

More Physical and Mental Wrecks

ARE CAUSED BY CATARRH OF THE NOSE, THROAT, STOMACH, BRONCHIAL TUBES AND LIVER, THAN BY ANY OTHER DISEASE.

Catarrh of any part of the body is at first a Local Disease that has a tendency to get well itself. In most cases it becomes chronic, but can be quickly cured. Later on tissue changes take place, especially in the nose and throat. These tissue changes consist of granulations, ulcerations, and hypertrophies (thickening) of the mucous membranes. Polyp often forms from these diseased surfaces, causing nose to stop up at times. In children Adenoids form, giving the voice a nasal twang.

A cure can be effected in all these cases by removing the adenoids, Polyp, Granulating Tissues and Hypertrophies, and in no other way. No amount of treatment will cure until these defects have been remedied. Our method of removing new growths and restoring diseased membranes to health is both harmless and painless. Anyone suffering from above forms of Catarrh may have some of these symptoms:

Drooping of mucus in throat; hawking and spitting; stopping up of one or both nostrils; loss of smell or taste; ringing noises in ears; partial loss of hearing; tainted breath; sneezing, snoring, scabs or crusts in nose; pain over eyes, neuralgic headaches, shortness of breath. At night these poisonous discharges run into the bronchial tubes or pass into the stomach and are absorbed by the blood. This drain going on month after month finally saps the vitality of the most robust constitutions.

If you have catarrh don't wait until your health and vitality are destroyed, or extensive ulcerations of the bony structures cause horrible deformities, or your hearing is destroyed. On blood and local treatment cures Catarrh. There is absolutely no question about it. That is why we are treating more cases of catarrh than all other specialists in this city combined.

Do you know that doctors in common and many so-called specialists fail to cure catarrh because they have had no training along these lines and have not the necessary appliances to give the proper treatment. In selecting a physician investigate his record. It is not the long years of experience that counts. It is the long years of preparation he has made. Don't take any man's word for it. Just look up his college, hospital and post graduate courses.

We are giving Free Examinations including X-Ray Examinations in all cases of Catarrh and Chronic Diseases for the next thirty days.

WILL RAISE $100,000

Iowa City Commercial Club Will Begin Campaign for Interurban Funds.

Iowa City, June 2.—(Special.)—The Iowa City commercial club will soon begin a canvass of the city to secure $100,000 with which to purchase stock in the proposed Iowa City-Ottumwa Interurban Railway Co. It is believed here that Ottumwa will duplicate this and thus secure the building of the line. The bond issue will cover nearly $3,000,000 necessary to finance the road. New York and London capitalists will float the venture.

Nothing definite in the matter of raising interurban funds has been devised by the boosters of the Iowa City-Ottumwa line in this city, although some action is expected to be taken within the next few days.

PROJECT GIVEN BACKING.

Residents of Denison, Iowa, and the Farmers Along Sioux City & Eastbound Enthusiastic.

Sioux City, June 2.—Meetings will be held by officers of the Sioux City & Eastern Track company at Battle Creek, Ia., on June 8, and at Denison on June 10, at which the financial and construction plans of the proposed interurban will be presented to the people of these towns. Secretary W. L. Harding, President A. H. Tennis and General Agent W. H. Foss were in Denison recently and found the people there enthusiastic for the building of a road, and they are convinced that Denison will subscribe liberally to the stock issue when that stage of the proceedings is reached. On their trip to Denison the officers interviewed prominent farmers along the route freely and are much pleased with the attitude taken by the farmers toward the proposition.

CORWIN TOLBERT DEAD.

Former Well Known Resident of Oskaloosa Passed Away in Hospital.

Oskaloosa, June 2.—The funeral of Corwin L. Tolbert, whose death took place in a hospital at Rochester, Minn., Monday, was held yesterday afternoon from St. James Episcopal church. The deceased is well known at Oskaloosa and was formerly connected with one of the dry goods houses of the city. For a number of years he was employed as window trimmer at the Abraham dry goods store. From Oskaloosa he went to Iowa City, where he opened and operated a lunch stand. From Iowa City he went to Minneapolis, where he opened and operated a news and cigar stand in one of the large hotels of the city. He remained at this place until it was necessary to take him to a Rochester hospital.

The lid is on at Pella. Des Moines, June 2.—The Rev. W. C. Barber, superintendent of the Iowa Anti-Saloon league, received notice yesterday that the league has won in its fight against the saloons at Pella. Judge Nichols of Perry yesterday handed down a decision which will have the effect of closing the saloons now in operation at Pella. The hearing on the league's complaint, claiming that the petition of consent was defective and insufficient, was held at Knoxville, and the decision was reached yesterday.

THE EVENING STORY

ON MEMORIAL DAY.

BY STACY E. BAKER.

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.

Down the broad pike leading into Centerville, came, all arrayed in rusty blue, the bent, wizened figure of a little old man. An old-fashioned soldier's cap was perched jauntily on his head, and from beneath this fell a few scattering locks of gray. The aged veteran leaned heavily on his cane. Time had robbed Ezra Hathaway of much of his endurance.

The cars of the old warrior were no longer keen, and he did not hear the honk-honk of a motor behind him. The touring car that swept around the sharp curve thrust him aside so roughly and suddenly that he was thrown unconscious to the ditch at the side of the road.

With barely a perceptible swerve, the great machine kept to its mad way. The knocking down of the old soldier was but an irritating incident to the pleasures of a record-breaking trip. The chauffeur was not one to flout the number of his car in the face of a victim.

Fred Corliss, in his wheezy little runabout, came in the wake of the flier to the inert mass of mangled blue by the roadside.

Ezra Hathaway, a thin stream trickling from his temple, roused himself and suddenly made a wavering attempt to regain his feet. His gaunt frame, balanced precariously on two tottery and emaciated legs, showed signs of a sudden collapse as Corliss came to a sudden stop and leaped to the old man's assistance.

"Why, Uncle Ezra!" he exclaimed, "what's the matter?"

"Uncle Ezra Hathaway, as he was familiarly known to all residents of Centerville, was a popular favorite.

"Who'd a thought," came from the recovering octogenarian, testily, "that I'd a lived to come through th' horrors an' evils of war to be downed at last by one of them pesky benzine buggies?"

Young Corliss gave a relieved laugh. With his own handkerchief he carefully stanching the blood emanating from a slight cut in the old man's forehead and assisted the reluctant veteran toward his own little machine.

"I'm all right, Fred," protested the injured man. "No use in my botherin' you to carry me into town."

But Corliss, a tall youth with a determined eye and resolute jaw, persisted.

Uncle Ezra lived some miles out of Centerville. On Memorial day he invariably arrayed himself in a well-worn suit of blue, and not only walked into town, but marched with the comrades of his post to the little cemetery a half mile beyond. This, as the years rolled on, was becoming more and more difficult to the old soldier, but he never acknowledged the encroaching infirmities of old age—even to himself.

"You shouldn't do this," remonstrated Corliss, sending himself beside the old gentleman and starting the machine. "There is no sense in it. You have horses and a buggy, and the walk is too much for you—let alone the liability of accidents. The roads are not what they were ten years ago. These touring cars keep a pedestrian's life in danger, unless his sense of hearing is wonderfully acute."

"Huh," snorted Uncle Ezra. "I see myself riding into town after walkin' it all these years."

The old man's seamed face was strangely pale. It was evident that the accident had jarred him more than his resolute old lips would acknowledge.

In front of the Horton domicile, just skirting the town, Uncle Ezra succumbed to a sudden fainting spell, and crumpled against his companion with closed eyes and pallid countenance.

This was doubly unfortunate. The Hortons were the last people in the world of whom Corliss cared to ask favors. Since the engagement between vivacious Dolly Horton and Frel had been broken off by mutual consent—an engagement planned in the infancy of the two by their parents—the youth had felt a strange sense of aggrievance, although, previous to this, he had believed that his future was spoiled by this pre-arranged match.

No one could have cause to complain of a lack of charms in the young woman in question. This was evident as she came tripping to the door in response to Horton's knock.

The girl was as pretty as a budding rose in June. Her eyes were wells of twinkling sunshine, and even now they beamed mischievously as they fell upon the broad shouldered youth before her.

"You!" she said, and the careless laugh in her voice was softened by the vivid touch of red dotting her cheeks.

"Yes, it is I," he answered shortly. His proud head alert and his strong jaw thrust out at a more determined angle. "I am not here, however, to call"—he could not resist the thrust—"but to ask a favor. Uncle Ezra Hathaway has met with an accident, and seems to be seriously hurt—how seriously I don't know. He fell into a faint, or stupor, just as we were opposite this house, and so I must ask you to care for him while I go for a doctor."

As the explanation progressed, the expression on the girl's face underwent a change. The coquetry died from her eyes to give a chance to a womanly look of grave concern.

"Father!" she called suddenly, "Come here."

An elderly man came leisurely out of the house, and in a second, the situation was made clear to him. The unconscious veteran was lifted carefully from the runabout and taken into the house. From afar came the stirring rhythm of drum and fife. The comrades of the old man were gathering to do honor to their hero-dead.

MINISTER GETS ANGRY.

Hanover Congregation Ties Tobacco Tags to Coat Tail of Offending Preacher.

Galva, Ia., June 2.—The usual quiet of the large German Lutheran congregation of Hanover received a rude religious shock while the regular minister, Rev. Henry Wehking, was preaching in taking Foley Kidney Pills. Mr. Wehking's regular flock, roughly speaking, "had fied the coop" and taken up with the adventist belief. This led the reverend gentleman to announce that he would explain the difference of the two creeds at a recent service. This he was in the act of doing, when, unannounced, a tall, lank individual having the appearance of a patent medicine fiend, arose in the congregation and called a halt in the proceedings. He accused the minister of "falsifying the records," so to speak, and a general pandemonium ensued. Rev. Mr. Wehking ordered the members of his flock to fire out the intruder, which was done in no gentle manner. After the service the two ministers met in the public highway and held a wordy religious war. The local minister, surrounded by his congregation, got rather the best of the argument. The disturbing gentleman came out of the affray looking a little the worse from the effects of the encounter. His hat was lost and tobacco tags and sacks were tied to his coattail. Legal proceedings are threatened by both parties in the affair.

Glad to Recommend Them

the brain of Corliss was a mad jumble of riotous thoughts, all thinly veiling the keen sorrow he felt at Uncle Ezra's predicament. It had suddenly come to him—and with startling emphasis—that this fluffy, furbelowed girl with the cold in her hair was vitally essential to his future happiness. His black eyes took unto themselves a tender light hitherto associated with thoughts of the dead, but his knowledge of her would not allow him to believe that she would come back to him without a struggle. In fact, he was sure that she did not love him at all. It was she who had suggested that the lifelong engagement be broken.

The doctor, a fussy little person with straggly, mutton-chop whiskers, steel-bowed glasses and a double chin, hurriedly entered the machine and hurriedly entered the machine and hurriedly entered the machine and hurriedly entered the machine.

"He is badly shaken up," diagnosed the little doctor. "He wants rest and quiet, otherwise there is nothing more serious the matter with him. His fractures, nor anything in the nature of bruised bones. However, he must not be moved for several days."

"An" to think," complained the octogenarian, who had now recovered consciousness, "that, after all this trouble I'm a-goin' to miss the doins' today for the first time since the war."

"Don't feel bad," soothed Dolly, a tender note in her voice, as she placed the cold soft little hand on the brow of the old soldier. He was now bed at the Horton home.

Corliss gazed at the girl wistfully. Every moment it was being brought home to him that he had lost a jewel.

"Darn such luck!" grumbled the disconcerted Uncle Ezra.

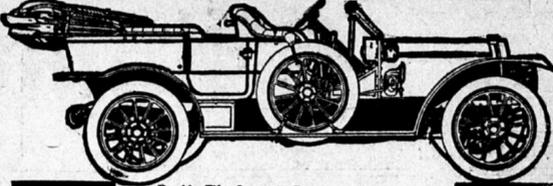

The eyes of the repentant lover sped a telegraphic message to the brain of the maid and, responding to this, she turned her head and looked and him an—blushed.

On the broad veranda, as the young man was taking his leave, he suddenly turned to the pretty girl who had accompanied him.

"Must the engagement remain broken?" he asked plaintively.

"Why"—I thought you wished it so," she replied, eyes cast down, "but if you don't, why—of—of—of—"

To the ears of the jubilant Corliss, speeding homeward some moments later, came the stirring notes of "The Girl I Left Behind Me." The veterans were coming back.
