[From a Special Correspondent.]
A Trip to Conference.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 15th, 1863.

Washington, in Davies county, the seat of Conference for the present year, is a town of perhaps one thousand inhabitants. I see, in wandering around the town, that there are a few genteel residences. They look all the finer by being in contrast with surrounding rickety, rat-infested shells—old frame and log houses, weather-boarded, so that their last days appear their best.

The Catholic Church is one of the oldest and most imposing buildings, being somewhat better in outward appearance than the Locust street Methodist Church in Evansville.

The Cumberland and Presbyterian Churches present a tidy and inviting appearance.

The Baptists have also a pleasant house of worship.

The Methodist Church is a new edifice, with surroundings incomplete, but progressing rapidly—the last nail will be driven, I think, before sun-down. It is also a neat and inviting place, and sufficiently commodious for the Church and congregation. Rev. J. Laverty has labored among them during the past year, with considerable success and acceptability.

Just upon the hill there stands a brick edifice, two stories high, and 100 feet in length, which I take to be a Seminary. It is too large for a jail, unless there be a great many rascals in this county, which, I believe, has not this reputation. And, though war is in the land, I can not think it is one of those military bastilles seen so frequently of late by the troubled dreams of Vallandigham. It must be the school house. May honored men—legislators, governors, and some good Lincoln President—yet come out of its doors.

In the neighborhood of this seat of learning, are located the finest residences of the town, which, upon survey, I find to be handsomer than I had supposed were to be found here.

That of Matthew L. Brett, our present worthy Treasurer of State, seems arranged with much convenience and taste, and the stranger would guess at once something of the character of the occupants of this mansion. Just opposite is the residence of Col. Van Trees, all embowered, and, as I think of it now, full of flowers and singing birds—at least, I saw one at the gate, and heard the voice of another in the house. If there is not a happy household here external things are very deceptive. Near at hand is the residence of his honor, Judge Burke, which presents also an attractive and beautiful appearance, and at the corner of Clements. This position is naturally the best in the town, airy and inviting, and if I was going to take a photograph of the place, I should want his little boy, about 12 years old, just as I saw him when passing, sitting in the door, all akim bow, with a huge cigar in his mouth. Still further on is the residence of Col. T. B. Graham, said to be the finest in the county. As it presents itself to the eye it is a large brick building, four square, two stories high, a great many windows with deep green shades, and for size equals the residence of Mrs. Judge Foster, of Evansville, or that of Willard Carpenter.

But let us return and look at something else in this Washington. There are sixteen dry goods establishments to supply the town and country. There are twelve grog-shops, sipping 24 hours every day. I had heard of buttermilk in this section. I fear there may be some truth in it, for certain phenomena are always found in a locality where one certain other thing is found; and bad whisky, bad politics, bad loyalty and spurious patriotism, ought to be kept together, if possible. There is also a large Irish Catholic element, and these evils are not to be attributed to this fact, as they are universally known to be beyond suspicion.

There are three hotels de visite in the place. If we are to judge from appearances, the Hyatt House is the hotel of the place, and I guess it is. The Union House, I am informed, is what it purports to be—something I feared might not be the case when I looked upon the sign, for now all is not gold that glitters. I have not the name of the other, but will call it the Ingersoll House. Whether it is a grog-shop or a respectable tavern, or a first-class hotel, with full tables and clean beds, I cannot say, as I never saw nor heard. The school-house on the hill has a No. 1 school—and the number of inhabitants of the place is 2,000 instead of 1,000, as I supposed, and Mr. Hyatt, duly qualified, declares and affirms that there is more shipping done here than from any other town between Cincinnati and St. Louis. Two hardware stores, two drug stores, six wagon shops, and one foundry, complete my present reckoning of the place, with the exception that there are three fine flouring mills, declared by Hyatt to have the finest reputation of any in the State. The Igleheart brothers must settle this question, and not allow me or my readers to be imposed upon in this question.

I must now close my picture of Washington. The cars have arrived from both ways at once, and all the preachers are now out on the platforms, and such a shaking of hands and rattling of dry bones you never did see.

I will see you again to-morrow—so good day.

INDEPENDENT.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16, 1863.
The Conference convened at 8 o'clock, and I hasten to write up briefly the proceedings of the first day's session, and get them before your readers in to-morrow morning's issue.

The venerable Bishop Morris, at present the Senior Bishop of the church, came promptly to the hour, and after a silent prayer, arose and read a chapter—the 4th of 2d Corinthians—very impressively, and then announced the hymn, the first stanza of which is—

Jesus, the name, high over all,
In hell, or earth, or sky;
As angels and men before it fall,
And devils fear and fly.

None but those who have witnessed such a scene can fully realize the impressiveness of more than an hundred ministers joining in singing such a hymn under such circumstances.

The prayer of the Bishop would naturally be impressive also under such circumstances—but it was so appropriate, so full ofunction and faith—that our hearts were secured at the gates of heaven when he closed.

The old Secretaries were re-elected. The usual committees were appointed, each composed of a larger number than usual. The only unusual committee was one on the state of the country—similar to the one of last year.

One of the earliest moves made after the session was opened was a resolution by Rev. James Hill, requesting the trustees of the church to float the flag of the Union over the church during the session of the Conference, to show that we are patriots as well as christians.

Rev. H. B. Hibbin was elected Reporter of the Conference, proceedings for the Western Christian Advocate.

Presently in the course of the proceedings, a very important personage walked down the aisle going towards the Bishop for the purpose of receiving an introduction to the Conference. A deep silence reigned for about sixty seconds, when the Bishop slowly announced: Brethren, I introduce to you Brother Hitchcock, our Book Agent at Cincinnati. All rose up most respectfully, but I expect if one could have looked round he might have seen every man with his hands in his pockets—for that was the man that was after their money.

An interesting report was presented by the visitors of the condition and prosperity of the Indiana Asbury University. It is more than holding its own during the present times.

Reports were also presented from the Western Book Concern. The chartered fund this year yields $400 for the support of the widows and orphans of the Conference.

A committee was also appointed on the circulation of a sound and interesting literature among the soldiers.

Before making further report, I ought to make an additional remark relative to the $400 from the chartered fund. Since the division of the Church and the erection of that rebellious organization, the M. E. Church South, the proceeds of the chartered fund have been checked, and this is the first instance for years where a fund from that source has been announced to the Conference.

The Bishop manifests considerable tact in the management of business, and by a single stroke this morning enabled us to gain two hours' time, so that we are now upon the roll call excepting about fifteen, answered to their names. Among the missing ones is Rev. L. M. Walters, of your city, who, we fear, is yet dangerously ill, and will not be able to greet his brethren at the present Conference. Three others also will never again answer to their names called upon earth, for the Master has called them to his presence above.

During the session of the Conference this morning various incidental matters were up, many of which had an eye towards the General Conference, which convenes next May in Philadelphia. The election of delegates comes off to-morrow morning. Four are to be chosen. While the motion to go into the election at the above said time was pending, Rev. W. C. Smith made a speech upon some resolutions he introduced against Lay Delegation. No one answered him, and they passed without further consideration. They also looked toward Philadelphia.

There were no distinguished strangers present this morning, excepting Rev. Mr. Forbes, of a sister Conference in Indiana.

We have had this morning a most delightful and copious shower. Nature don't laugh, but is trying right hard, I have no doubt, for the little twigs and leaves are all trembling upon their branches.

The Bishop and his cabinet commence putting down the appointments this afternoon. Not only the preachers but the Methodist of the Conference, and many beside are interested in that putting down. May wisdom help them.

INTERMIT.

Battle Flags.

A letter from Gen. Rosecrans' army says: "I have never seen the fact published that this army has adopted a system of battle flags to distinguish the various subdivisions of the army from each other, not only during an engagement, but also in camp. The corps, division, brigade and the arm of service, can be detected instantly from these flags, by one conversant with their distinctions. The color of the flag denotes the corps, the number of the stars on it the division, and the figure in the star the brigade. The 14th army corps (Thomas) has a bright blue flag; the 20th corps (McCook) bright red; the 21st corps (Crittenden) a flag with three horizontal bars, white, red and blue. On these colors for a field the number of the division is inscribed in white or black stars, and that of the brigade by a figure in the star, of opposite color.

"Each battery has a small flag, corps colors, with letters and numbers of the battery inscribed thereon in black; thus, "B. 1st Ohio."

"The cavalry divisions have each a bright red, white and blue flag, colors, and black stars.

"The engineer corps has a white and blue flag, blue uppermost, and running horizontally.

"The hospitals and ambulance depots have a light yellow flag for hospitals and principal ambulance depots on the field of battle. Subsistence depots and store houses have a plain light green flag, three feet square, and quartermasters' depots the same with the inscription, "Q. M. D." in large white letters.

The reserve corps, recently formed and now under command of General Gordon Granger, has a white, red and blue flag, bars running diagonally, the division number indicated by white crescents.

The headquarters of the commanding general are indicated by some additional emblem of different arrangement. Gen. Rosecrans' headquarters are marked by the national flag, six feet by five, with golden stars below the stars, two feet from tip to tip. For corps commanders, the color of their corps flag, fringed, with black eagle in the centre, with number of corps in black on white field. Division commanders have corps flags with black stars; brigade commanders same with white stars. The regular brigade in Rosecrans' division have golden stars, instead of white, to designate their brigade.

General headquarters, ordnance department, has a bright green flag, with two crossed cannons in white, with "U. S. Ordnance Department" in black, and a crimson streamer above the flag with same inscription.

This order was issued near the first of May, and has been fully carried into execution. The system has many advantages on the field of battle. It enables the commanding general to manipulate his men with great exactness, no matter how many changes may occur in the original formation of his lines.
