pathway lie,-No fallen trunk is o'er it thrown ,--And yet it winds, we know not why,

And turns as if for tree or stone. Perhaps some lover trod the way With shaking knees and leaping heart-

And so it often runs astray With sinuous sweep or sudden start. Or one, perchance, with clouded brain From some unholy banquet reeled,-And since, our devious steps maintain

His track across the trodden field. Nay, deem not thus, -no earth born will Could ever trace a faultless line; Our truest steps are human still,— To walk answerving were divine!

Truants from love, we dream of wrath;-Oh, rather let us trust the more! Through all the wanderings of the path, We still can see our Father's door!

A True Brother. You're rich, and yet you are not proud; You are not selfish, hard, or vain; You look upon the common crowd With sympathy, and not disdain; You'd travel far to share your Gold With humble sorrow unconsoled; You'd raise the orphan from the dust, And help the sad and widowed mother; Give me your hand-you shall-you must Hove you as a brother.

You're poor, and yet you do not scorn Or hate the wealthy for their wealth; You toil contented night and morn, And prize the gift of strength and health You'd share your little with a friend, And what you cannot give you'd lend; You take humanity on trust, And see more merit in another; Give me your hand-you shall-you must-Llove you as a brother.

And what care I how rich you be? I love you if your thoughts are pure What signifies your poverty, If you can struggle and endure? 'Tis not the birds that make the spring. Tis not the crown that makes the kingyou are wise, and good, and just, You'veriches better than all other; Give me your hand-you shall-you must-I love you as a brother.

An Impatient Mother.

[From Arthur's Home Magazine.] Two children, a boy and a girl, were playing happily together, and had been playing in the most perfect harmony for over an honr. The pleasure of one seemed to be the pleasure of the other. If Amy suggested some new amusement, John agreed in cheerful good humor; and it was the same with Amv,
